JOHNSTONE KILLED BY AEROPLANE FALL

Height Record Holder Tried Daring Spiral Dip, Damaged Wing Crumpled and Failed.

PLUNGED 500 FEET DOWN

Unseated by Tilt, He Struggled to Last to Regain Control—Crowd Fought for Souvenirs Over Crushed Body.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 17.—Ralph Johnstone, the airman, who at the recent International aviation meet at Belmont Park, New York, won the world's record—9,714 feet—for altitude in an aeroplane, was instantly killed here to-day. He was attempting a swooping spiral dip when one of the wings of his machine seemed to crumple up, the biplane tilted on its beam ends, and shot through 500 feet to the earth, with the airman struggling in the tangle of the guy wires to regain control.

Man and machine fell within the inclosure of the Overland Park aviation field, and when the rush of spectators reached the spot Johnstone's body lay beneath the engine of the biplane, with the white planes that had failed him wrapped about it like a shroud. Nearly every bone in his body was broken.

The fatal flight was the second Johnstone had made this afternoon. In the first flight, when he was in the air with Hoxsey and Brookins, he had gone through his usual programme of dips and glides with the machine apparently under perfect control. Then Johnstone rose again, and after a few circuits of the course to gain height he headed toward the foot hills.

Damaged Wing Tip Failed.

Still ascending, he swept back in a big circle, and when he reached the north end of the inclosure he started a spiral glide. He was then at an altitude of about 800 feet. With his planes tilted at an angle which seemed almost 90 degrees he swooped down in a narrow circle, the aeroplane seeming to turn almost in its own length. As he started the second circle the middle spur which braces the left side of the lower plane gave way, and the wing tips of both upper and lower planes folded up as though they had been hinged. Yesterday in alighting Johnstone had broken that very left wing tip against a fence. For a second now the airman attempted to right the plane by warping the other wing tip. Then the horrified spectators saw the plane swerve like a wounded bird and plunge straight toward the earth.

Johnstone, thrown from his seat as the nose of the planes swung downward, caught on one of the wire stays between the plans and grasped one of the wooden braces of the upper plane with both hands. Then, working with hands and feet, he fought by main strength to warp the planes so that their surfaces might catch the air and check his descent. For a second it seemed that he might succeed. The football helmet he wore, blew off, and fell much more rapidly than the plane.

The hope was momentary, however, for when about 300 feet from the ground the machine turned completely over and the spectators fled wildly as the broken plane, with the aviator still fighting grimly in its mesh of wires and stays, plunged among them with a crash.

Crowd Fights for Souvenirs.

Scarcely had Johnstone hit the ground before morbid men and women swarmed over the wreckage fighting with each other for souvenirs. One of the broken wooden stays had gone almost through the airman's body. Before doctors or police could reach the scene, one man had torn this splinter from the body and run away, carrying his trophy. The crowd tore away the canvas from over the body, and even fought for the gloves that had protected Johnstone's hands from the cold.

The machine fell on the opposite of the field from the grand stand and there were but a few hundred near the spot, but physicians and police were rushed across as soon as possible. The physicians declared that death must have been instantaneous. Johnstone's back, neck, and both legs were broken, the bones of his thigh being forced through the flesh and the leather garments he wore.

Archibald Hoxsey, who in a previous flight this afternoon had reached an altitude of 2,500 feet, had risen just before Johnstone began his fatal glide, and was in the air when the accident took place. As he swung down the other end of the course, he saw that Johnstone had fallen and guided his machine directly over the body of his friend. He descended as soon as he could bring his plane to the ground, and rushed to the wreckage, where he and Walter Brookins helped lift the body to an automobile which brought it to the city.

The Band Played Ragtime.

Many of the spectators were watching Hoxsey's flight and did not see Johnstone's machine collapse, but a woman's shrieks of "My God, he's gone!" drew every eye in time to see him dashed to death upon the ground. The band in the grand stand, blaring away under contract, never ceased to play, and Johnstone's body was taken out of the enclosure with the strains of a ragtime melody for a funeral march.

It would seem that many incidents had happened throughout the aviation meet to warn the too daring flier. It has already been noted that in alighting yesterday Johnstone broke against the fence the left wing tip that gave way to-day and caused his death. To-day when he started on his first flight one of the wheels on which the aeroplane runs along the ground gave way, and had to be replaced.

A curious incident noticed was that as he prepared to start for his last flight a fox terrier that had broken through the fence stationed himself directly in front of the machine and barking frantically refused to be driven away. As the machine rolled down the track one of the wings swept above the dog, which pursued the machine until it lifted into the air.

In discussing his flights in this rarefied atmosphere yesterday Johnstone declared he would attempt "no tricks" here, as he considered it too dangerous. Perhaps, however, he believed he had solved the problems created by the altitude. A daring flight by Hoxsey far over the foothills seemed to fire him with a determination to outdo his team mate, for even the first spiral which he made safely was by far the most daring any of the airmen had attempted at this meet.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 17.—When Ralph Johnstone, who was killed in an aeroplane accident in Denver to-day, started to leave the home of W. M. Federmann, his uncle, here last Sunday on his way to Denver to take part in the aviation meet there, Federmann said:

"I suppose I'll receive a telegram one of these days to come after your remains."

"Not mine," said Johnstone, shaking

LONGER THAN THE OLYMPIC,

The New Cunarder Will Have a Theatre and a Swimming Bath.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Cunard Company is inviting tenders for the construction of a liner which will in some respects exceed the dimensions of the White Star liner Olympic.

It is proposed not only to make the vessel the largest in the world, but also the most comfortable from the point of view of the passengers. The specifications include a swimming bath and a theatre.

The steamer, which is destined for the Liverpool-New York service, will be 885 feet long and 95 feet wide, and her displacement will be 50,000 tons. She will carry nearly 4,000 passengers. The speed called for will be only twenty-three knots.

The constructors first approached are Swan, Hunter & Wigham Richardson of Walton-on-Tyne, the builders of the Mauretania.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The specifications issued to-day for the new Cunard Line steamship call for a vessel 2½ feet longer than the White Star liner Olympic, at present the largest vessel in the world, but of less displacement.

A speed of 23 knots an hour is expected of the vessel, which will be propelled by turbines. The use of oil for fuel will be possible if such use is deemed advisable.

Provision is made for 650 first class passengers, 740 second class, and 2,400 in the steerage.

The Olympic, which was launched on Oct. 21, is 882½ feet in length, with a displacement of 66,000 tons. She will have a speed of 21 knots an hour.

EMPLOYERS TO STRIKE FIRST.

St. Louis Building Trades Plans Take Away Labor's Weapon.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 17.—No more strikes can take place in the various branches of the building industries in this city if the plans formulated to-day by an organization of the largest general contractors in the city are carried out. The general scheme is to settle all controversies by forcing the unions to arbitrate instead of allowing them to go out on strike. This is to be done by putting each contractor under bond to obey a labor committee of the organization, to whom all controversies are to be referred. If union men in one branch refuse to arbitrate every contractor in the city is under bond to stop work on the job and discharge all men pending the settlement of the controversy.

The plan carries with it the sanction of the bonding companies, who agree to refuse to give bond to any contractor who forfeits on association's bond. The new organization is to be called The Master Builders' Association. It is an offspring of the Building Industries Association, but at present only contemplates taking in members of the building trades. They approved the preliminary work and immediately signed the charter member roster. The bond proposed by the agreement will be $5,000. All the labor troubles are to be referred to a board of governors composed of fifteen men. When trouble arises the work on a particular job is to be declared closed. It remains closed until the questions at issue are finally settled.

NEW HAVEN FOOTBALL RUSH.

Greatest of All Throngs Going from Here by Train To-morrow.

There will be an unusually large exodus of football enthusiasts from this city to see the Yale-Harvard game at New Haven to-morrow. This was indicated yesterday by the announcement at the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad offices that about seventy special drawing-room cars would be run over that line from New York.

The railroad will send out ten special trains, containing ten coaches each for the accommodation of the regular crowd, besides six special trains made up of ten drawing-room cars each for special parties. The Harvard Club will have thirty private cars to be distributed among individual members of the club, while the Yale Club will have three or four cars.

Some of the well known persons who have engaged special cars for the trip are: Walter S. Brewster, Henry Rowland, F. P. Moore, Austin Gray, H. R. Winthrop, C. R. Corwith, Harry Payne Whitney, Fred Story, H. S. Black, E. H. Gary, Stanley Mortimer, A. B. Duke, C. M. Fleischman, J. B. Taylor, Grosvernor Nicholas, J. W. Gary, Woodward Babcock, Ballard McColl and W. E. Corey. The Cloister Club has engaged a special car for its members.

"We have been swamped with orders for accommodation," said Ticket Agent Seever yesterday. "There hasn't been anything like it in years. We have not been able to make any reservations for a month now. Some of the reservations have been made a year and a half in advance. We will be crowded to our utmost capacity to take care of the throng that will go to New Haven from here."

WELLESLEY GIRLS SHUT OUT.

No More May They Stroll in the Hunnewell Gardens at Night.

Special to The New York Times.

WELLESLEY, Mass., Nov. 17.—Walter Hunnewell has closed his famous Italian Gardens here in the evening to Wellesley College girls. He has done so because it had become impossible for him to take a quiet stroll in his grounds without running into innumerable Wellesley girls squired by Harvard students.

The Hunnewell Gardens have always heretofore been open to the public. They are within a short walk of Wellesley College, directly across the little lake. It was the handiest spot in the world for the girls, safe from prowling teachers and with plenty of quiet nooks.

Mr. Hunnewell at first gave a very courteous hint that he would prefer not to have his gardens visited in the evening, especially on Sunday nights, but it was disregarded. Now a second notice has been posted in the college, which Mr. Hunnewell thinks cannot be misinterpreted, and the girls agree with him. This is it:

> It should be distinctly understood that Mr. Hunnewell objects to all use of the gardens on Sunday or any other evening. If students persist in disregarding the wishes of the owner of the estate in this matter, the result will be that the estate will be closed entirely to the use of the public.

Wellesley sighs and saunters along the shores of the lake, where the benches are few and hard to secure.

LABOR ROW STARTS AS MR. TAFT SAILS

Twenty-five Per Cent. of the American Workers on the Canal May Quit Their Jobs.

STATEMENT BY PRESIDENT

He Says the Landslides at Culebra Show the Wisdom of the Decision in Favor of a Lock Canal.

COLON, Nov. 17.—President Taft sailed for Charleston at 6 o'clock this evening on board the armored cruiser Tennessee, which is convoyed by the Montana, after four interesting days on the Isthmus.

On the eve of Mr. Taft's departure 100 boilermakers, dissatisfied that after hearing their complaints last evening the President would give no immediate answer to their demands, gave five days' notice of quitting their work and sailing for home. Several of the unions of machinists and blacksmiths are threatening similar action.

It is not proposed to strike, but simply to resign and leave the Isthmus. Only hourly employes, constituting 25 per cent. of the force, are likely to be affected. The canal officials are indignant at these employes for trying to force their demands, which the officials regard as unreasonable.

President Taft promised to consider the matter fully and cable his answer from Charleston, but this did not satisfy the hot-headed among the boilermakers. The Canal Commission this afternoon issued a statement, which in part is as follows:

"During the past year a number of petitions asking for an increase in pay were presented by the American canal workers, who are paid hourly and who number 1,500—about 25 per cent. of the entire American force. The commission, after full consideration declined to grant the increases, not considering any justification necessary for such action. The standard pay on the Isthmus is 65 cents an hour, which is from 10 to 30 cents higher than in the United States. In addition, the workers receive free quarters, fuel, light, medical attention, and other privileges not granted in the United States.

"The reason given by the hundred men who have resigned is that the President's promise to send his answer from Charleston is not satisfactory. This action of the boilermakers will not interfere with the canal construction work and will cause only temporary inconvenience until their places are filled, which will be within a short time."

President Taft told the hourly employes, who demanded 10 cents an hour increase and six weeks instead of two weeks' vacation with pay, that he thought more vacation than they were receiving was justified. The canal workers get all their living supplies at wholesale cost from the commissaries, and the commission declares that the cost of living here is only 50 per cent. of the cost in the United States.

President Taft spent the day in inspecting the Pacific Division locks, and he enjoyed a four-mile sail at the Pacific entrance to the canal in a tug. He will make a stop of several hours at Guantanamo on Saturday afternoon to inspect the proposed naval base. Before leaving the Isthmus he said:

"This is the fifth time I have visited the Isthmus, and I have gone over the whole line and looked into every part of the improvement. It is about twenty-two months since I was last here, and in that time the progress made has been most satisfactory. Indeed, it is remarkable.

"The first thing that strikes one is the fact that work is being done apparently on every foot of the fifty miles of canal, and done under an organization of men, plant, and materials that operates as economically and effectively as if it were a machine, with Goethals in control of a lever which sets and keeps the whole machine in operation.

"When I was here twenty-two months ago the main question was the confirmation of the judgment of Congress in having adopted a lock type canal instead of a sea-level. The extent to which the Gatun Dam and the docks have been completed has removed from every impartial observer the slightest doubt of the wisdom of the decision made and the feasibility of the plan adopted. This conclusion is farther confirmed and clinched by the difficulty occasioned by slides in the Culebra Cut, which for a canal of an 85-foot level necessitated only an additional excavation that could readily be taken care of. Any attempt, however, to sink a canal in Culebra to a depth eighty feet below the present proposed level would lengthen the time of construction, weary the patience of the Americans, make the cost almost prohibitory, and leave it an exceedingly doubtful question whether, with the difficulty presented by the Chagres River, such a canal would be possible at all.

"The Gatun Dam lock, with the lake already 18 feet and slowly rising to a level of 85 feet, which will constitute the key to the whole plan of the canal, is so far advanced that, taken with the Culebra Cut and the locks on the Pacific side, a definite picture is given of what the canal is to be, which inspires one with eagerness for its completion.

"The landslides in Culebra can be easily removed, the further excavation and the widening of the slope where they occur merely adding something to the amount of excavation previously calculated upon and to the cost, but the percentage of both time and cost will be very small and not enough to increase the estimates for the completed canal.

"The work is so far advanced that the time has come for the discussion of plans for the management and maintenance of the canal, for the Government of Panama is peacefully pursuing its course, and enjoying prosperity and political calm in the republic. The authorities in charge manifest every disposition to assist the United States in the construction of the canal, and to conform to every detail of the obligations imposed by the treaty."

PANAMA, Nov. 17.—President Taft's speech last night at the dinner given in his honor by President Arosemena, in which he ridiculed the report that the United States was contemplating the annexation of Panama, was published this morning and excited the earnest approbation of the people here, who seized upon every opportunity to show their friendliness toward the American Chief Executive and the Government of which he is the head.

This morning Mr. Taft looked over the Pacific division of the canal and from a tug examined the completed section. This is the President's fifth visit to the isthmus, and his popularity among the natives and the canal workers is everywhere manifested. To show him special honor the men yesterday broke all division records for the laying of concrete at Gatun Dam.

On the way home the President will dictate his general message for the approaching session of Congress, having read the reports of all departments in the course of the voyage here.

The President has received no general news from the United States during his stay, and is anxious to get home and again be in touch with affairs at Washington.

EXCHANGE MEMBERS COMPLAIN OF GOSSIP

Charles E. Schafer & Bros. Go to the Governors About Criticisms of Their Dealings.

EXCHANGE TO INVESTIGATE

"They Seemed to Think We Were Trying Another A. O. Brown Racket," Says One Member of the Firm.

Members of the firm of Charles E. Schafer & Brothers, it was learned after the close of business on the Stock Exchange yesterday, had complained in the course of the day to the Governing Committee that some members of the Exchange were circulating unfounded criticism of the firm on the ground that it had been transacting an abnormally large percentage of the business on the floor of the Exchange. The Governors, it was said, consented to take the matter up and, if possible, to trace the reports to those who first set them afloat among the members of the Exchange. The reports circulated suggested that if the business being handled by the firm was of the ordinary character of Stock Exchange trading not so large a proportion of the orders would have been found in the hands of a single firm.

Members of the firm themselves outlined the facts in the case when inquiries were made of them. The firm, they said, had bought 150,000 shares of stock within the last three days, including large blocks of United States Steel and Union Pacific. Other members of the Exchange noticed this heavy buying by the Schafer firm, and attributed it in turn to the City Bank interests, to the Guggenheim party, and to Daniel G. Reid. When the firm again appeared as large bidders for Union Pacific and United States Steel early in yesterday's session, other members of the Exchange, as one member of the Schafer firm put it, seemed to think that the firm was trying another A. O. Brown racket, and suspecting the genuineness of the business, hesitated to sell to the firm. One of the Schafers was then bidding for 10,000 shares of United States Steel at 79¾, and for 10,000 shares of Union Pacific at 176⅞.

He did not get the stock until after he had placed the orders with other brokers, but meantime, it was said afterward, he sold stocks himself and bought them back at the lowest prices of the afternoon, making considerable profit by the transaction.

Edward Schafer went to the Governors later about the criticisms passed upon the business the firm was doing. Mr. Schafer proved that his firm had plenty of securities, and that there was no basis whatever for the talk. One of the banks, in fact, it was said, had offered any money the firm might want, and was told that the firm had all the balance it needed.

Another member of the firm said it had refused to affirm or deny anything that had been said about the origin of the business the firm was doing, but that as a matter of fact the people for whom the Schafers had been acting could buy out the whole Exchange. The firm itself, he said, had nothing to fear, and had given no ground for criticism. The fact was that some people were probably jealous of the business the firm had been doing. Some had even gone to the length of attempting to bribe a boy employed by the firm to reveal the source of some of the firm's orders.

At the opening of the market yesterday prices were more or less demoralized. The explanation circulated over the news tickers was that the drop in prices had been due to the absence of operators who had been making manipulative purchases of stocks. Later prices rallied, but declined again in the afternoon. At the close Steel showed a loss of 1 point, and Union Pacific was down 1¼ points, and Reading, the third of the three most active stocks, 1¾.

The day's development failed to throw any light on the actual origin of the buying orders yesterday and during the previous two days, the execution of which led to the criticisms of the business which was being done and to the complaint of the members of the Schafer firm against the circulation of unfounded reports by other members of the Exchange. The source of the complaint to the Governors was revealed, but the identity of the operators, the execution of whose orders brought this firm into unusual prominence in the business of the Exchange, was left a matter of surmise.

The firm of Charles E. Schafer & Brothers was formed in January, 1909. All three members of the firm, Charles E., Leonard, and Edward Schafer are members of the Stock Exchange. They are sons of Samuel M. Schafer, head of the Stock Exchange house of Schafer Brothers. The firm stands high in the Exchange, and the name of Schafer has long been prominent in the list of its membership.

BOY SEEKS BANDITS.

H. O. Turner's Son Leaves School to Earn Reward—Father Follows.

Special to The New York Times.

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., Nov. 17.—After the bandits held up Paymaster Heil at South Egremont last Saturday and robbed him of a payroll of $20,000 a reward of $700 was offered by the construction company, and Llywellen Turner, son of H. O. Turner of New York, sought to earn it. He purchased an automatic revolver, directed that the bill be sent to his father at the Waldorf, and started off for the woods to capture the bandits.

When he was missed at the Sedgwick Institute, a preparatory school it was said that the Principal, E. J. Van Lennep, telegraphed Mr. Turner, who had already become alarmed by the receipt of the bill for the pistol. Mr. Turner at once set out in his automobile in search of his son across the Taconic Mountains into Berkshire. Meantime, if his son had succeeded in his quest of the robbers, he did not report to the construction company and claim the reward.

It is said that a lonely night vigil of several hours was spent by Mr. Turner's auto party before he found the boy, and that the first act of his father was to dispossess him of the pistol. The party then returned to New York.

BODY IN A TRUNK FOUND IN CELLAR

Eight Years Dead and Long Past Identification—Even the Sex Doubtful.

SEALED IN ZINC ENVELOPE

"William Lewis, Salesman," Left Trunk 5 Years Ago—That and Date on Newspaper, February, 1902, Only Clues.

The finding of a human skeleton hermetically sealed in a zinc-lined trunk gave Second Deputy Police Commissioner Flynn his first metropolitan murder mystery to solve last night, and the former Secret Service Chief took hold of it in a new way. He called in the District Attorney's office, sent out five of his best detectives, and removed the case entirely from the uniformed force. All information to outsiders was refused.

The mystery, which the police who worked for a brief fifteen minutes on the case believe will prove a problem calculated to test the best detective ability, concerns a murder at least five years old. The skeleton, which was found in the cellar of a four-story brick tenement house at 450 West Fiftieth Street, was apparently that of a full-grown man. The legs had been drawn up at the knees until they touched the chest and had been tied in that position.

No clothing remained, only a little hair and short bits of rotted ropes. All that is known of the trunk's history is that the boarder of one of the tenants brought it there when he came to the house, seven and a half years ago, and left it when he departed, five years ago. In the intervening time it had reposed in the woodshed in the basement, and was only disturbed yesterday because Philip Maghan, the tenant whose boarder left the trunk, decided to move and looked into the trunk to see if it was worth taking along with him to his new address.

Maghan said the name of his boarder was William Lewis, and he had left the trunk in part payment for a board bill. No trace of Lewis is left except the trunk, nor is it known what has become of him since he left the Maghan flat, which is on the third flood.

The only indication that the detectives assigned by Mr. Flynn to take charge of the case were getting results came from a partial admission by Coroner Winterbottom that there might be an arrest before morning.

Coroner Winterbottom has charge of the body, which he ordered sent to the morgue after making a careful examination of it. He qualified his statement that it was the skeleton of a man by adding that his conclusions might be subject to revision later when he had made a thorough examination at the morgue.

Finding of the Body.

It was 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon when the police received their first information that something was wrong at the West Fiftieth Street tenement. Philip Maghan hurried into the West Forty-seventh Street Station in an agitated state of mind and asked for a private consultation with the lieutenant in charge. Lieut. O'Neill invited him behind the desk and Maghan then told of finding a trunk in his cellar from which a bad odor came. He gave no details, but said he thought the police would like to investigate.

Lieut. O'Neill had Maghan taken to the Fourth Branch Detective Bureau in West Fifty-second Street, where he repeated the same story to Acting Capt. Clark. Detectives O'Grady and McKinney were ordered to accompany him back to his flat house and report on what they found.

The report caused Capt. Clark to send word at once to Second Deputy Commissioner Flynn, who at once took charge of the case and stationed detectives in the flat house with instructions to the tenants not to talk about the case to any one. The flat house janitor, a German named Heidelbreck, took the instructions as meant to apply seriously to himself. He assaulted several of the too inquisitive neighbors, and finally locked the front door, refusing to answer all calls.

Policeman McCormick of the West Forty-seventh Street Station was installed in the basement to see that nothing was disturbed, but was informed of none of the details.

Before the detectives advised him to assist them by keeping silent, Maghan, however, had spoken to several of his neighbors about his remarkable find on going to open the trunk of his former boarder. He told them more apparently than he told the police of the West Forty-seventh Street Station on reporting the case. His story was that when Lewis came to board with him seven and a half years ago he had the trunk moved at once to the basement, saying that there was nothing in it he wanted.

So far as Maghan knew it was never moved after being put there, and nothing was ever put in it or taken out of it. Lewis sometimes mentioned it in the course of the two and a half years he lived in the Maghan family, which consists of Mr. Maghan, his wife, and three children, but there was nothing in the man's conversation to suggest that there was any secret connected with the trunk, or that he was afraid of anything that might become known about it.

Several times Maghan lifted the trunk to get at other things stored in the woodshed, and he always noticed that it was rather heavy. Yesterday, when he was packing up to move, he remembered the trunk and decided to see if it was worth taking along. He pried open the lid without difficulty, but found that it opened only into another compartment, which was an egg-shaped metal envelope, sealed at the joints with plaster of paris. On loosening the plaster the bad odor revealed itself for the first time, and when the metal envelope was opened the skeleton became visible.

Murder Date Probably Feb., 1902.

The trunk was an ordinary wooden one about 4 feet long and 3 feet deep, covered on the outside with brown canvas and filled between the zinc envelope and outer lining with plaster of paris. The name "W. Lewis" had been stenciled on one end of it, and newspapers had been used as packing inside the zinc envelope. They were New York morning newspapers and bore dates in February, 1902, which would indicate that the body had been placed in the trunk just before Lewis came to the West Fiftieth Street house to live.

Some of the neighbors said they had understood the trunk did not come with Lewis, but was sent to him a month or two after his arrival. Lewis, it was said, was noted in the neighborhood for his reticence and for keeping aloof from those around him.

Mr. Maghan said that Lewis was a quiet man, who never spoke of his affairs, and neither he nor his wife knew anything about his past, although he lived with them for more than two years. He was supposed to be a salesman; of what, Maghan didn't know. He departed suddenly without paying his board and that was the last heard of him.

Coroner Winterbottom said there was nothing suspicious about the story told by Maghan as to his plans for moving and the reasons why he decided to look into the contents of the trunk.

"Both he and Mrs. Maghan," the Coroner said, "behaved perfectly natural while under examination, and the detectives and myself were convinced that they were telling us the truth."

Acting Captain of Detectives Clark based his refusal to give out information of developments after his men took charge on the grounds that the ends of justice might thereby be interfered with.

GETS BACK LONG-LOST PURSE

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 17.—Silas R. Morse, State Curator of the Public Schools, had returned to him to-day a pocketbook he lost in Chicago during the World's Fair, seventeen years ago. The pocketbook was sent back to Atlantic City after identification had been made by Mr. Morre through a letter to the Rev. Father James J. Doherty of 653 West Thirty-seventh Street, Chicago.

The priest got the pocketbook from a contrite parishioner. The $43 it had originally contained in bills when lost by Mr. Morse, was there, although not of the same denominations as when lost, which proved the money had been spent and replaced.

FORTUNE SEEKING A GIRL.

Heritage Coming to Molke Lukash, Who Came Here from Russia.

The Rev. Joseph Silverman, rabbi of the Temple Emanu-El, received a letter yesterday from the American Consul General in Calcutta, asking that a search be made here for Molke Lukash, who came to New York some time ago from Kieff, Russia. There is a fortune awaiting the young woman, and the Consul General is anxious to find her.

Molke Lukash is a daughter of Israel Lukash. Her mother was Rebecca Lemozon. In 1906 Lazarus Shapiro died in Calcutta, leaving a large fortune. In his will he left a share to Rebecca Lukash. The authorities made an effort to find the family. It was found that Mrs. Lukash had died in this city, and her daughter, as her heir, is entitled to the money. Efforts to find the daughter so far have been unsuccessful.

PLAYED THE GAME OUT HURT.

Eight Days Later the Plucky Boy Died of Blood Poisoning.

Despite the fact that a ligament of his left shoulder had been torn in a scrimmage thirteen-year-old Joseph Fischer of 2,039 Eighty-fourth Street, Bensonhurst, insisted on playing at his post of right tackle in a football game between his class and another of Public School 128 on Nov. 9. The parents and friends of the boys looked on, cheering from the side lines, and young Fischer's teammates were so inspired by the plucky example of the injured right tackle that they played with redoubled grit and won the game though the odds were against them.

Two days later symptoms of blood-poisoning appeared in the injured arm, and notwithstanding the efforts of several physicians the boy's condition grew rapidly worse. He was removed to the Sunshine Sanitarium, on Cropsey Avenue, where he died yesterday. His teammates and classmates will march at his funeral on Saturday.

TYPHOID ATTACKS FAMILY.

Banker, His Daughter, and a Maid Stricken at the Same Time.

Arthur B. Leach, a banker, with offices in the Singer Building; his eldest daughter, Miss Helen Leach, and their maid, Mary Byrne, who has been in Mr. Leach's employ many years, are seriously ill of typhoid fever at the Leach home in Scotland Road, South Orange, N. J. It is believed that the illness of all three was brought on either by infected milk or oysters.

They were seized by fever almost simultaneously, a few hours after dinner on Monday night, and their condition grew worse so rapidly that several physicians were called. Since then they have improved somewhat, and are thought to be in no immediate danger. The maid is most seriously ill.

The village of South Orange has been waging a campaign against infected milk and the polluted water supply for a long time. Several cases of typhoid fever have been attributed to each cause in the last few months.

GAYNOR OUT FOR SHEPARD.

Mayor Thinks He's the Man Who Should Succeed Senator Depew.

Mayor Gaynor came out unequivocally yesterday for Edward M. Shepard as his choice for United States Senator to succeed Chauncey M. Depew.

"You may state it emphatically," said the Mayor. "I am for Mr. Shepard for Senator. I have been saying this privately ever since the election, and I don't see any reason why it should not be said publicly now. Mr. Shepard is one of our great minds—one of the ablest lawyers we have. I can see no objection whatever to his candidacy. He has a remarkable gift for detail. I became familiar with his ability in this direction at the time of the McKane trouble.

"They talk about Tilden's great work in analyzing the bank accounts of the Tweed ring. Mr. Shepard's analysis of the way McKane voted his people was equally remarkable. Just think what it would mean to have Mr. Shepard in the Senate to deal with the details of the tariff. He is the man above all others to represent New York State at Washington."

Democrats were of the opinion that the Mayor's frank avowal in favor of Mr. Shepard would increase the latter's chances considerably. It is known that Governor-elect Dix is as strongly in favor of Mr. Shepard for Senator as is Mr Gaynor.

TERRELL MADE SENATOR.

Former Governor of Georgia Appointed to Succeed Senator Clay.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 17.—Gov. Brown to-night announced the appointment of former Gov. G. M. Terrell as United States Senator to succeed Senator Clay, who died in Atlanta last Sunday.

Mr. Terrell will serve until the Legislature meets in June to elect a Senator.

CHEER GAYNOR AT COMMERCE FEAST

Mayor at First Public Dinner Since Attempt on His Life Raps Subway Plan Critics.

CLAMOR WON'T MOVE HIM

President McCrea Urges a Connecting Line for Pennsylvania Station—Straus Tells of Our Growing Prestige.

Mayor Gaynor went last night to his first public dinner since the shooting last Summer, which nearly ended his life. It was the one hundred and forty-second annual dinner of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York at the Waldorf-Astoria, a gathering of leaders in the financial and commercial life of the city and State which has become traditional for its representative character. The Mayor's appearance was the feature of the evening, and he signalized it by making a few remarks on the subway situation in his characteristic manner.

On account of his condition, Mayor Gaynor was unable to address the meeting personally and so he had a message read by the Secretary of the Chamber, Sereno E. Pratt. The message was short. It told how he had been flooded with letters, "requesting me, calling on me and demanding me, as if with an air of authority," and gave his opinion that, concerning the matter of subways, these persons were, "as ignorant as the sensational newspapers which are instigating them." In fine, the Mayor declared that it was the "intelligent public sentiment of such men as composed the Chamber of Commerce" which ought to instruct the city officials in such matters.

Straus Tells of Our Prestige.

To the Mayor's message, President James McCrea of the Pennsylvania Railroad added a word on the situation as affecting the great terminal improvement which his company is just completing. Among the other speeches, that of Oscar S. Straus, Ambassador to Turkey, on "The Growth of American Prestige," was a notable account of the advances made by this Nation in recent years in respect of its foreign relations. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts and Gov. Horace White, both urged the need of a businesslike and economical administration of governmental affairs in the Nation and State. St. Clair McKelway closed the evening with an address on "Prayer and Politics."

There was one feature which distinguished this dinner from many of its predecessors. Instead of dragging along into the small hours of the morning it proceeded with the regularity of clockwork, and the speeches were through and the members and guests departing by 11 o'clock. The dinner was in the large ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria, and the guests taxed it to its utmost capacity. In the galleries were many women including Mrs. Horace White, wife of the Governor. Presiding was A. Barton Hepburn, President of the Chase National Bank, the newly elected President of the Chamber, and with him at the President's table were: Mayor Gaynor, Gov. White, Postmaster General Hitchcock, Senator Lodge, Ambassador Straus, J. P. Morgan, James McCrea, Senator Depew, W. Butler Duncan, Major Gen. F. D. Grant, Rear Admiral E. H. C. Leutze, Bishop David H. Greer, the Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D. D., Commander Robert E. Peary, William C. Brown, Samuel Rea, St. Clair McKelway, and Hugh H. Hanna.

Mr. Hepburn, departing from the custom of some of his predecessors, made his preliminary remarks as presiding officer of the Chamber very brief, and directed them at several of the changing business tendencies apparent in the country, notably that of incorporating or combining real property to serve as a basis for security issues which are coming into active competition with corporate securities of the more familiar types.

"This tendency," declared Mr. Hepburn, "is everywhere manifest, in many instances well conceived, and highly commendable, and in many others the underlying hope is to sell the resultant stocks and bonds to the public at prices which anticipate the accretion in values for many years to come. This demand, added to the requirements of current business has subjected the personal wealth of the country to a severe strain—a strain not upon our currency, but upon our mobile capital.

Unsettled Laws Cloud Business.

"One cloud hangs over our business situation—the undetermined construction of our corporation laws. The most law abiding manager cannot be quite sure whether he is conforming to the law or not. This uncertainty must continue until suits now pending in the Supreme Court are decided.

"We may well have confidence that the courts in construing the anti-trust law, whatever their decision may be, will point a way out by which corporations can prosecute their business within the law and free from molestation and interference. It is inconceivable that great aggregations of capital will not be permitted to contribute to the prosperity of this country in future, as they now do, and as great aggregations of capital do in the other commercial nations."

Mr. Hepburn paid a high tribute to President Taft and the name of the President was greeted with much applause. The applause broke out again when he came to introducing Mayor Gaynor. At that time the President of the Chamber said:

"Our hearts and prayers went out to you when we heard that an assassin had sought to lay you low, and now we rejoice at your restoration to health, although we know that the bullet of the assassin is still in your body. We realized it and it was with extreme delicacy that we approached the question of asking you to respond to a toast here to-night, fearing that it might be more than your health could bear. But we can at least give ourselves the pleasure of drinking to your life, health, and happiness."

Mayor Gaynor rose to his feet and stood while the members of the Chamber, also standing, applauded him. Then Secretary Pratt of the Chamber read this message from the Mayor:

The Mayor's Address.

"I had the good fortune soon after I became Mayor to address you in your own hall at your invitation, and thus became associated with you in working for good government of this city. Your intelligent co-operation is most welcome to the present city administration. It is now about to come to a decision in respect of one of the largest matters that ever confronted government anywhere. I refer to the matter of subways.

"Many persons are writing to me requesting me, and 'calling upon me,' and 'demanding' of me, as if with an air of authority, that I decide in favor of this or that route, and asking on which side or where I stand. They seem to be as entirely ignorant of all of the facts as are the sensational newspapers which are instigating them.

"They do not even know that it is the duty of the city officials who have the case in charge not to make up their minds until they have given the public hearings required by law for their enlightenment. They do not know how much of the city's credit is available for the building of subways. They have never got down on the floor and pored over the maps of the different routes to see which is best.

"In fine they are ignorant of the essential facts upon which an intelligent conclusion must be reached, and yet assume to say how the matter must be decided. I have not come to a decision yet, and shall not until I hear the case, as is my official duty. The case that confronts us is this: The city has only a limited amount of credit or money to put into subways. The question, therefore, is into what routes it should be put so as to give the people of the city the largest result.

"Let me add that there is an immediate and pressing need of $50,000,000 or more to do certain necessary public works other than subways. This enters into the question of how much we have available for subways. It is the intelligent public sentiment which is expressed by such men as compose the Chamber of Commerce which is to instruct the city officials and determine what they shall do. We do not intend to pay the slightest heed to clamor, however or wherever expressed."

McCrea Discusses Subway Plans.

There was much applause when the reading of Mayor Gaynor's message was concluded. Later in the evening President James McCrea of the Pennsylvania Railroad responded to the toast, "The Latest Addition to New York's Terminal Facilities." In introducing him Mr. Hepburn said:

"President McCrea, we appreciate all that you and the great corporation over which you preside have done for this city, and we drink not only to your health, but to the success of that vast improvement."

Mr. McCrea, like the Mayor, devoted much of his speech to the situation. He said:

"The completion and operation of our tunnel railroad and station in the heart of New York has made our system to even a greater extent than heretofore a corporation of the state, and more intimately associated in the future development of the State and the city. We fully appreciate that our railroad entered this city by the good-will of the community and the help of its enterprising citizens, a large number of whom are members of the Chamber of Commerce.

"We have tried to deserve, and intend to do all in our power to retain these friendly relations, and to aid in solving one of the greatest difficulties in the administration of a city so large as this—namely, the prompt, comfortable, and safe transportation of its citizens to and from other States, and the encouragement of the residents of other States to come here for business and recreational purposes. In extending the Pennsylvania system into this city, every precaution has been taken in its design, construction, and operation to avoid all features that would be objectionable to the city, and, as far as possible, add to its architectural beauty, and supplement, rather than impede, the subways and other rapid transit lines which can be constructed over it at all streets or avenues.

"Further, the facilities east of the Pennsylvania station to Long Island have been doubled, especially to the end that our share of the responsibility in the transportation problem of this city and the surrounding territory might be satisfactorily met. Now, having done all this, there is one feature required to make our station and railroad a success from the standpoint of the traveler—it is without adequate or convenient up and down town rapid transit facilities. I mention this in no spirit of unfriendly criticism of any individual or public body, for this is not the time nor place for it: but if I confined my remarks to a description of our tunnel, railroad, and station, conceived as an integral part of a trunk line system, but so designed as not to interfere with, but to feed, your rapid transit lines, existing and prospective, without pointing out its notable defects, I would be unfaithful to my trust as executive of the railroad system and your partner in the further success of this great city.

"If, in view of the heavy franchise payments and tax obligations which we pay, and the years spent in carrying out at vast expenditure this difficult work, which has added so much to the real estate and taxable values of the city, and physically united it to Long Island and the rest of the continent, I did not mention the pressing needs of the west side of the city and of the Pennsylvania Station, serving three of your populous boroughs, for a subway on Seventh or Eighth Avenues to reach the present Subway and extend to the Borough of Brooklyn and up the east side above Forty-second Street to the Bronx I would be derelict in my duty to this public gathering of New York's representative business men.

Need of West Side Subway.

"The Chamber of Commerce and other public bodies and men of affairs have performed praiseworthy services in studying this great transportation problem and placed the city under a lasting obligation for their devotion to the public interests; and relying solely upon this spirit of intelligent progressiveness we feel that by friendly and effective co-operation with the proper authorities they can and will see that this imperative public necessity is promptly provided.

"After extended consideration for many years, and from our own practical experience and consultation with those who are able to judge, we are convinced that such a subway will fully justify the expenditure, and that it is conceived in the public interest in the truest sense, and if it were otherwise I would not expect or appeal for your assistance."

Senator Lodge devoted his address to a discussion of the method of the Federal Government in the handling of river and harbor and similar improvements. He attacked the familiar omnibus bill, and recounted some of the efforts that have been made to improve methods in these matters, such as the making of what are known as "continuing contracts," covering an entire project for which appropriations are to be made under the regular appropriation bills.

"As an experienced member of Congress said to me when I first entered the House, the River and Harbor bill is a bill that is sure to pass because it is made to pass. Now a bill that is made to pass is apt to be very defective in other respects not connected with its chief purpose. The result of the present system of appropriating money is that all improvements are delayed, and many are entered upon which are not essential and certainly are not immediate. It is an extravagant waste of money when a great project is undertaken anywhere not to make the appropriations necessary to complete it.

"Let me give you an example of what I mean. It was decided many years ago to make a harbor of refuge at Sandy Bay on the north side of Cape Ann. The water is of great depth, and when complete it will make one of the finest harbors known in the world. The work consists exclusively in building a great breakwater across the mouth of Sandy Bay. For twenty years we have been appropriating $100,000 at intervals, with the result that we have constructed part of the breakwater, which now forms a large artificial roof, and at the present rate another twenty years will elapse before the work is done.

"Either the improvement should never have been undertaken or the money should have been appropriated as rapidly as it could be used to construct the breakwater. It is this piece-meal method of making improvements which is the crying evil of the present system. We should take up the projects one by one in the order of their importance, whether of harbors or waterways, and complete them and then pass to the others.

Waste in Congressional Appropriations.

"The expenditure of millions on our harbors and waterways ought not to be left to the chances of a struggle in Congress to get something for every locality, but either a board of engineers should have the power to expand a general appropriation or Congress should appropriate according to their recommendation."

Gov. Horace White devoted the major part of his speech to the toast, "The State of New York," to the question of State expenditures and the necessity for economy. He attracted considerable attention by expressing fears for the fate of the $101,000,000 barge canal project. In his address Gov. White said:

"It is now high time that the practical business of State Government shall receive close scrutiny and general attention. Too frequently it is the case that an artificial distinction is drawn between public questions, distinguishing one set as particularly important, and treating the remainder as if they possessed little real significance. What are called business questions have been sometimes neglected, as being of inferior value to good citizens. I do not recognize this distinction.

Criticizes Barge Canal Work.

"New York is engaged in several great enterprises. The barge canal is perhaps the most important of all, involving an estimated initial cost of $101,000,000. I have studied this question, and have some knowledge of the subject. It is putting it mildly to say that I feel grave concern about the outcome. We are fortunate in having an honest, competent State Engineer, an excellent Advisory Board, and a strong, efficient Superintendent of Public Works. And yet I believe the work is progressing in a far from satisfactory way.

"Some contracts are dragging, some parts of the work have not been well done. You may well ask, Why is this so? The explanation lies in the fact that there is a serious division of responsibility and power. The statutes fail to provide a commander for this mighty project. The next session of the Legislature ought, in my opinion, to enact suitable legislation to the end that the authority and the responsibility may be clearly and fully placed."

Mr. Straus's Address.

In his address Ambassador Straus said:

"Formerly a European diplomat when he was transferred from some minor post to Washington regarded it not as a promotion but as an undesirable service which would count double in his future career. Young secretaries, sometimes of good families but more frequently of depleted fortunes, were sent here not because of their possessing special ability, but for their prepossessing amiability to capture Uncle Sam's charming daughters with their attractive dots, and I must say the American wives usually succeeded, except when the possibilities were not too hopeless, in awakening ambition in their foreign husbands, and as most adaptable and intelligent helpmates made of them useful, and often distinguished, diplomatic officials.

"It is a strange historical coincidence that the two great English-speaking nations came out as it were from their isolation and developed into great world-powers following, if not growing out of, a war with the same nation. The destruction of the Spanish Armada in 1588 gave to England international independence, and made her mistress of the sea, while our war with Spain, followed by the peaceful and triumphal procession of our warships around the globe, raised the United States to a great world-power and achieved for us an international respect not only on the Atlantic and the Pacific but throughout the habitable world.

"Let me give you a quaint illustration of this, a little incident that happened to me at the Sublime Porte. Twelve years ago, during my former mission to Turkey, they had at the Porte as attendants several deaf mutes, who by gestures had a way of describing the diplomatic representatives of the several countries. At that time they described me by holding up their palms and blowing upon them, indicating I had been wafted from a country far, far away. This time, however, I was told they described me by swinging their arms around a circle to indicate I represented the great world-power.

"Our country from the beginning has been represented by many capable accredited officials in the leading capitals of the world, yet the men who have done most to advance American prestige were two unaccredited private citizens, the one the hero of our civil war, who sheathed his sword with the message to our people, 'Let us have peace,' Gen. Grant; the other Theodore Roosevelt, the champion of the justified grievances of the masses, who aroused the conscience of our people and won the admiration of monarch and peasant, from Khartoum to Christiania, for American ideas and practical idealism. 'Americanism,' said he, 'is a question of spirit convictions and purpose, not of creed or birthplace.'

Love of the Mighty Dollar.

"We are a commercial Nation, but not a commercialized people; we love the almighty dollar, but love the Almighty more. Commerce is based on mutuality and reciprocity. It wages its contest not against the people but against the silent forces of nature, to put to the uses of man the richest products of his skill and ingenuity, and to raise the comforts and standards of life and living. Our diplomacy is directed toward securing a fair field and no favor, an open door in the markets of the world, and in that spirit we have been foremost among nations to lead to a peaceful solution the most important international differences. We were the first to open the doors of the International Tribunal at The Hague, and in conjunction with Great Britain have submitted to it the gravest and most difficult questions for solution that have ever been presented for international arbitral justice—the Alabama claims and the long-pending and often threatening fishery disputes.

"'No greater calamity,' said Lecky, 'can befall a nation than to cut itself off from all historical connection with its own past, as France did during the Revolution,' except, I would add, it be a blind disregard for the welfare and opportunities of those who come after us. To this destructive spirit of indulgence and suicidal disregard for the future is due more than to any other cause the fall of the mighty empires of the Eastern world, whose buried columns, devastated forests, and exhausted lands yet remain as the silent but warning witnesses to the selfishness of man and the folly of nations.

The Proper Use of Wealth.

"When great wealth is allied to great souls it is a blessing, but soulless wealth is an evil in itself and a menace to our future as a Nation. The death knell of our grandeur and prestige will sound when we permit the men who control millions to reach out for more millions through political power, or when we permit men who wield political power to debauch it, to reach out for millions. No form of government can endure when the instruments through which it works are corrupt. We are blessed in the fact that in no country does private munificence make so large a contribution to benevolence and public uses as with us, and in no country does idealism make a deeper impression upon national character. Last year, when your distinguished member, John S. Kennedy, died, and when his will was made public, with its benefactions reaching from the Golden Gate of the Pacific to the Golden Horn of the Bosphorus, one of the leading European papers stated that the Americans had found a remedy for their swollen fortunes, and that remedy was in swollen benefactions.

"The unit of our Democracy is the individual, and its basis is trust in the people. The distinguishing feature between our political, economical, and social fabric and the European systems is that under our system all the people have the fullest opportunity to reap the benefits of individual liberty, material welfare, and social equality, and so long as these are preserved—and to preserve them we must guard them not only from above, but with no less determination and jealousy, from below—they will continue to insure our stability and happiness and be a gain to the world and to civilization. So long as our idle rich drift abroad and the honest laborer comes to us America will grow in power and prestige, but when the tide reverses it will mark decay.

"No more patriotic cause appeals to the merchants and manufacturers of the Nation than to enlighten our legislators, so that they will understand that we can never win and retain our share in the markets of the world so long as we chain our merchant flag to our coasts and restrain American-owned ships from carrying our products to distant shores. Our present laws in their effect promote the ocean carrying trade of other nations and discriminate against our merchants and our flag. I am a protectionist, and because I am I believe in protecting not alone our domestic, but equally our foreign trade, and that trade will never attain its legitimate proportions until we shape our laws so that American ships—by which I mean ships owned by Americans and sailing under our flag—can carry American products over every sea to the four quarters of the earth. If this cannot be brought about in any other way, then let us annually devote one-half the cost of a man-o'-war as a postal subsidy to the building up of our merchant marine, which sum will come back to us ten-fold in the increase of our foreign trade and in the growth of American intercourse and prestige throughout the world."

Prayer and Politics.

Speaking to the toast, "Prayer and Politics," Dr. St. Clair McKelway said:

"This year in New York and in other commonwealths there has been a distinct disposition of the people to believe in their capacity to govern themselves, or a marked disinclination on the part of Deity to interfere with the duty or with the ability of His creatures to do for themselves, under free agency, what they were not called on to refer to Him. A government of men, by men, and for men has been permitted to pursue its ordinary methods here below, without interference from Above, and with no interference at all, except from suffragettes who have sought admission as political partners, and, on the whole, we have no warrant in believing that the Creator is displeased or that men have shown their incapacity for government or for self-government—or that the dear ladies mourn as those without hope."

SAYS WE'RE A "MANOCRACY."

Rabbi Wise Thinks Women Are Cheated Out of Their Rights.

Speaking to the members of the Twilight Club, who had invited him to their annual dinner as a guest of honor, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise said last night that man as yet had no real attitude on woman's suffrage, and was only speaking platitudes in regard to what was one of the most serious problems of the age. He predicted that New York would see a law passed for equal suffrage within a few years, and that when it comes it will be followed immediately by great strides toward social justice for women, which is now denied.

"We have no democracy here," he said, "only a manocracy. I hear some men say that if women vote election betting will cease, because there will be no silent vote to figure on. And I hear others say women should by all means go to the poles—the north and the south. These platitudes illustrate the lack of an attitude by men to a problem deeply affecting the welfare of the world.

"Man has the physical, brute power to deny woman the ballot, and he exercises it. It is a survival of the régime of haremism; with the dead hand of inerita weighing heavily on its side. If you believe in a democracy, you cannot escape the inevitableness of equal suffrage. All great men and real thinkers have believed in it in every age."

Rabbi Wise said that the woman whose husband is struck down by tuberculosis is a victim of social injustices that are just as real as if he had been struck down by a knife or a club, for the world was coming to understand that tuberculosis meant nothing more than underfeeding, underhousing, and overworking. With the ballot in the hands of women he said there would be a law passed at once pensioning the women widowed by tuberculosis, so that they could keep their families intact. Of every 100 widows applying for charity, he said, 39 were made so by tuberculosis.

Of the club's six speakers only one took a positively negative side. Edwin E. Slosson, literary editor of The Independent, called attention to the fact that the voting women in Wyoming, his old home, did not have Christmas parties for dogs instead of children, and did not maintain churches where there were no Sunday schools, because there were no little ones to attend.

"The average family there," he said, "is from eight to twelve instead of from none to one."

The dinner was held at the Gainsborough Studios, in West Fifty-ninth Street, the speakers including, besides Rabbi Wise and Mr. Slosson, Judge Alfred E. Ommen and the Rev. Andrew F. Underhill.

CARNEGIE IS SORRY FOR RICH MEN'S SONS

Tells Founders' Day Gathering of Mechanics and Tradesmen Poor Boy's Chance Is Best.

HIS OWN EARLY DAYS

Dr. Collyer Tells of Starting Life as a Blacksmith—President Schurman of Cornell Unable to Attend.

Andrew Carnegie at the dinner of the General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen of New York at Delmonico's last night said that his heart went out in sympathy for the sons of millionaires. He said it was the son of poor parents who realized what a father's and a mother's love was and who had to toil hard for all he got, who was the boy to be envied. He also said that his greatest joy in giving away his wealth was the opportunity it offered to induce and stimulate others to do their part of the work.

The dinner was the Founders' Day celebration of the society on its one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary. Both men and women were present, and the speakers, besides Mr. Carnegie, were the Rev. Dr. Robert Collyer, who told how he had started out as a blacksmith; ex-Gov. Franklin Murphy of New Jersey, Borough President George McAneny, and R. Fulton Cutting. John H. McCullagh, President of the society, was the toastmaster.

"I am proud of my membership in this society," said Mr. Carnegie. "On looking over the great things that it has accomplished I note that it founded the first free library in the City of New York, and now I am prouder than ever to be a member, for the most wholesale act of my life was when I gave New York seventy-eight libraries in one day. It is not the giving of money, however, for libraries, or anything else that gives me the most satisfaction. It is what I am able to do in the way of inducing others to do their share that gives me the most pleasure.

"I see that this same society also established the school out of which grew the present public school system of New York, and I am prouder still of my membership. Then I am proud of what the society stands for in our life. I remember fifteen years ago at one of our banquets Abram S. Hewitt was present, and he pointed to the fact that he had worked a few days as a printer and been paid for it, and so he was eligible for membership. I have worked in cellars and fired engines, and so on that occasion I was able to lift my hands and say truthfully 'Behold these horny hands of toil.'

"And speaking of work brings up how I pity the son of a millionaire. He does not know what father and mother mean. It is the poor boy who has his father and his mother as his guides and inspiration, the son of the washerwoman, of the scrubwoman, who realizes and appreciates all that his mother has done for him—that is the boy who will push forward. If I had my choice I would be the poor boy and know what a father and mother mean, and not the millionaire's son who does not know."

Dr. Collyer told of his landing in New York more than fifty years ago as a green young English blacksmith without a friend in the country, and how he had seen an advertisement, and, answering it, had got his first job in this country as a blacksmith. He was pastor of a church in Chicago when that city was destroyed by the great fire, and after that fire he made a horseshoe that friends then at Cornell University gave him $1,000 for.

Presidents Schurman of Cornell and Humphreys of Stevens Institute were to have spoken last night, but both were detained at the last moment and unable to attend.

Among those present were Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Mr. and Mrs. Morris P. Altman, Alexander Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Harrington, William W. Ogden, Dr. and Mrs. E. J. Valentine, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Wise, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Taylor, and Morris Loeb, President of the Hebrew Technical Institute.

COMFORT IN DEFEAT.

Bennet Thinks He Would Not Feel at Home in a House Full of Democrats.

Speaking at the dinner of the Registry Division of the United States Immigration Station at Ellis Island, which was given at Reisenweber's last night, Congressman William S. Bennet, who was defeated in the recent election, said, speaking of his defeat:

"Well, I am sure that I would not feel at home in a house full of Democrats, anyway."

He declared that while in Congress he had done what he could to improve the immigration service, and that no matter what happened he would continue to do so. Mr. Bennet could not remain to hear the other speakers, as he had to attend the dinner given by the Chamber of Commerce.

Among the other speakers of the evening were the Hon. William Williams, Commissioner of Immigration, and Dr. George W. Stoner, who has charge of the medical department at Ellis Island.

The programme for the evening was enlivening.

WILLARD ASSOCIATION DINES.

Members Gather for the 20th Annual Dinner at the Manhattan.

The Emma Willard Association held its twentieth annual dinner at the Hotel Manhattan yesterday. Its tables were decorated with pink chrysanthemums and its members ate a pink rose Emma Willard sorbet, pink being the association color.

Mrs. Russell Sage, the President, has not been able to attend for a long time, and Mrs. Mary Knox Robinson, the Acting President, was also absent yesterday on account of illness. It is an annual custom of the association to send to Mrs. Sage the flowers which decorate the tables, but as she is not now within reaching distance, this year's were sent to Mrs. Robinson.

Miss Anna Leach, Principal of the Emma Willard School, attended and told these first pupils of Emma Willard what the present ones in her school were doing at the present time. There was music, an invocation by the Rev. Dr. Thomas Reed Bridges, and Mrs. William O. McDonald made the address of welcome.

COLLEGIAN TO PRISON.

Ex-Wife's Plea That He Be Punished Is Granted by the Court.

Lee P. Woodward, college graduate and a member of an old and highly respected Pennsylvania family, was adjudged a habitual criminal and sentenced to serve five years in Sing Sing by Judge Malone in General Sessions yesterday after pleading guilty to an indictment charging him with forgery. An affidavit from Woodward's divorced wife, who lives in Philadelphia, caused the court to give the prisoner the limit for his offense. Last February Woodward, who was living at Columbus, N. J., passed a worthless check for $59 on a Broadway clothing firm.

In her affidavit she said that Woodward was constantly in trouble during the time she was married to him, and that he had been arrested many times, but had always managed to escape punishment. She also swore that he had squandered $20,000 of her money which she had inherited from her father, who was John R. Catlin, Chief Engineer of the Philadelphia Fire Department, and also swindled her brother out of $10,000.

"In my belief he is beyond redemption," the woman adds. "Nothing can induce him to lead an honest life. My son, now 21 years old, joins me in pleading that you inflict upon him such punishment as shall relieve us and society of his presence. My own daughter, who died at the age of 16, told me on her death bed that her father's conduct had filled her with shame, and that she did not care whether she lived or died."

his relative's hand, and smiling, "when I make a flight, I have my plans well laid. Before I leave the ground, I know exactly what I am going to do. Don't worry about my being injured."

JOHNSTONE HAD NO FEAR.

Wilbur Wright Constantly Restrained Him—Short and Brilliant Career.

"If I'd leave that boy alone for a minute he'd be in the hospital," Wilbur Wright remarked many times while holding Ralph Johnstone in restraint.

Johnstone's training as a trick bicycle rider, in which art he was in the first rank, was part of his equipment as an aviator, and probably had much to do with his death. No trick was to him too daring, and he was always begging the Wrights to let him try much more than his teachers would permit.

Johnstone's most remarkable idea was that he could loop-the-loop in an aeroplane just as bicycle riders do the trick.

"I've got it all figured out," he would say to Wilbur Wright. "All I have to do is to go up, say, 500 feet, point her down at the sharpest angle she'll stand and then at just the right moment lift the elevating planes. She can't go wrong, I tell you she can't go wrong."

Wright would never listen to argument on this point and told Johnstone if he ever tried the trick he'd never sit in a Wright machine again, no matter whether he succeeded or not.

Johnstone, a native of Kansas City and 30 years old, had traveled all over the United States and in many parts of the world as a trick bicyclist before he became an airman. He joined the staff of the Wright brothers at Dayton on April 1, having been recommended by Roy Knabenshue. His ability as a bicyclist stood him in good stead in keeping his equilibrium in an aeroplane and he learned rapidly.

Johnston's first real opportunity came when Brookins fell from a height of 50 feet into the spectators at Asbury Park, smashing his machine and putting himself out of the flying for several days. The accident crippled the Wright team through the loss of the only flier who had been trained for altitude. Johnstone's task had been to "trim the daisies" in fancy roller coasting and to do tricks at an elevation of 50 and 100 feet.

When Brookins fell into the crowd at Asbury Park Johnstone ordered his craft onto the field almost instantly, and was up circling above the heads of the crowd before Brookins had been taken from beneath the wrecked machine. The next day, when J. Armstrong Drexel broke the American record for altitude, which Brookins had made a few weeks earlier at Atlantic City, Johnstone begged to be permitted to go up and take it back for the Wrights. He had had no training in altitude flying, and Wilbur Wright refused to let him go.

Ordered out for a spin around the track, Johnstone headed his machine upward and gained an altitude of 5,000 feet. He was not skillful then in making the long spiral turns required for climbing, and kept his craft on such an angle that the engine had constantly to lift its entire weight.

It was at Belmont Park that Johnstone showed himself one of the greatest of the flyers. While he did not capture the important speed and cross-country prizes, his feats were regarded as the most important of the international meet in establishing the abilities of the aeroplane.

His feat in flying with Hoxsey in a wind that drove them backward accomplished something that all the theorists had said was impossible, because no heavier-than-air machine could travel backwards, and because no machine could live in wind of such velocity as to prevent forward progress. The feat among aeroplanists ranks as one of the greatest yet accomplished.

On the final day, just as the flyers were turning hangarward at evening, Johnstone went into the sunset and winged his way for altitude and endurance. For 1 hour and 45 minutes he continued to cruise across the sky, and then slid down out of the heavens with a barograph showing an altitude of 9,714 feet. It was a world's record, but was under the 10,000-foot mark that Wilbur Wright wanted to see him make. The biplane he used was the Wright "baby roadster," out for its first important trip, and until then of unknown qualities. It was the same machine in which Hoxsey fell at Baltimore a few days later in trying to excel Johnstone's record.

Mrs. Johnstone, whom he met in Germany several years ago, and his young boy, Ralph Johnstone, Jr., accompanied him on most of his aerial engagements, and the youngster always insisted that he was going to grow up to be an aviator like his father. He had his picture taken several times sitting beside his father on the aeroplane.

WRIGHT DEEPLY GRIEVED.

Wilbur Says He Awaits an Avviator's Account of Fatal Accident.

Ralph Johnstone's widow, who is at the Hotel Cumberland in this city, got the news of her husband's death from Wilbur Wright, who also is in New York. Mrs. Johnstone was prostrated, and denied herself to callers.

Mr. Wright said he had no details of what had happened beyond the press reports shown him.

"I can't say anything about the accident except to express the grief I feel," he said. "The spectacle of the thing as it appears to the onlooker or even a newspaper man who has seen many flights and some accidents is of no value to me. What I want is a description of how the thing happened from an aviator who saw it.

"The altitude—I mean the altitude of Denver—appears to have had nothing to do with it. Johnstone had said he considered the air tricky; perhaps it was, but Johnstone didn't lose control, the account says. I understand that his left plane collapsed.

"When Brookins and Hoxsey report perhaps I can make some analysis of what happened. I suppose it will never be possible to tell much from the wrecked machine. That left plane was damaged yesterday, wasn't it? Our men are all careful, but perhaps it was inadequately repaired."

Special to The New York Times.

DAYTON, Ohio, Nov. 17.—Persons familiar with the affairs of the Wright aviators said to-night that the rivalry between Ralph Johnstone and Hoxsey had caused the Wrights repeatedly to remonstrate with both on the desperate chances they were taking. The inventors are said to have considered taking drastic measures to discipline them. Even at the testing grounds here it was necessary at the practice flights for the Wrights to insist that Johnstone take as few chances as possible.

Manager Russell of the Wright factory says that the tendency of all aviators is to take great chances, even when making private practice flights, but that when the plaudits of a huge crowd are added none but the most conservative are able to resist attempts at something more sensational than rivals have to their credit.

JUDGE BALDWIN SEEN AS ANOTHER HUGHES

Connecticut's Vigorous Septuagenarian Governor-Elect Talks Five Minutes—No More.

A STERN MAN, MILD SPOKEN

Single-Handed He Hopes to Give Democratic Reform to Connecticut Through Republican Legislature.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 17.—Rejuvenated Democracy did an odd thing in Connecticut on Election Day. On the crest of the Democratic tidal wave that swept the country there was borne into power a man who in years and in distinguished public service had reached a point where the State had declared him entitled to spend his remaining years in honorable retirement. Judge Simeon E. Baldwin, the Democratic Governor-elect, is 72 years old, and was retired from the bench, having reached the age limit two years ago.

While the campaign was in progress the Republicans launched the assertion that the Democratic nominee was too old to discharge the duties of the office to which he aspired. Judge Baldwin's answer was to send word to the Chairman of the Democratic State Committee demanding that an extensive speaking schedule be mapped out for him. From that moment until the campaign closed there were few days on which the candidate made less than two speeches.

Now that the battle has been won Gov.-elect Baldwin is preparing to engage as cheerfully as he did in the aggressive fighting during the campaign in the task of reforming the State administration of Connecticut along Democratic lines, although that is certain to involve more than one bitter conflict with a Republican Legislature.

To a correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES, who had a short talk with Judge Baldwin in his law office in this city to-day, the venerable Governor-elect said with a smile that he did not anticipate any serious trouble. But men who have been close observers of political developments in the State for over a generation, and who are thoroughly conversant with the plans of the Republican machine leaders, declare without hesitation that Gov. Baldwin and his Democratic allies in the Legislature will be on the firing line constantly from the time he takes office.

Governor-elect Baldwin was discovered by THE TIMES correspondent behind a large flat-top desk, on which congratulatory letters and messages were piled high over its entire width and length. Judge Baldwin is thus a very busy man indeed.

Five-Minute Interview Only.

"All I can give you," he said to the correspondent, "is five minutes, and I find it difficult to spare even that time."

"In this State," said the Governor-elect, "I happen to be the only nominee on the State ticket whom the Democratic Party elected. The new Legislature will be strongly Republican, although the Democratic members will be considerably more numerous in the lawmaking body than they have been for a great number of years."

"That will mean that you will have a hostile Legislature to deal with when you attempt to bring about reforms along lines indicated in the Democratic platform," suggested the correspondent.

The Governor-elect of Connecticut has become known to the general public as a stern man. But one would have to travel far to find a man as mild mannered and soft spoken as Simeon E. Baldwin. A wan smile appeared on his face at the suggestion that there might be trouble.

"I should hope," he replied, "that as the Legislature and I in my official capacity both have the same purpose in view—to give the State of Connecticut the best government of which we are capable—there will be no serious difficulty. There can be none if we are all working toward that end."

"If difficulties should arise, will you adopt the plan used by Gov. Hughes in New York—of appealing to the people in public speeches and have them act as arbiters between yourself and the Legislature?" Judge Baldwin was asked.

"I should not care to anticipate any trouble," was the reply. "I do not believe there will be any. The questions that are likely to come up with reference to legislation are not party questions."

According to Judge Baldwin, the campaign in Connecticut which resulted in his election was void of State issues.

"The great issue of the campaign there was the tariff," said the Governor-elect. "I think the verdict of the people not only in this State but elsewhere thoroughly establishes the fact that there is a general conviction among the people, first, that the rates are too high and the free list too small, and, secondly, that the Republican party broke faith in working so few changes in the Aldrich Tariff bill the schedules in the Dingley Act.

"Another issue on which the people of Connecticut are pretty well united is in opposition to the New Nationalism of which ex-President Roosevelt is the prophet. I think the popular verdict on that doctrine in the recent election was impressive enough not to permit of misinterpretation.

People Expect Tariff Changes.

¶I think the lesson of the campaign is that the people of this country expect from the next House of Representatives substantial changes in the tariff laws. I believe further that if such changes are proposed—not too radical or sweeping in their nature—the probabilities are that the United States Senate will be disposed to concur in, and the President to approve of, such changes."

"Do you consider the Democratic sweep this year as a forerunner of a Democratic victory in the Nation two years hence?" the Governor-elect was asked.

"I do, yes—I think everything points in that direction," was his reply.

"How did the controversy you had with Col. Roosevelt over the Haxey case and his characterization of you as a retrogressive and a Bourbon affect the vote?" asked the correspondent.

"Oh, it lost me some votes; it gained me some, maybe."

"Did the labor vote divide on party lines, or did other parties receive the [illegible] conjecture," said the Governor-elect. "The Socialist vote was much larger than in other years, and the result would indicate that the Socialist gain was the Republican loss, or largely so."

"Where does your controversy with Col. Roosevelt stand now?" Judge Baldwin was asked.

"Just where it stood when the campaign closed," was the reply.

"Do you intend to sue the Colonel for slander as you have intimated?"

"I have no statement to make regarding that now," said the Governor-elect.

"In view of the assertions made by Col. Roosevelt that your decisions from the bench were hostile to workmen, would you say what recommendations you intend to make to the Legislature regarding an employers' liability law, which was recommended in the Democratic State platform?"

"I don't care to anticipate any action I may take with reference to that subject—I am afraid your five minutes have expired," said the Governor-elect softly.

Judge Baldwin's Policies.

While the Governor-elect did not commit himself to-day upon the course he expects to follow when he has been seated in the Governor's chair, his attitude on the questions agitating the people of Connecticut was made very clear during the campaign, while Judge Baldwin traveled from one end of the State to the other, proclaiming himself the candidate to whom the nomination had come "unsought and unbought."

The four issues in the State campaign—they were issues until the Republicans were compelled to fall in line and adopt platform declarations virtually identical with those that occurred in the Democratic platform—were regulation of public service corporations, enactment of an effective employers' liability law, the removal of the $5,000 limit as compensation for deaths by accident caused by negligence, and the passage of a law to stamp out corrupt practices in primaries and elections. The three first named planks in the Democratic platform were adopted by the Republicans, also. But the Republican platform recommended no enactment directed against corrupt practices, though the present Republican Legislature in this State distinguished itself by drawing the teeth of the Corrupt Practices act already on the statute books of Connecticut.

Judge Baldwin came out during the campaign for both an effective public service commissions law and an employers' liability act which should place the laws of this State in accord with the most advanced thought on the subject.

In both instances Judge Baldwin worked confusion in the Republican camp by declaring that he was willing to use as a starting point in his efforts for such legislation the reports and bills submitted to the present Republican Legislature by Republican commissions appointed to investigate these subjects.

It has been the habit under the Republican régime in this State to allay public clamor arising out of any cause, when strong enough, by appointing commissions to investigate and have the Republican Legislature afterward ignore the reports. In both these instances the recommendations made by the commissions were so much to the point that the interests affected thought best to have the Legislature they dominated adopt a similar course.

Mr. Baldwin as Governor consequently will be in a rather strong position when he takes up the reins of State Government, even though his only tool in working out legislative reforms is to be a Republican Legislature. For the commissions which investigated these two subjects having been created by the Republican Legislature, the measures they recommended must be looked upon as Republican Party measures. By framing his recommendations along the lines suggested in these reports, with such modifications as might suggest themselves to a man as learned in the law and the principles underlying the law as Judge Baldwin, the Democratic Governor will be in a position where he may hope to force the Republican Legislature to adopt his recommendations or appear before the people in the position of opposing Republican measures.

It was by the pronounced stand he took on the question of employers' liability that Judge Baldwin brought about the situation where the issue pending between him and Col. Roosevelt with reference to the attitude of the former Judge toward questions affecting labor became a vital campaign issue. There is no escape from the inference that the result was a vote of confidence in the man the Colonel had assailed with such ruthless persistence.

Baldwin Compared With Hughes.

There are some strong points of resemblance between Governor-elect Baldwin of Connecticut and ex-Gov. Hughes of New York. Like Mr. Hughes, Judge Baldwin adds to the habit of wearing whiskers a profound knowledge of the law, a tremendous respect for the Constitution, an enormous capacity for work, a penetrating intellect and methodical habits of thought and action.

The political manipulators in the State of New York accused Gov. Hughes of being frigid in his treatment of them and difficult to approach. The politicians of Connecticut, according to all indications, run the risk of getting frostbitten if they attempt to be too familiar with the next Governor, although the latter is a loyal party man.

Judge Baldwin is known here as a Puritan of the Puritans. A man who knows him told THE TIMES correspondent he did not think Baldwin could do anything wrong if he tried, and, moreover, that he did not think he had ever done or said anything that could be regarded as foolish or even indiscreet, or ever indulged in any luxury or pleasure likely to harm him mentally or physically. The Governor-elect, in fact, is an old-fashioned gentleman who leads a rather solitary life in a stately old mansion, and whose law office recalls that of the lawyer of a generation ago. Like Mayor Gaynor of New York, Judge Baldwin delights in long and solitary walks.

Few men know him intimately or well. When he entered the campaign he told the voters that he came to them out of a silence that had lasted for seventeen long years. He is known to be an intense partisan, but his views have changed with years and changing conditions.

It is generally predicted that there will be little of mawkish sentiment about the Baldwin administration. He will bring to it a philosophy tinged with austere utilitarianism. In the campaign the Republican managers went over some of his writings, and afterward in the desperate fight they made to defeat him charged him with being an advocate of the whipping post and of the painless putting to death of incurables to save the taxpayers the expense of caring for them. Only in the case of the last of these allegations was a retraction forced.

From time to time reports of widespread charity practiced by the Democratic Governor-elect comes out through the grateful eulogy of some one who has been benefited. It is said that Judge Baldwin is thoroughly ashamed of a softness of heart that his speech sometimes betrays, but which is not reflected in his appearance. His left hand does not know what his right hand is doing when he is dispensing charity. He will look grimly at an applicant for such aid, scowl at him, freeze him with looks and manners for five minutes and then when satisfied that it is a deserving case his left hand will disappear in his pocket only to reappear with whatever in the way of money the case seems to merit or call for, while [illegible] with the stern injunction: "Don't [illegible]

GRISCOM COMMITTEE IN A HOT WRANGLE

Gruber Resents the Republican County Chairman's Comments and Starts the Row.

A SLAP AT ROOSEVELT

He Calls on the Leaders to Pledge Themselves for Taft's Renomination in 1912.

An observer would have thought that an old-time Democratic political meeting was in progress if he had chanced to drop in at the El Dorado Casino in West Fifty-second Street last night. But it was only a meeting of the Republican County Committee. About 200 Republican district leaders and their friends had gathered to discuss the recent defeat of the party. Lloyd C. Griscom, Chairman of the committee, started the rumpus by casually asserting that the Republicans of the city didn't do so badly after all when the Chanler year was remembered.

Col. Abe Gruber wanted to know why Ezra P. Prentice, Chairman of the State Committee, shouldn't have a straight ticket to the "down-and-out club." He made a point of the attack of Col. Roosevelt and others on the members of the Old Guard, notably William Barnes, Jr., and James Wadsworth, suggesting that the Nov. 8 epitaph on the Republican tombstone might have been different if Mr. Barnes et al. had not been "wilfully insulted."

This brought out hisses for Col. Gruber and the Old Guard and cheers for Mr. Griscom, Mr. Prentice, Col. Roosevelt, and President Taft. This was about as far as the meeting got, for a level-headed leader, who foresaw the prospect of a Kilkenny fight, put a hurried motion to adjourn and it was carried. A fight to the finish is expected at the next meeting.

Things Went Wrong.

Chairman Griscom fixed it up at the meeting of the Executive Committee of the County Committee during the afternoon that last night's meeting should be after the style of a good-natured wake with only nice things to be said of "the departed." Consequently when he mounted the platform and faced the audience, which looked friendly, he started off with an explanation of what had happened, and surmised that things might be much worse. He began:

"We have passed through the election and the party has suffered a severe defeat. [Groans from all over the hall.] While there cannot be any general cause for rejoicing on our part, nevertheless an analysis of the election returns from our county may give us some comfort. Despite the condition of the Democratic Party throughout the country and the landslide here, our county was able to hold its own."

Mr. Griscom then sought to show that while the Democratic majority in the county was increased by about 19,000 votes, with the same ratio for the other counties in the city, the returns from rock-ribbed Republican counties up-State were much worse. He said it also showed other things. For instance, he said, before the election he had asked the district leaders to furnish him an estimate of the result.

The leaders from eight districts, the Eighth, Tenth, Sixteenth, Twenty-sixth, Thirtieth, Thirty-second, South, and Thirty-third, did better than their estimates showed. Mr. Griscom thought this was a good opportunity to show his appreciation of the work the leaders of two districts—Samuel Koenig of the Sixth and John J. Lyons of the Thirty-first—had done. When he said they had carried their districts for Mr. Stimson there were no cheers for the Republican Gubernatorial candidate.

Looking to the Future.

"Regarding the general situation in the county," went on Mr. Griscom, "I feel that this is the time to prepare for the future and bring the organization to greater perfection, so that we can go before the people at the next election in a much stronger condition. Despite the Democratic landslide, Tammany Hall was unable to increase its vote. I rely upon you members of the committee for your loyal assistance and support."

Col. Gruber, who had been fidgeting in his seat throughout the discourse, here jumped up and demanded to be heard. There was an uproar at once, but Col. Grubers's friends who were in the back of the hall demanded that he be heard. Mr. Gruber disdained the platform and addressed his remarks from the floor.

"The returns from up-State show that Mr. Dix received 90,000 less votes than did Chanler," Col. Gruber was heard to say when the noise had subsided. "I am willing to take a long-distance shot and say that although it is two years from the next election, William H. Taft can carry the State by not less than 150,000."

Cheers for President Taft interrupted him for several minutes.

"Fully 150,000 Republicans failed to vote," went on Col. Gruber, "and fully 50,000 voted for Dix. The causes which led to this may be summed up by each man himself. As for me, I am willing to say that when the Republican Party leaves its Republican moorings and casts aside Republican tradition it will go down to defeat."

Mr. Gruber said something about what the Republican party stands for, but the crowd was impatient for him to get more specific and it howled for him to proceed.

"In the last election," he went on, "we were willing to disregard the wishes of the majority of the Republicans in the State and experiment to see how much we could gain by preaching the doctrines of the enemy."

He's for Taft in 1912.

Cheers, hoots, and cat calls drowned Col. Gruber's voice for several minutes, and when he was next heard he was declaring that if President Taft was willing to carry out the policies of the party he would find the party in this State united and ready to stand behind him.

"Here and now, to-night, I want to begin the fight for his renomination," said Col. Gruber, amid loud applause. "I want to pledge the Republican organization of this county to his renomination. Who can say we were not misled in this State in the attacks which were made upon the so-called Old Guard, men who led us to victory many times in the past and whose opinions were worth considering? I want to say that it is time the Republicans in this country got together.

"After the Saratoga Convention certain men who should have known better sought to besmirch and belittle the best fighters in the party. A grievous error was committed when Barnes [loud cheers] was publicly slighted. He had no other course to pursue than to resign from the State Committee.

"The first thing we ought to do," said Col. Gruber, raising his voice to the highest pitch and raising one arm toward the ceiling, "is to demand the resignation of Ezra Prentice as Chairman of the State Committee."

Hisses and cries of derision completely drowned Col. Gruber's voice, and he had a hard time making himself heard.

"We don't make political leaders over night," he shouted at the deriding audience. "The game of politics is a science and it must be learned through years of work. Just think! This man Prentice created new over-night leaders to take the place of a Barnes and a Wadsworth. The time has gone by when successful Republican leaders can be discriminated against. The fight for the party must be made around issues and not around men who can draw big crowds. We learned that on Election Day. It is the duty of a State Chairman to bring about harmony all the way from Montauk Point to Lake Erie."

Col. Gruber was cheered this time, and he dropped into his seat with a smile of satisfaction.

INDORSE LIPPITT FOR SENATE

Rhode Island Republican Committee's Choice as Aldrich's Successor.

PROVIDENCE, R. I. Nov. 17.—Henry F. Lippitt, candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Nelson W. Aldrich, was indorsed by the Republican State Committee at its annual meeting to-day. While the vote was not announced, it was said unofficially to have been 26 to 12.

The minority favors the election of Judge Lebaron B. Colt, of the United States Circuit Court, who has announced that he would accept the office if elected. Lippitt, a wealthy textile manufacturer of this city, is popularly believed to be the choice of Senator Aldrich as his successor.

$1,000 Went to State Committee and $250 to Own Campaign Fund.

ALBANY, Nov. 17.—Henry L. Stimson, defeated Republican candidate for Governor, certified to the Secretary of State to-day that he spent $1,292.63 in aid of his candidacy, which included $1,0000 contribution to the Republican State Committee and $250 to the Stimson campaign fund. Mr. Stimson says he gave $25 in tips to hotel and Pullman employes, and paid $2.65 for a room and breakfast at Albany on Nov. 3, which was the only expense of this kind during the campaign. He spent $10 for two boxes of cigars for use at State committee headquarters.

"In addition to the foregoing," says the statement, "my horse and carriage was used at Huntington, N. Y., on Nov. 8 to assist in bringing voters to the polls."

Lieutenant Governor-elect Thomas F. Conway certified that he spent $1,990.11, mostly in campaign contributions to the Democratic committees in his home county, and for printing and lithographs, while his Republican opponent, Edward Schoeneck of Syracuse, spent $432 for printing, postage, and hotel expenses.

Charles Edward Russell, candidate for Governor of the Socialist Party, spent $325.

The Campaign Committee of the Socialist Party in New York County received $3,088, and spent $3,085.

Other statements filed include:

For Senate—John B. Rose, Twenty-fifth District, $1,920; Senator Edgar T. Brackett, Thirtieth District, $1,000; Senator-elect Robert H. Gittins, Forty-seventh District, $156; John T. Morrison, Thirty-second District, $163, and Michael J. Callanan, Thirty-third District, $1,318.

For Congress—John Conley, Thirty-first District, $83, and John Joseph Kindred, Fourteenth District, $711.

Joseph A. Lawson, Democratic candidate for Supreme Court Justice in the Third Judicial District, spent $337, while Patrick L. Callahan, Democratic candidate for Supreme Court Justice in the Second District, disbursed $2,423.

WOMEN CAST ILLEGAL VOTES.

Oregon Village Election Judge Told to Bar Them from Polling Booths.

SALEM, Ore., Nov. 17.—B. L. Barry, Election Judge at Dayton, Ore., has written to Attorney General A. M. Crawford stating that women in his village are in the habit of voting, and he wants to know what can be done to keep them away from the voting booths.

How long the women of the little town have been casting illegal votes Barry does not state. The Attorney General replied advising Barry that it is the duty of Oregon election judges to bar women voters except at school elections.

ROOSEVELT, BEAMING, BACK AT HIS DESK

And, by George, He Feels Just as Well as He Looks, but Not a Word About Election.

HE'S IN LITERATURE AGAIN

The Politicians Keep Away—But Col. W. R. Nelson of Kansas Says the Fight Isn't Over Yet.

Theodore Roosevelt, Contributing Editor, appeared at the office of The Outlook magazine yesterday for the first time since the Democratic avalanche struck the United States and Oyster Bay on Nov. 8. It was in fact the first time Col. Roosevelt has appeared in public since that historic occasion. And he said, when pressed by reporters for a statement, that he hadn't a thing to say.

"Not a word—not a word—not a word," he repeated several times when the request was made to him for an explanation of Republican defeat. He contrived, however, to let it be known that his face was set toward the future and that he didn't care to dwell upon what had gone before.

The Colonel got into New York about 11 o'clock, and went direct to his office. He pushed his way briskly through the group of waiting reporters with the remark that he would see all hands later. In a few minutes he was out of his office ready to face the battery of questions.

"How do you feel, Colonel?" was the first one.

"By George! just as well as I look," he replied with the old confident snap of the teeth. "Don't I look pretty good?"

Everyone averred that the Colonel did look well, and he seemed to be mighty well pleased about it. Someone noticed that he had on a new suit, and hazarded the remark that he might have won it on an election bet, but the Colonel let that pass unnoticed.

"How about the election; have you any explanation to make?" was asked.

The Colonel saw it coming and was ready.

"Now, not a word of comment," he shot back. "There is absolutely nothing for me to say. I am not going to make any comment on the election now or in the future."

It was useless to persist. The Colonel was not to be taken off his guard. As a last attempt one young man wanted to know if the Colonel had figured it out on the pro rata basis that the Republicans were not as badly defeated in New York State as they were elsewhere.

"Print that in the editorial columns of The Sun and The Evening Post," came back from the Colonel, and with a laugh he broke through the line and regained his office.

At luncheon time he was out again, and started for the elevator with President C. R. Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin and Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, President of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

"You see," said the Colonel with a smile, "here is a chance for you to do some more speculating. On my right I have a representative of the radical La Follette wing, while on the other hand is a representative of the—the—"

"Ticker crowd?" suggested some one.

"Yes, that's it, the ticker crowd," replied Col. Roosevelt with a meaning smile.

The familiar political atmosphere of The Outlook office was changed back to a literary one as soon as the Colonel arrived. Not a politician called all day. Although the office of County Chairman Griscom is just across the street, Mr. Griscom did not appear.

"The West understands Roosevelt," Col. W. R. Nelson of the Kansas City Star, one of the Colonel's callers said, and it understands that he is not merely the leader of the Republisan Party. He is the leader of the American people. The parties are breaking up. Under the influence of the old party ties it may take two years, it may take four, and it may take six for the people to come together in the fight for their own rights, but when it does come there won't be anything to it but Roosevelt.

When he returned from luncheon Col. Roosevelt went through another large heap of mail. Secretary Harper said the Colonel had at last caught up with his enormous correspondence and was ready for new work.

Oriental Rugs
BIJAI or Kurdistan Rugs. Kurdistan is in the southern part of Persia, and is about two months' trip by camel train from the nearest railroad. Therefore, Bijai, which is a little village in Kurdistan, must needs be in a most primitive state, therefore, every Rug woven there is hand made and the dye which is used is purely vegetable, secured from the roots and berries of various shrubs.
When a dye is of a combination as above, it leaves the wool in the natural condition, and a Rug dyed in such a manner is practically indestructible. In addition, as the Rugs are mellowed by age, which is impossible by any other method, the sheen or silkiness is almost indescribable.
The fact that they are 3 or 3½ or some of them 4 feet wide and 6 to 7½ feet long means that a Rug equal to this would be sold by exclusive Rug shops at from $25 to $35, and even more.

TOLSTOY DELIRIOUS; HOPE ALMOST GONE

Physicians Admit It Will Be Next to a Miracle if the Count Recovers.

HIS HEART IS VERY WEAK

Author Said to Desire Reconciliation with Church—Unhappy Lot of the Special Correspondents.

ASTAPOVA, Russia, Nov. 17.—Although hope has not yet been given up the attendants of Count Tolstoy recognize that his life is in the balance, and that although the strong constitution of the great Russian has carried him through other grave struggles against disease his system has become so weakened and his heart has responded so feebly to restoratives that it will be next to a miracle if he recovers from his present attack.

During the early stages of the inflammation of the lungs, from which he is suffering, it was the temperature which gave cause for anxiety; now it is the heart. The patient's temperature was not particularly high to-day, but the heart action was extremely bad.

Tolstoy alternated during part of the time between unconsciousness and delirium.

Early this evening it was announced that the inflammation had been confined to a comparatively small section of the lung, and that expectoration was free. The heart, however, caused constant anxiety. Strophanthus, a powerful stimulant, was administered. Oxygen was not resorted to.

The physicians have issued frequent bulletins, in which they refer to the persistent high temperature. A clyster was administered as a means of relieving this, and as an immediate result the patient's temperature fell from 101.5 to 100; less, however, than was expected. Temporarily there was easier breathing, and the pulse dropped slightly.

The patient faced a critical night, it is stated.

TULA, Nov. 17.—Count Tolstoy's condition for many hours has been such as to give rise to frequent reports that the end had come. Such a report emanated from Moscow last night, and it was some time before its falsity could be established.

The aged author passed a restless night at the home of the station master at Astapova. At 8 o'clock this morning he was sleeping. His temperature, which was 101 last night, had fallen to 100.4. The inflammation of the lungs was less menacing. On the other hand, the pulse was alarmingly high and intermittent. The weakness of the heart action was the cause of the greatest anxiety. The case was aggravated by the condition of the kidneys, which were greatly swollen and inflamed.

The lot of the crowd of press correspondents who have been sent to the scene is not a happy one. They have not been able to obtain indoor sleeping quarters or a place to eat. The only telegraph facilities are furnished by the operator at the flag station, and they are wholly inadequate.

Last night's report that Tolstoy had died was credited generally to Prince Obolenski, and was accepted as authentic at St. Petersburg and Moscow, where the story was printed, with obituary notices. In the course of the night an attempt was made to communicate with Astapova from here, but the flag station operator had retired, and when a positive denial of the rumor was finally obtained many papers had gone to press with the announcement of Tolstoy's death.

SYNOD MAY FORGIVE TOLSTOY.

Likely to Withdraw Excommunication —Strange Scene at Astapova.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 18.—A telegram to The Times from St. Petersburg says that the Holy Synod on Wednesday discussed the question of rescinding the writ of excommunication against Count Tolstoy. The assembled prelates are understood to be predisposed in his favor.

A great impression has been caused by Bishop Parthienius of Tula, who recently visited Tolstoy and had a prolonged conversation with him. The Bishop, without retailing the substance of Tolstoy's words, which he regards as having the secret character of those of the confessional, has proclaimed his conviction that Tolstoy wishes to be reconciled to the Church.

The Holy Synod will, it is expected, soften the rigors of excommunication. At present no prayers can be offered for Tolstoy's recovery. It is rumored that the clergy of Kozelsk refused such a request from the parishioners.

The little station of Astopova, on the Riazan-Ural, where Tolstoy was compelled to interrupt his journey to the Caucasus, presents an extraordinary scene. A few sidetracked carriages are the only available refuge from the wintry weather. The Tolstoy family reside in the special car which brought them from Tula. The crowd of correspondents is quartered in others. The waiting room has been converted into an office, and the station master's home, a one-story log house, has been given up to the sick man and his attendants.

Tolstoy lies in a room with two windows, overlooking the railway, but these are kept closely curtained. There are two beds in the room, and the patient is moved from one to the other.

Tolstoy occasionally asks Count Vladimir Tchertkoff, who, with Dr. Makovetsky and Countess Alexandra Tolstoy, is constantly at the bedside, to read extracts from his favorite authors. His son Sergius suddenly entered the sickroom on Tuesday. Tolstoy asked with some alarm, "What has happened? Why have you come?"

Evidently the invalid does not realize the gravity of his illness and fears an attempt on the part of his family to persuade him to abandon his project of retirement from the world.

In order to spare the Count from dangerous emotions his wife and the other children have not entered the sickroom and he is not aware of their proximity.

MEXICAN ARMY ACTIVE.

Gen. Villar Moves His Headquarters—Due to Another Plot?

LAREDO, Texas, Nov. 17.—That the Mexican Government is moving swiftly to crush any rebellion that may be brewing was shown when Gen. Villar, commanding the Frontier Department of the Mexican Army, arrived in Nueva Laredo to-day with his staff, and officially announced that his headquarters would be changed from Matamoras to Nueva Laredo.

The greater portion of the Twenty-third Regiment will arrive within a few days.

The swift change in base on the part of the Mexican commander is regarded as very significant. None of the Mexican officals will discuss the matter.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Everything is quiet along the Mexican border, and the Texas authorities are taking the proper measures to obviate any possibility of clashes between citizens of Mexico and the United States, according to a telegram received to-day by the State Department from Gov. Campbell of Texas.

Gov. Campbell said he had no news of trouble in Uvalde, where a disturbance between Americans and Mexicans was reported.

The department had heard the rumor and asked the Governor for a report.

CONFIDENT OF RECIPROCITY.

Lord Grey Speaks of Negotiations in Opening Canadian Parliament.

OTTAWA, Nov. 17.—Parliament was opened here to-day with the usual picturesque ceremonies. The speech from the throne, delivered by Earl Grey, expressed gratification over the settlement of the fisheries dispute and confidence in a satisfactory outcome of the tariff negotiations between the United States and Canada. Lord Grey said in part:

"The desirability of more equitable tariff arrangements between the United States and Canada has long been felt on this side of the border. The commercial policy of the Republic has not hitherto favored imports from Canada. We have bought largely from the United States, but they have bought much less from us in return. It is gratifying to find that a more liberal policy is now favored by the neighboring country, and that the Government at Washington expresses a desire to establish better trade relations with the Dominion.

"Following the negotiations which took place some months ago between the President of the United States and my Government, the results of which were at the time communicated to Parliament, a further conference between representatives of the two countries has been held at Ottawa. While no conclusions have been reached, and no formal proposals made, the free discussion of the subject that has taken place encourages my Government to hope that at an early day, without any sacrifice of Canada's interests, an arrangement may be made which will admit many of the products of the Dominion into the United States on satisfactory terms."

Parliament adjourned until Monday.

The Conservative Party, hitherto known as the High Tariff Party, has made a low tariff move by givin notice of a resolution in the name of Arthur Meighen of Portage La Prairie calling for a reduction of the duties on agricultural implements.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier will now be compelled to declare his policy. The Conservatives by their action have made a strong bid for the agricultural vote, which is strong enogh to put them in power.

PARIS CHEERS OUR SAILORS.

Others Are in London—Four Waylaid and Robbed at Brest.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—Groups of American bluejackets visiting Paris are everywhere objects of interest and are cordially welcomed.

One hundred men from the battleship Georgia arrived from Brest this morning, and as they passed out of the railway station, apparently eager for the first glimpse of the French metropolis, they were repeatedly photographed by representatives of Paris journals. A crowd of commuters arriving simultaneously at the station greeted the Americans with handclapping.

Two hundred seamen came in from Cherbourg this afternoon. The system of giving the men shore leave in batches of 100 and 200 will be continued throughout the visit. Each group will remain in Paris five days. American Ambassador Bacon and Lieut. Commander Chapin, the American Naval Attaché, are arranging with an agency for excursions for the men to points of interest, including drives to Versailles and Fontainebleau. Mr. Bacon will give a dinner to the officers of the fleet.

The streets of Cherbourg were animated to-day by the presence of American bluejackets, who fraternized with the French seamen. The city is preparing a festival at the Municipal Theatre for the entertainment of the visitors.

At Brest last night four American bluejackets were waylaid and robbed by a gang of waterside roughs. The police arrested the ringleader.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Lord Mayor and Corporation will entertain a large number of the American officers and men at luncheon in the Guildhall in the course of the stay of the American battleships in the Thames. This afternoon the Corporation voted an expenditures of $10,000 for this purpose.

It is hoped that the visiting bluejackets will march through the city on the occasion of the entertainment, the date of which has not yet been determined.

A large body of men from the battleship Mississippi came into town to-day and drove about in carriages and taxi cabs.

WOMEN ADD A NEW STAR.

Suffrage Flag Decorated to Mark the Victory in Washington.

The Harlem Club of Mrs. Belmont's Political Equality Association pinned the fifth star the Washington State star, on its big "Votes for Women" banner last night, and ex-Senator Stacy of Idaho swept everything before him in a speech, in Madison Hall, Madison Avenue and 111th Street.

"We're moving," cried the Senator, preaching woman suffrage.

"Hurrah!" cried the audience.

"Get on to the band wagon while you have a chance."

"Hurrah!" cried the audience again.

"Come along with the tide," continued the Senator. "Women are better judges of good men than the men are themselves."

"We pay taxes but why should we know just where our earnings and incomes go?" recited little Miss Rose Markowitz, and the audience applauded so that she had to give an encore and recited the Suffrage Alphabet. It began:

> A stands for Adam, who hid behind the skirts of Eve—figuratively.
>
> H stands for home, which is supposed in the eyes of many men to furnish women with a place to wash dishes.
>
> T stands for trouble, something there will be if the women do not get the vote.
>
> V stands for vote, the only legal tender recognized by the Legislature.

The R that stands for rebellion, Miss Inez Milholland took for a text of a little address she made. She believed there should be rebellion for the enfranchisement of women by the "people of this country, the product of rebellion." She announced a ball for Jan. 2, and invited every one to buy tickets. Mrs. Belmont made a long address, and Miss Podell, the superintendent of the Harlem Club, thanked her in its name. The new star was pinned in place by Miss Fannie Leavett with suffrage buttons. There was music and and audience that filled the holl.

WOMEN IN A STREET FIGHT.

Irate Wife Attacks a Stenographer and the Police Get Them.

Shoppers who were waiting for cars in the neighborhood of Livingston and Bond Streets, Brooklyn, witnessed a lively encounter between two well-dressed women last evening about 5 o'clock. A policeman came along and locked the women up on the charge of disorderly conduct.

At the Adams Street station house it was learned that the prisoners were Mrs. Meta Wulff, the wife of Samuel Wulff of 185 Spencer Street, and Miss Anna Monasse, who lives at 527 Putnam Avenue, both of Brooklyn. The prisoners were bailed out shortly after their arrest, and will be arraigned in the Adams Street Court to-day.

Mrs. Wulff told a story after her arrest which apparently gave the cause of her encounter with Miss Monasse. She said that the other woman is employed as a stenographer in the same office where her husband works, and accused her of alienating the affections of her husband.

"I learned that they were to meet in a department store in Fulton Street at 5 o'clock, Mrs. Wulff said, "and I went there. I saw them meet and go to the street through an entrance in Livingston Street. I followed them. I walked up to the two of them and slapped Miss Monasse's face."

Mrs. Wulff said she left her home last July to go to the country for the benefit of her health. She returned home to learn that during her absence her husband and Miss Monasse had been seen frequently in each other's company. Mrs. Wulff said she remonstrated with the other woman, but her protests were of no avail.

Miss Monasse denied that she had done anything wrong, and declared that Mrs. Wulff was jealous.

UNIONISTS ACCEPT ROSEBERY'S SCHEME

Balfour Speaks Before Conservative Conference in Favor of Reform of House of Lords.

NO HOME RULE CONCESSION

Opposition Leader as Completely Opposed to It as Ever—Lords Pass Rosebery's Propositions.

NOTTINGHAM, Nov. 17.—The Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, the leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, addressed the Conference of Conservative Associations, an important annual political gathering, here to-night. It was on account of this engagement that Premier Asquith consented to delay the presentation of his official statement in Parliament until to-morrow.

Mr. Balfour dealt with the present crisis from all angles, and outlined the policies of the Unionists. Tariff reform, he said, still stood as the great constructive policy to which the Unionists were committed, but if the benefits therefrom were only purchasable by throwing the burden on the wage-earning classes he would not touch it. The Unionists proposed to wage no defensive warfare, but to show the country that they had an imperial and domestic policy carrying infinite gains to the country. He advised the audience not to believe all the unauthorized reports concerning the proceedings of the Veto Conference, and said that if the Unionists had agreed upon the only terms which would have made an agreement possible they would have betrayed their cause. He considered that the House of Commons should be the dominant element in a two-chamber system, and that dissensions arising between the two chambers should be submitted for the people's arbitration.

In the opinion of the speaker, the membership of the House of Lords should be reduced to men of public service, to an element elected by the Peers, and to another element, equal to the other two, representing the great bodies of public opinion. He opposed a wholly elective second chamber, because it would usurp the position of the first.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Mr. Balfour's speech at Nottingham was awaited with keen anticipation as an exposition of the Unionists' election programme. Curiosity was aroused as to whether the Unionist leader would make any new departure on the Irish question.

It was quickly evident that except on the question of reform of the House of Lords, on which the Unionist Party is now firmly committed to Lord Rosebery's scheme, the Unionist platform stands as at the last general election in all its principal planks.

Mr. Balfour referred only incidentally to home rule, but sufficiently indicated that he was as completely opposed to it as ever. Thus the Unionist election policy in the main will be to pit the reform of the House of Lords against the Liberals demand for the abolition of the veto power of the Lords.

That the American dollar and the "Irish dictator" will figure largely in the Unionist campaign was indicated by the excitement at the Conference of Conservative Associations at Nottingham this morning, when the Right Hon. Henry Chaplin Unionist Member of Parliament for Wimbledon and ex-President of the Local Government Board, in an opening speech, denounced the Government, which, he said was handing over the rule of the country to "a sworn enemy of England, who, with the gold of foreign millionaires, aspires to dictate our destinies."

An apparently inspired statement issued to-day fixed Nov. 28 as the date for the dissolution of Parliament. The Government, it was asserted, designed to pass the budget before appealing to the country, the debate on the financial measure proceeding in the House of Commons while the Lords discussed the Veto bill.

The situation between the opposing forces to-night, however, appears less aggravated. There is a disposition on the part of the Liberal side to give the Peers a longer time to debate the Veto bill, possibly even to the extent of admitting reasonable amendment, provided that this does not interfere with the principle of the bill.

In the House of Lords, sitting as a committee of the whole, the Earl of Rosebery to-day moved a set of resolutions for the reconstruction of the upper house based upon his resolutions of last March, which had already been accepted by the Lords. To-day's resolutions were:

> 1. That the House of Lords shall consist of Lords of Parliament (A) chosen by the whole body of hereditary Peers from among themselves and by nomination by the Crown; (B) those sitting by virtue of their offices and qualifications held by them, and (C) those chosen from outside.
> 2. That the term of tenure of all Lords of Parliament shall be the same except in the case of those sitting ex officio, who will sit only so long as they hold the office by reason of which they sit.

Speaking in support of his resolutions, Lord Rosebery said he believed that on these principles it would be possible to reform the Upper Chamber to a large extent, solve a great constitutional problem, and maintain the ancient Constitution of the country without the convulsions incident to reform by general elections. In case of a disagreement between the two Houses the dispute should be settled, Lord Rosebery, said, by a joint conference, or, in the event of the failure of the conference, by referendum. There could be no question as to the choice of the country between a reformed House of Lords and the intolerable tyranny of a single Chamber.

Lord Curzon of Kedleston, ex-Viceroy of India, strongly urged the adoption of the resolutions as a practical and generous plan for a reformed Upper House in which the hereditary element would not exercise a preponderant influence.

Lord Courtney, ex-Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, who is regarded as a constitutional authority and is a stanch Liberal, said that though he thought the resolutions vague and illusory, he disagreed completely with the view of the Government that, the Constitutional Conference having failed it was impossible for Parliament to reach an agreement. He deplored the fact that a threat had been made to take the matter out of the hands of Parliament and to appeal to the man in the street.

The Marquis of Lansdowne, the Opposition leader in the House, having supported the resolutions on the ground that it was necessary to bring the Upper House into closer relations with the democracy, and the Earl of Crewe (Government leader) declaring that he would vote vote against them as he thought that a great deal might be said in favor of Lord Roseberry's propositions, the resolutions were carried without a division.

POPE PRAISES FATHER HAGEN

Vatican Observatory Completed by American Astronomer's Efforts.

ROME, Nov. 17.—A ceremony in celebration of the completion of the Vatican Observatory under the direction of Father Hagen, the Jesuit astronomer, was held in the Papal apartment to-day.

It had been planned to have the exercises at the observatory, but although the Pontiff is quite well the weather was unfavorable, and his Holiness feared to venture out.

A speech was made by Cardinal Maffi, President of the observatory, to which the Pope replied, highly commending the work of Father Hagen.

Father Hagen is an American citizen. He was at the Observatory of Georgetown University for twenty-six years, and in the course of that period took out naturalization papers. He has been indefatigable in his work at the Vatican.

FEW TAXICABS RUNNING.

Independents Reap a Harvest Because of Horse Show and Opera Season.

There was practically no change in the taxicab strike situation yesterday. Few cars were sent out by the companies affected by the strike. The New York Taxicab Company sent out fifty machines, the New York Transportation Company eight, and the Connecticut Taxicab Company fifty.

The only excitement yesterday was when 150 men and boys marched to the Hotel Plaza, where they hooted nonunion taxicab chauffeurs. A squad of mounted police dispersed them.

The union taxicab chauffeurs who own their machines are reaping a harvest now. They have nearly all the hotel and club trade, and their earnings this week, it is estimated, will equal their usual earnings of several months. A hotel man estimated yesterday that the loss to the companies affected by the strike will be more than $100,000 this week, owing to the Horse Show and the opening of the opera season.

Michael J. Reagan and James McManus of the State Board of Arbitration made another ineffectual attempt to bring the cab owners and chauffeurs together yesterday afternoon. Treasurer Charles W. Forster of the Chauffeurs' Union told the arbitrators that any proposal for a settlement must come from the bosses.

Allen Lexow, President of the Motor Car Owners' Association, said there was nothing to arbitrate, for the taxicab owners would insist on open shops. R. W. Meade, President of the New York Transportation Company, said that in his opinion the strike was fizzling out.

Policeman Patrick Connolly of the Traffic Squad, while escorting George Coxon, a taxicab chauffeur to his home, at 416 East Sixty-fifth Street, last night, was followed by a gang of men, and both he and Coxon were assaulted. Some one threw carbolic acid on both men.

Connolly fired his pistol over the heads of the crowd, and Policeman Eagan of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station went to the aid of Connolly, and they scattered the crowd.

NEW YORK'S TRI-CENTENARY.

Citizens' Committee Suggests a Reception to Parliaments of the World.

The Citizens' World's Fair Committee has presented a new plan for the celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of the City of New York in view of the adverse report of the Mayor's Committee of One Hundred on the international exposition idea. The Citizens' Committee suggests that a committee of 600 be appointed to give a reception in this city in 1913 to the Parliaments of the world.

It is proposed that the committee be composed in this way: One hundred men appointed by Mayor Gaynor, 100 appointed by the Governor of the State, 100 by the Governor of New Jersey, 75 women appointed by the New York State Regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, 25 women appointed by the New Jersey State Regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, 100 men appointed by the Governor General of Canada, and 100 appointed by the President of the United States.

SHONTS AND WILLCOX IN BRISK ARGUMENT

Times Interview with the Interborough President Draws Quick Retort from the Chairman.

ALL ABOUT SUBWAY BID

Mr. Shonts Affirms That He Made a Definite Offer to Build, and This Is the Point in Dispute.

The interview with President Theodore P. Shonts of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, which THE TIMES printed yesterday morning, started a brisk exchange of compliments between that gentleman and Chairman Willcox of the Public Service Commission, in which Mr. Willcox had the last word about 5 o'clock last night. The question at issue was the assertion of Mr. Shonts that the Interborough had made a definite "proposition" on the subject of extensions to its Subway last Summer. In his interview in THE TIMES this was unqualified.

It was met by Mr. Willcox with an extract from a newspaper interview last July of somewhat different tenor, which in turn drew from Mr. Shonts a letter to Chairman Willcox, declaring that the Interborough's proposals of last Summer were definite. The day closed with a statement from Mr. Willcox quoting another letter, written by Mr. Shonts on July 12, in which he said:

"I know of no proposition which the Interborough has ever made to your Commission regarding subway extensions, except the proposition of March 10, 1909, and the one of June 30, 1909, both of which were declined by the Commission."

In his interview with a TIMES reporter, printed elsewhere, Mr. Shonts said this:

> The Interborough Company, Mr. Shonts declared, had before the commission a very definite, positive, and reasonable proposal for the extension of the present Subway. That proposal was made on July 5 last, he said, in writing to Mayor Gaynor and to Chairman Willcox of the Public Service Commission. President Shonts added that the Public Service Commission had never officially acknowledged the receipt of the Interborough's proposal.

The proposal, or suggestion, by whichever term it may finally be described, contemplated extensions of the Interborough Subway by the use of the city's credit. When Chairman Willcox's attention was called to this statement yesterday he said:

An Item in the Controversy.

"If the Interborough wants to put up a definite legal proposition to build subway extensions with its own money I won't even wait to put my hat on to meet their representatives, and I will go down to the sidewalk to welcome them."

Later a statement was given out at the office of the commission to the effect that that body did not consider the letter of July 5 a "definite proposition," and in this connection the statement quoted an interview in a newspaper of July 26 in which Mr. Shonts said:

> A popular error regarding our recent correspondence with Mayor Gaynor and the Public Service Commission is that in these letters we submitted a proposition to the city authorities. We did no such thing. We were requested to give our views on the subject of the new subways, whether they should parallel the present system or consist of extensions. We gave our views in the form of suggestions, which we believe, if followed, will be to the advantage of the city. We naturally outlined the terms upon which we would be able to consider the operation of the extensions, and although it will mean a great outlay for us and of doubtful benefit for a good many years, we are prepared to go ahead on these plans if the commission sees fit at any time to accept them. We are equally willing to sit back and operate the present system, and let somebody else operate the new subways.

The statement given out by the Commission pointed out further that Chairman Willcox, after receiving the Shonts proposal of July 5, had answered it at length in a communication to the Mayor, through whom it reached Mr. Willcox, and had inclosed a copy of this letter to Mr. Shonts. In the letter to the Mayor in a personal note to Mayor Gaynor, Chairman Willcox described the radical change proposed by this year's plans of the Interborough, involving the use of the city's credit to build its extensions, and its former proposals which concerned only construction on the company's credit. The latter offer, Chairman Willcox argued, involved the surrender of Lexington Avenue, which had been set apart for the Broadway-Lexington Avenue route, whereas the Interborough had previously been willing to take Madison Avenue. This letter to the Mayor continued:

The Commission's View of It.

In view of the enormous profits that the Interborough Company is making from the city-built and city-owned railroad, we think that the company is under corresponding obligations to serve the public by extending its lines and giving additional facilities, and we consider that the terms which were under consideration in the previous negotiations are generally in accord with that obligation.

We have understood that representatives of the city have been in consultation with the Interborough Company for some time, but after reading Mr. Shonts's letter, fear that they were not thoroughly acquainted with the history and scope of the previous negotiations.

While the commission will give due consideration to this or other offers of the Interborough Company, we do not believe that extensions to the Interborough system should be allowed to interfere with the completion of the triborough route, a portion of which is now under construction. The commission is nearly ready to advertise for bids, and if the contracts are approved as to form by the Corporation Counsel it will probably be possible to insert advertisements and begin the distribution of the plans in about two weeks. Do you and the other members of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment believe that, pending the completion of negotiations and of the public discussion to which you have referred, work on the triborough route should be suspended or that advertising for bids should be postponed?

Mr. Shonts Quotes His Offer.

As soon as a copy of the Public Service Commission's statement reached the Interborough offices, Mr. Shonts wrote this letter to Chairman Willcox, and gave it to the newspapers:

> Interborough Rapid Transit Company,
> 165 Broadway,
> New York, Nov. 17, 1910.
>
> Dear Sir: It has just come to our knowledge to-day that there seems to be some misunderstanding on your part as to whether or not my letter of July 5 last contained a definite proposition as to what the Interborough Rapid Transit Company was willing to do toward increasing the rapid transit facilities of this city.
>
> As you will remember, this letter was written in response to a request for suggestions as to what the Interborough Company could do to relieve the traffic congestion in this city, and I had supposed that the following paragraph from my letter could not be misunderstood:
>
> If the city will undertake to build these lines at its own cost upon a plan of construction not materially exceeding in cost or elaboration the plan of the existing Subways, the Interborough Rapid Transit Company stands prepared to equip and operate them as a part of its existing Subway system, and to extend to the citizens of this town the inestimable benefit of two north and south lines upon the east and west sides of Manhattan, with two Brooklyn extensions, and free transfers between all parts of the Subway system for a single 5-cent fare, upon substantially the following terms:
>
> The proposition contained in this letter of July 5 was intended as a definite proposition for the consideration of your commission, and correctly represented what the Interborough was prepared to do at that time and what it is prepared to do now.
>
> Very truly yours,
> T. P. SHONTS, President.
>
> Hon. William R. Willcox, Chairman Public Service Commission for the First District, State of New York, Tribune Building, New York City.

Last Word from Willcox.

To this Mr. Willcox replied as follows, when the reporters visited him late in the afternoon:

"The letter of July 5 from Mr. Shonts, to which he refers in his letter of to-day, was duly received, together with a letter of the same purport sent to the Mayor by Mr. Shonts at the same time. Under date of July 7 I wrote to the Mayor setting forth the point of view of the commission relative to the suggestions contained in Mr. Shonts's letter and a copy of that letter was sent to Mr. Shonts. I did not at the time regard the letter as a proposition for on July 12 I received a letter from Mr. Shonts, in which he states as follows:

"'I know of no proposition which the Interborough has ever made to your commission regarding subway extensions except the proposition of March 10, 1909, and the one of June 30, 1909, both of which were declined by the commission.'

"The views expressed in the letter to the Mayor were the views of the commission regarding the substance of Mr. Shonts's letter, and are the views of the commission at the present time."

There the matter ended for the day. Mayor Gaynor, when asked if he had anything to say on subways, declared that he was determined to hear what was said at the public hearing before expressing himself. No reply was made yesterday to Chairman Willcox's defense of the triborough subway from any of the sources from which attacks on that system have been made.

BANKER CONFESSES FORGERY

Belling Tells the Police He Got $25,000 on Bronx Bank Certificates.

Charles A. Belling, Third Vice President and a Director of the Bronx National Bank, admitted to the police yesterday that he had obtained $25,000 from various banks by forging some old stock certificates of the Bronx National Bank and negotiated them for 60 per cent. He was arrested on Wednesday on complaint of John Bambey, manager of the Bronx Branch of the Knickerbocker Trust Company at Third Avenue and 148th Street, who charged that he had obtained $3,000 from that branch by means of a forged stock certificate.

Capt. Price of the Bronx Detective Bureau said in the Morrisania Court yesterday morning that Belling had admitted obtaining money in the same way from the Merchants' National, the Mutual Reserve and the Northern Bank of New York, among others. He admitted that he had obtained in the last two years $25,000 in that way, all of which he had lost in Wall Street speculation. All Wednesday night, which the young man spent in a cell at police headquarters, he walked up and down his cell, exclaiming:

"Oh, I knew it was coming! That's what I get for acting like a fool. It was just as sure as fate; I couldn't miss it."

Some of the young man's friends appeared at police headquarters and wanted to see him, but were refused admission. One of them was the Rev. Edward Heim, rector of the Church of the Annunciation in Brooklyn, who said that he and Belling had gone to school together.

Magistrate Breen warned the prisoner that the charge against him was a serious one, telling him that he could have counsel and have the case adjourned if he wanted to. The prisoner pleaded not guilty and was held for examination this morning in $20,000 bail. This was not forthcoming, and he was taken to the Harlem Court prison.

It was said at the Merchants' National Bank that Belling had not obtained any money from it. At the Mutual Reserve Bank it was said that he had obtained about $3,000. At the Northern Bank of New York nothing would be said about the case.

CALLS TEACHERS 'EASY PREY'

President of the New York Association Thinks It Time for Protection.

To prevent teachers and their work from becoming the "easy prey of pedagogical exploiters, educational slummers, the mere statisticians and experimenters, and all the other exponents of hollow assumption and scholastic dilettanteism," President Magnus Gross of the New York Teachers' Association urges them to form themselves into a closer union than ever before.

Mr. Gross especially warns teachers against those who are clever enough and ready enough "to exploit the energy, time, and patience of the teachers for every new, costly, and useless fad that is designed mainly to swell their reputations with the deluded public and boom the author's chances for higher honors and emoluments.

"Those who have been long enough in the system to judge results past and present," continues Mr. Gross, "are practically united in the conviction that if all these dealers in notions and fads could have been banished ten years ago or their costly ambitions petrified the city's treasury would have been benefited to the extent of millions of dollars, and hundreds of thousands of the city's children would have been better educated in what must ever remain the essentials of an elementary education."

FLAME-TIPPED ARROWS.

Young George Bopp, After Reading Indian Tales, Becomes a Firebug.

Acting Fire Marshal Brophy told in the Glendale, L. I., Court yesterday how George Bopp, 15 years old, of 41 Park Avenue, Glendale, had admitted to him that on Oct. 17 he had set fire to the apartment at 35 Park View Avenue, Glendale, occupied by Mrs. Isabel Heller, first luring her out of the house by telephoning to her that her little daughter was sick at school. The fire did $2,000 damage.

Marshal Brophy said the boy had started the fire because he had been reading novels about how Indians set fire to houses by means of fire on arrow tips. The young incendiary was remanded until Friday to permit his previous conduct and mental and physical condition being inquired int.

FLYNN INAUGURATES NEW DETECTIVE PLAN

Abolishes Old Branch Bureaus and Sends Central Office Men Direct to Precincts.

OLD TIMERS BACK ON POST

Detective Lieutenants Will Command Ten Divisions Similar to Inspection Districts, Removing Responsibility from Precinct Commanders.

Second Deputy Police Commissioner William J. Flynn, in charge of the Detective Bureau, announced changes yesterday which will reorganize the city's secret service when he discontinues every branch detective bureau in the city except the bureau in Brooklyn. This change goes into effect at 8 o'clock to-morrow morning.

One hundred young policemen have been ordered to report to Commissioner Flynn for detective duty, and these with other detectives will be sent to every precinct in the city, two on an average being assigned to each.

They will do all the detective work previously done by the plain clothes men, but they will not be under the command of the Captain of the precinct or the Inspector commanding the district. Instead they will be under the direct personal command of Commissioner Flynn and will take orders, while on duty in the precincts, from a detective lieutenant who will be detailed as an acting captain in command of the secret work in one of their districts.

The city will be divided into ten detective divisions, much as it is now divided into inspection divisions. The First Division will embrace the Wall Street district and will be in command of Lieut. George Doran, rated as one of the best men in the department. Doran's headquarters will be in the new John Street Station, and among the detectives under him will be several who long have been familiar with conditions in the financial district and who have been working under Doran in Wall Street for months past.

The Second Division will be commanded by Lieut. William F. Peabody, who will have his headquarters in the Eldridge Street Station. This division will be the principal east side bureau, and will be one of the largest of the divisions. The force will include many of the new one hundred picked by Commissioner Flynn from the force at large. The Third Division will be under command of Lieut. Albert B. Gloster, the Fourth in charge of Lieut. William J. Clarke, the Fifth commanded by Lieut. William F. Delaney, and the Sixth, the Bronx Division, will be under command of Capt. Samuel Price.

The Brooklyn office will be commanded by Lieut. John D. Coughlin, who will have his headquarters in State Street, and will be subdivided into two divisions, one commanded by Lieut. August Kuhne, and the other by Sergeant John B. McCloskey. A Ninth Division of the city will take in Queens Borough, where Lieut. Herbert Graham will command, and the Richmond Borough division will be under command of Sergeant John P. Smith.

The Italian Squad will retain its old headquarters in Centre Street, but its numerical strength will be reduced. Many of the Italian detectives will be assigned permanently to Italian settlements, and Hebrew detectives will be among those assigned to the east side.

In all there will be 500 detectives doing work in the precincts after to-morrow, and only sixty men will be kept on duty in the Detective Bureau at Police Headquarters. They will be held in reserve, so to speak, for use in emergencies, and when cases are reported direct to Police Headquarters.

The detectives on duty in the precincts will have to be on duty all night and must keep in touch with their precinct commander at all hours. As statistics show that most crimes are committed in the night time, practically the entire force of 500 men will be on duty between sundown and sunrise. The clerical men on duty at Police Headquarters will do some night work also after finishing their office labors. From 9 A. M. until 5 P. M. Inspector Russell will be in command of the Detective Bureau under Commissioner Flynn, while from 5 P. M. Capt. Thomas Murphy, now in command of the Fifth Avenue Station in Brooklyn, and Capt. John Linden will alternate in command at night, the result being that a high ranking officer will be in command at Police Headquarters always.

As the detectives no longer will be under their direct command precinct commanders no longer will be responsible for the detective work in their territories.

According to General Order 68, which was sent out to the department last night, precinct commanders hereafter, when they receive a complaint of a robbery or any crime to which a detective must be assigned, will report it to the chief of detectives in the station house, and forward the complaint, with the name of the complainant and the name of the Central Office man assigned to the case, to headquarters. There his responsibility will end.

While every precinct in the city will have one or more detectives assigned to it, some of the largest of the stations, like the West Thirtieth, West Forty-seventh and West 125th Street stations, will have a detective force constantly on duty which will number at least a dozen men and probably more.

The changes announced yesterday mark the final passing of the plain clothes man. Among the detectives who were transferred back to patrol and desk duty in uniform yesterday as a result of the new appointments were First Grade Detective William Ticho, one of ex-Commissioner Baker's confidential men; Robert Powers and Joseph Cliff, all of whom were reduced to patrolmen, their pay dropping from $2,250 to $1,400 a year. Samuel Long, Henry C. Fink and Richard Sanguinette are others whose connection with the Detective Bureau ceases to-morrow morning.

The morning line-up at Police Headquarters will continue as heretofore, except that only a few of the men will report at the Central Office to look over the prisoners rounded up the night before. It is Commissioner Flynn's intention to have the detectives remain incognito as much as possible. Like the Secret Service men, they will detect perpetrators of crimes and then call on uniformed officers to make the arrests whenever possible.

MAGISTRATE LECTURES POLICE.

Thinks They Are Too Eager to Arrest Men Known as Old Offenders.

Magistrate Butts in the Yorkville Court yesterday discharged several alleged pickpockets arrested by detectives in various sections of the city. After discharging four he dismissed the charge of Detective Muggy, who arrested two young men for jostling passengers on a Twenty-third Street Crosstown car. The sleuth produced long records to show that the prisoners were old offenders. Then the Magistrate said:

"If there is any miscarriage of justice in this class of cases it is owing to the action of the police, and particularly of the Detective Bureau in making arrests of defendants situated as these defendants are. It is well known to the court that persons who have criminal records are arrested every day in New York City because of their records, and without committing any overt act."

NEW STATION FOR FLATBUSH.

Frequency of Crime in the District Set the Grand Jury Investigating.

A new police station will be opened next Monday in Flatbush, Brooklyn, at 1,116 East Thirty-fifth Street. It will be under command of Lieut. John T. Reith, now of the Glendale Precinct. Reith was made an acting captain by Police Commissioner Cropsey yesterday. He will have under him four lieutenants, four sergeants and fifty policemen, including a mounted squad.

The establishment of the new station is due to the many crimes that have been committed in the last year in that section of the city. The Staber murder was committed in the new precinct, and there have been many assaults and robberies which never have been solved.

The new station was recommended by the Kings County Grand Jury several months ago, following an investigation of conditions by that body.

BROUGH SENATORSHIP LOST?

Canvass Seems to Indicate That Pollock (Dem.) Was Elected.

The local Board of Canvassers on the vote cast in the recent election discovered errors in the tally sheets yesterday which seem to indicate the defeat in the Eighteenth Senatorial District of Alexander Brough, who is the Republican leader of the Nineteenth Assembly District.

The board found that the total 352 votes in the Twenty-fourth Election District of the Fifteenth Assembly District had been counted for Senator Brough, while in reality 159 of them had been cast for his opponent, Henry W. Pollock.

The original count gave Senator Brough the election by 129 votes. The canvass at present declares Pollock elected by 30.

The Election Board of the election district in question has been summoned to appear before the Board of Canvassers and explain the error.

BIG LINERS CRASH IN NORTH RIVER

Lorraine Hits the Prinz Friedrich Wilhelm, Smashing a Hole in Her Side.

PASSENGERS ALL CALM

French Vessel, Little Damaged, Continues Her Voyage, but the German Liner Returns to Her Pier.

Owing apparently to a miscalculation of speed and searoom on the part of the pilots in charge, the French liner Lorraine crashed into the North German Lloyd liner Prinz Friedrich Wilhelm in the river yesterday morning and made a hole six feet wide and sixteen feet deep in her starboard quarter. Both vessels were outward bound.

The force of the impact knocked in the plates in the sharp stem of the Lorraine, making a hole clean through, about two feet below the level of the foc'sle deck. No lives were lost, as the chief officer and members of the crew of the French liner ran back on seeing the collision coming, and the part of the hold where the blow struck the German vessel was empty and cut off by water-tight bulkheads to protect the steering gear. On the superstructure the stem cut into a second-class bathroom and wrecked it.

There was no panic on either ship, as the passengers were all on deck, still waving to their friends on the pier and realized what was going to happen fully two minutes before the collision occurred. Incidentally the bright sunshine and the close proximity of the shores of the river had something to do with calming the passengers.

After the collision both liners backed into their respective piers to survey the damages. On examination it was found that the Lorraine had not sustained any serious injury beyond the blow on her bow plates on both sides of the stem, and she sailed for Havre at 2 P. M.

Capt. Edward Prehn, commander of the Prinz Friedrich Wilhelm, said it would take two or three days to cut away the ironwork around the hole in order to estimate the damage to his vessel. An official of the line informed the first and second class passengers that they could either go to a hotel or stay on board until the vessel is ready to sail, which is expected to be late to-morrow or early Sunday.

Paul Faguet, agent of the French Line, was standing on the company's pier at the foot of Fifteenth Street, watching the Lorraine go down the river at the time of the crash. "I cannot see how the Lorraine was at fault," he said, "as she was well in toward the New York shore. I saw the German vessel backing out and wondered that she did not go ahead instead of going astern nearly across the river."

Both liners left their piers at 10 A. M. and backed into the river. The North German Lloyd piers at Hoboken are a little to the south of the French Line pier, and the Lorraine was a few minutes ahead of the Prinz Friedrich Wilhelm, so that she had straightened out and was going down the river while the other vessel had her stern upstream in a slanting direction toward the New York shore when the collision occurred.

The Countess de la Begassiere, sister of Jacques de Lesseps, the French aviator, was a passenger on the Lorraine. She said afterward that she did not feel any alarm at the accident, as the passengers standing near by said it would only be a bump, and not serious. All of the other passengers appeared to take the same view of it.

"I saw a collision was going to happen as the Lorraine approached at good speed," said Capt. Kunwick, Inspector for the German Line. "She ought to have kept out of the road, as the vessel backing out has the right of way until she is straightened out in the stream. Just as the impact occurred I saw steam coming out of the Lorraine's whistle and heard two blasts, which meant that he was going to starboard. It was slack water at the time, and there should have been no difficulty in avoiding a collision."

William Lowe of the New Jersey Sandy Hook Pilots' Association, was on the bridge of the German liner and Andrew Anderson of the New York Sandy Hook Pilots' Association was on the Lorraine. Mariners along the water front said the accident was due to the rashness of the pilots in going ahead too fast in ignorance of the rules of navigation.

Judge Hough, in the Federal court recently, in giving judgment in a collision case, said it was discreditable to the port of New York that liners came here from abroad commanded by the most skillful navigators, and on arrival their vessels were put into the hands of pilots so ignorant of the rules of navigation that they could not make themselves intelligible when they appeared as witnesses in a court.

OPPOSES CALENDAR REFORM.

Prof. Jacoby of Columbia Thinks the Proposed Change Not Advantageous.

Prof. Harold Jacoby of the Department of Astronomy at Columbia University was inclined yesterday to regard as unnecessary a movement to reform the Gregorian calendar, which, it is reported, has been recognized by the Swiss Federal Council, and for which a congress of all nations is to be invited to Berne to arrange a year divided into exactly 52 weeks or 364 days.

The four quarters of the year, according to the plan, are to be exactly of the same length, the months 30, 30, and 31 days successively. Thus the thirty-first day of March, June, September, and December, would always fall on a Sunday. Sunday, under the new arrangement, is to bear no date; and New Year's Day is to be an "extra day." Every leap year would have an off day that would neither be counted nor dated. It would be inserted between June 31 and July 1.

Prof. Jacoby said that the present calendar is, for all purposes, exact enough, the error amounting to only one day in every 3,333 years. The new plan, he said, seems designed rather to make the calendar more convenient than more exact, its purpose being to bring the days of the week on the same date each year. The matter has recently been agitated in scientific journals here and abroad, he said, but the present instance furnished by the Swiss Government is the first official notice taken of the plan.

A somewhat similar movement has occasionally been agitated with a view to bringing Easter on the same date each year.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN HURT.

Thrown from School Omnibus When It Is Hit by a Trolley Car.

An omnibus of the Rhinelander School for Crippled Children, at 350 East Eighty-eighth Street, containing six crippled children, who were being taken home from the school yesterday afternoon in charge of their teacher, Miss May Daly of 216 East 117th Street, while going east in Ninety-sixth Street, was struck by a northbound Third Avenue trolley car. Every window in the 'bus was shattered, and while two of the six crippled children managed to cling to the side seats, the rest, together with the teacher, were thrown out to the street.

Miss Daly suffered bruises of the face and a dislocated left shoulder. One of the children, Harold Carney of 1,832 Second Avenue, was cut over the left eye by broken glass, and another, Frank Rinclari of 1,719 Third Avenue, suffered a dislocation of the left shoulder. The rest escaped with minor bruises. The driver, George Wilson of 131 West Sixty-eighth Street, was dragged from his seat when the traces broke, and his horses ran away, dragging him along the street for several yards.

Policeman Marx called an ambulance from the Harlem Hospital, and the injured teacher and children were attended and taken home in a second bus sent from the school. The motorman of the car, Joseph Schick, according to witnesses, did his best to avert the collision. No arrests were made.

The top notch was reached last night at the Horse Show in point of attendance and social splendor. The throngs on the promenade, the packed balconies and the long list of notables in society who crowded the boxes, all harked back to the old-time days before the advent of the motor car.

The night performance was replete with thrills, and one spill, which came very near the tragic, sent a shiver through the multitude. This was when Lieut. Sifton, the young son of the Hon. Clifford Sifton of Ottawa, was thrown from his charger while taking a fence and just escaped being crushed under the animal.

The accident took place almost directly in front of the Sifton box. The young man's mother almost fainted at the sight. Mrs. Frederick Bull, who occupied an adjoining box, came to her assistance. Many women cried in terror when the accident occurred. Mr. Sifton took a flying leap from the box, hurdled the arena rails, and was by hi son's side in time to assist him to his feet.

Among those who were in attendance last night were Mrs. George J. Gould and her two daughters, Mrs. J. Anthony Drexel, Jr., and Miss Vivien Gould, who is one of the season's débutantes. Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Frederic Bronson also visited the performance. Others included Mrs. Joseph E. Widener, Mrs. Joseph Stickney, who gave a luncheon to some of the visiting officers; Mrs. Richard Morris, Mrs. Frederick Bull, and Mr. and Mrs. James Speyer.

Mrs. Pedar Bruguière occupied Alfred G. Vanderbilt's box during the evening session. Miss Vera Morris of London wore a quantity of jewels. Princess Theodore Ypsilanti attracted attention in a stunning Parisian gown of pale coral-colored velvet.

Jumping Contests Ended.

With the close of last night's programme of events the international military jumping contests ended. These events have resulted in practically a clean sweep for the British officers, in which contests Lieuts. Walwyn and Brooke have signally distinguished themselves. It was due to the untiring efforts of Lord Decies, one of the judges at the National Horse Show, that the English officers received permission from the War Department to take part in the exhibition. The work of the American and foreign officers has been one of the distinguishing features of the show.

The return to form of C. W. Watson's Lord Baltimore and My Maryland was received with general satisfaction by the crowd present. The owner of Fairmont Farms is a popular figure at the Madison Square Garden exhibitions and he was overwhelmed with congratulations, not only with the success of his champion pair but also with the announcement from Wheeling, West Virginia, that he was prominently mentioned as the probable successor of Nathan B. Scott as United States Senator from West Virginia.

The protest against Godfrey Preece's chestnut mare None Nicer as the winner of Class 110 for three-gaited saddle horses has fallen flat, and Mr. Preece has been officially exonerated from all blame. The protest was made by Myron H. Oppenheim on the ground that None Nicer had not been registered by the National Saddle Horse Association, as required by the rules. Mr. Preece, when he purchased None Nicer, was told that the mare was registered. A telegram was received yesterday from Kentucky stating that the mare is registered as No. 7,659. This will render the protest ineffective.

Traffic Squads in Feats.

Two platoons of picked mounted men from Traffic Squads A, B, and C, under the command of Lieut. David McCarthy, went through a series of evolutions that captured the crowd. The evolutions performed by the men consisted of putting their mounts through difficult feats, causing them to stop short and turn while in the middle of a gallop down the centre of the ring and forming picturesque figures on sudden blasts of the bugle. Second Deputy Police Commissioner Clement Driscoll occupied a seat in the judges' box during the evolutions.

Lieut. Clifford Sifton, Jr., had a narrow escape in the jumping class for officers riding abreast. While riding Wasp in the second round the horse stumbled and fell over the brick wall and rolled over on his rider. Hon. Clifford Sifton, father of the rider, jumped over the fence into the ring and assisted his son to his feet. The young Candian Lieutenant was badly shaken up, but otherwise unhurt. He remounted and finished the course amid cheers. The event was won by the Dutch officers, while a second pair from Holland was placed second. The Britishers were third and fourth.

Delegates to a New York conference for the achievement of good roads throughout the United States were guests at the show last night, where the question of good roads was discussed informally by them and many horsemen equally interested in the purpose of the delegates.

Ten States were represented at the conference, which was held at the Touring Club of America, and some from each of the ten States composed the party that visited the Horse Show in a body.

Those that attended the Horse Show were Logan Wall Page, Director of the United States Office of Public Roads, Washington, D. C.; Robert De Caverly and Harrington Mills, representing the District of Columbia; Secretary of State Koenig of New York, Secretary of State Rogers of Connecticut, Secretary of State Bailey of Vermont, Secretary of State-elect Edward Lazansky of New York, Secretary of State Pearson of New Hampshire, Secretary of State Martindale of Michigan, J. B. R. Smith, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles of New Jersey; John E. George, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles of Maryland; Frederick H. Caley, Registrar of Automobiles of Ohio; Arthur Fifoot, Supervisor of Automobiles of Connecticut; Joseph W. Hunter, State Highway Commissioner of Pennsylvania; Col. William D. Sohier, State Highway Commissioner of Massachusetts; Charles G. Guyer, representing Secretary of State Smithers of Delaware; Alfred Reeves, General Manager, A. L. A. M.; Herbert P. Bissell, President of New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club, and H. G. Andrews, counsel of the Long Island Automobile Club.

Features of the Day.

Two international jumping contests for officers, special classes for heavy harness horses, and the competition for hackney horse championship formed the features of an interesting series of competitions for the fifth day of the Horse Show. While the events did not furnish the same spectacular exhibitions that marked the events of Wednesday, the contests were unusually interesting and kept the spectators in a state of excited uncertainty until the ribbons were finally awarded. In the international jumping contest honors were divided. The event for officers' chargers in the afternoon went to Lieut. Walwyn of the British Army, while the contest for pairs of horses over the jumps was captured by two Dutch Army officers. A second team from Holland was placed second. The jumping was excellent.

Lord Baltimore and My Maryland, the champion pair of harness horses from the Fairmont Farm's Stable, never appeared to better advantage than in the class for pairs over 15 hands and not exceeding 15 hands 2 inches. The champions defeated a big field of high-steppers and were loudly cheered after winning. In the big harness horse class, suitable for a heavy cart or four-wheeled vehicle, W. H. Moore added another blue rosette with his bay gelding, Robinhood.

Lawrence Jones exhibited a stylish brown gelding in the runabout class for horses not under 15 hands and not exceeding 15 hands 2 inches. Royal Regent was the name of the entry and the horse proved an easy winner. Tonzo Sauvage, with Grand Duke and Little Prince was second and third respectively.

The jumping class for thoroughbred hunters was a long drawn-out affair, although the entry list was an exceptionally strong one. Frederick Bull's chestnut gelding was returned the winner.

Allen Winter the Winner.

Allen Winter, exhibited by Louis W. Winans, won the class for trotting stallions. The winner is the 7-year-old brown stallion that two years ago won the Great American Handicap at Readville, near Boston, worth $50,000, and the most valuable purse ever offered for trotters, and which later on was purchased for $50,000 by Mr. Winans and taken to Europe. The $100 prize won by Allen Winter yesterday is the first return in cash to Mr. Winans for the fortune he paid for the stallion two years ago. The stallion will be sent to the stud, although it is possible that he may be raced next season with Willy for Mr. Winans by A. C. Pennock.

There were eight stallions in the thoroughbred class, which included two from the Canadian National Bureau of Breeding, the first time there has been an entry from across the border in the thoroughbred class. Masterman, a sixteen-hand chestnut by Hastings, dam Lady Margaret, received the first prize. The winner was entered by the Canadian Bureau. John E. Madden, the Kentucky horseman, was the judge.

In the final judging of hackney stallions the class for four-year-olds or over, in which last year Clarence H. Mackay's Land o' Burns had been second, this time fell to this handy chestnut horse. In the hackney stallion championship, the result was the greatest triumph yet achieved by the importers of hackneys. Over $1,000,000 has been expended by horsemen in breeding this type of horse for fifteen years to effect the victory. The winner is the fifteen-and-a-half-hand chestnut stallion Oxford, by Cadet, which was an importation of A. J. Cassatt, and bred in Pennsylvania by George H. Earle, and exhibited by William White, manager of Willesden Farm, at New Centreville, in that State.

The class for saddle horses up to carrying 160 pounds had a large entry, and the result gave further evidence of the superiority of the thoroughbred horses of that type, which has been gathered by Godfrey Preece for Henry R. Rea of Pittsburg. His entries, Indian Flower and Dr. Crockett, were first and second.

A class for pairs of Shetland ponies shown to harness was won by Mrs. E. F. Hawley's Bressay of Pittsford and Aberdeen of Pittsford. The same pair won last year in this class. The last two classes on the morning programme were devoted to the judging of horses suitable to become heavyweight hunters. Each set was first examined for their conformation, quality, manners, and ability to carry the prescribed weight. Those picked out as the best were then jumped a few times before awards were made. It was a class to appeal to breeders or riders to hounds more than to the general public, as the jumping was over single obstacles, and lacked the excitement of the competitions over the full and dangerous flight of fences and stone walls.

The victory of C. W. Watson's Lord Baltimore and My Maryland in the pairs of heavy harness class was a welcome change of luck for the Fairmont Farm, which has been singularly unfortunate in this show. The champion pair never appeared to better advantage, and easily captured the premier award. The victory was a popular one, and appeared to contradict the report that Lord Baltimore's lameness was responsible for his being given the gate on Wednesday in the brougham class.

Clydesdales and Percherons did not make a very strong showing, while the ponies under saddle did not come up to the standard of the other classes, and in the saddle horse class W. A. McGibbon's bay gelding Attention was placed first.

W. H. Moore, with Lady Seaton, scored over C. W. Watson's Lord Baltimore in the appointment class. Mrs. A. E. Keller drove Lady Seaton and Mrs. Watson handled the reins over the Fairmont Farm's entry.

England scored another victory in the jumping class for the Canadian Challenge Cup, when Lieut. C. F. Walwyn's The Nut was awarded the blue after a long contest. Lieut. Brooke, another Englishman, sent the second horse, Harriet, into the ring, while Lieut. R. Mallarme's Aka was third. The latter is a French horse.

RUNAWAY GIRLS HERE.

Connecticut Youngsters Try Their Fortunes and Fall in with Police.

Two sixteen-year-old Connecticut girls tried their fortunes here yesterday without the knowledge of their parents, and after walking the streets for hours they were glad enough when a patrolman of the West One Hundredth Street Station took them under the shelter of the law and incidentally paved the way to a good dinner, for they had had no food since reaching town on a New England Navigation Company boat on Wednesday.

The girls were Mary Pineauli, whose home is at Norwich, Conn., and Lillian Shea, who lives at Greenville, the same State. Policeman Mullalley was standing at Ninety-fifth Street and Amsterdam Avenue last night when the two came in sight. They were walking arm in arm in a lagging fashion and seemed utterly worn out. Questioned by him, they gave their names and said they had come here in search of work. They had not told their parents, preferring to wait until they were successful in their quest.

Then, with tears they divulged the fact that they had tried scores of places but had failed to get employment. They had spent all their money on a luncheon when they arrived in town on Wednesday and spent all of the intervening time walking from street to street or loitering in doorways for brief intervals of rest. No one had molested them, although they were in the streets all of Wednesday night.

The girls were taken to the West 100th Street Station and the reserves contributed enough for a good dinner. Then the two were sent to the Children's Society and their parents were notified by telegraph.

GIRL GUIDES HER RESCUERS.

Pinned Under a Trolley Car, She Tells Men How to Release Her.

Gertrude Stark, 12 years old, of 7 Water Street, West New Brighton, S. I., proved that she had plenty of pluck yesterday afternoon when she was run down while walking with her sister, Josephine, along Richmond Terrace, near Taylor Street, by a car of the Richmond Light and Railway Company, which had jumped the track. She was pinned fast against a sand bank. Although the little girl's left leg was crushed and she was severely bruised about the body she was not unconscious and directed her own rescue.

"Dig out the bank," she called to Herman Mauser, the motorman of the car, Patrolman John Miller, and Dr. D. T. McGuire, who had exhausted themselves in an effort to pry the car off the bank. Fifteen minutes later the girl was released and was being hurried to St. Vincent's Hospital in an automobile, attended by Dr. McGuire and her sister, who is a trained nurse there.

"She is the pluckiest youngster I ever saw; she didn't even cry, although she must have suffered terribly," said Dr. McGuire. "She will recover, and I hope we can save the injured leg."

The passengers of the car were shaken up somewhat, but none of them was injured.

ENGLISH EXPERT FOR SMALL CALIBRE GUNS

Sir William White Favors 12-Inch Armament with a Battery of 6-Inch Weapons.

AMERICAN OFFICERS CONCUR

Best Positions for Mounting Guns Found to be at Central Line of Deck and Right Abaft the Beam.

Interest in the eighteenth general meeting of the Society of Naval Architects, which began yesterday morning at 29 West Thirty-ninth Street, was centred largely in a paper, "Notes on the Armaments of Battleships," by Sir William White, K. C. B., the English authority on naval construction. The paper was read, in Sir William's absence, by D. H. Cox, Secretary of the society.

Sir William said to his mind the ideal armament embodied a not extravagant number of heavy guns, associated with a considerable battery of 6-inch guns. There were two positions for heavy guns, he declared, one at the centre line of the deck, commanding right ahead fire, with large arcs of horizontal training reaching well abaft the beam on each side, and the other, possessing a corresponding command right astern and over large arcs of training reaching well before the beam.

Until the Michigan and South Carolina were designed, he said, the general practice was to mount one or two heavy guns—two in nearly all cases—in each of these positions. Superimposed turrets had been tried in some cases, he recalled, but this practice did not find much favor, and might be considered to have dropped out of use. He then paid a compliment to the American Navy.

"It was a new and bold departure in the Michigan and South Carolina," he said, "to place two turrets in each of the supreme positions, and to arrange the guns in one turret for firing over the top of the other turret. That arrangement proved successful, however, and has been largely adopted in recent ships of all navies. When associated with the mounting of guns in pairs, this system permits the effective use of eight heavy guns, if three guns are mounted in each turret, then twelve heavy guns have equal arcs of command, and all the guns can be used on each broadside.

Sir William said the tendency to-day was to adopt guns of larger calibre. In the United States, he said, the 14-inch gun was in favor, while in Great Britain the 13.5-inch gun had been reintroduced.

After the reading of the paper, Rear Admiral W. L. Capps and Naval Constructors D. W. Taylor and J. H. Linnard agreed with most of Sir William's views. A letter from Rear Admiral Mahan, U. S. N., retired, was read, in which he expressed himself as agreeing entirely with the views of Sir William.

Jacob W. Miller, Vice President of the society, read a paper on canals. He said that the Cape Cod Canal would be completed in 1912, and that humanity demanded the elimination of the dangerous route around the cape.

Charles H. Cramp read a paper on "The Evolution of Screw Propulsion in the United States," and William T. Donnelly a paper on "Floating Dry Docks."

$69,000 FROM ONE LINER.

$48,000 Received from the Huntingtons in Record Customs Collection.

All records for custom collections from a single transatlantic steamship were broken when the North German Lloyd liner George Washington arrived yesterday from Bremen. Her 837 cabin passengers contributed $69,000 to the customs. Of this, $48,000 was collected upon the goods brought back from Europe by Mrs. C. P. Huntington and Mr. and Mrs. Archer Huntington. Mrs. Huntington declared and paid $31,000. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt is said to have paid $3,500, and Mrs. R. A. Van Wyck about $1,500.

The Huntingtons have always been particular in declaring their foreign purchases, and paying the duty without dispute. The duty paid yesterday is said to have been principally upon clothing purchased abroad. Archer Huntington declared a stamp collection which he values at $32,000. No duty was exacted on this.

When the George Washington arrived at her pier Adolf Bezner, a first cabin passenger, was taken to Ellis Island at the request of the German authorities. It is charged that he defrauded to the extent of some $4,000 in connection with an assignment of his business in Pfortzheim, Germany. He denies the charge. Last week the man's wife arrived and she is now living with relatives in Vermont.

Creste Cavalieri, a brother of Mme. Lina Cavalieri Chanler, was a passenger. He sai dthat he was here upon business, but not in connection with his sister's affairs. He said that the latter will not consent to remain abroad, in fact she is coming here in December. He said that the Chanler family had made several proposals to his sister, their principal object, he said, seemed to be to obtain possession of the marriage settlement.

Another arrival was Yuan Chi Chang of the Department of Education in China.

EXTEND DRUG LAW TO GUARD THE POOR

Provisions Against Cocaine and Morphine Needed for Unscrupulous Dealers, Bensel Says.

TO APPLY IT GRADUALLY

Dangers of Promiscuous Use of Paregoric for Infants Pointed Out by the Head of the Health Board.

The extension of the Health Department's ordinances against the sale of cocaine without a physician's prescription, to include also morphine and the salts of morphine against which the druggists of the city have been agitating, was explained yesterday by Dr. Walter H. Bensel of the Health Department to have been caused not only by the fact that drug habits may be formed by the use of mixtures containing morphine and the like, but also because their administration may actually interfere with the beneficent processes of nature.

"Many people," he said, "believe that it is all right to give an infant crying with pain paregoric or a soothing syrup in order to quiet it. Now it is absurd to suppose that a baby can acquire the opium habit by such dosing, but the opium may injure it in another way. It suppresses, perhaps, certain symptoms, but these are really the effort of nature to throw off an irritating cause. The cause remains, and the doctor when he is called in finds that he cannot detect the cause because its symptoms have been suppressed.

"The Board of Health does not for a moment say that the better druggists in the city would sell such remedies without proper precautions, but it must be remembered that there are druggists of all grades in our jurisdiction and some are ignorant, and where money may be made by selling a certain article there will always be found people unscrupulous enough to do it.

"We are not making any crusade in the matter. We pass such ordinances as this in the first place for their educational effect. If we found an outrageous instance of their violation, we should of course take action and warn any druggist we think likely to disregard it. But it would not be fair to start wholesale prosecutions under it immediately we have placed it in the ordinance code. In the case of the ordinance against smoking automobiles, two months were consumed in merely warning chauffeurs and the owners of cars before we took action. So in this case the probability is this, anyone who asks us will be informed of it and meanwhile we shall educate the druggists of the city up to it."

Dr. Herman Sheffield of the New York Post Graduate Hospital praised the ordinance yesterday, not as being needed for the first-class druggists of the city, but as being of great value when the men who dispense drugs in the poorer parts of the city among the least informed of the population are concerned.

"You must remember," he said, "that the directions printed on the bottles of paregoric largely sold in the city allow doses containing an immense amount of opium for infants. Here is one, in which it is said that the proper dose for an infant 3 months old is five drops and for 1 year fifteen drops. According to the best authorities a child of 2 years should only receive from two to five drops and an infant of 3 months would be quite sufficiently dosed with half a drop.

"I will give you an example of the danger of paregoric from my own experience. Only a few days ago I was called in to see a three-days-old baby, which was crying bitterly. I arrived just in time to prevent the nurse giving it paregoric. I found it was suffering from a burn on the body which had been given accidentally. All that was needed was the treatment of this, and as soon as it was better the child's crying ceased. Now if it had been dosed, the paregoric would have been a depressive, and as it needed stimulating it would have undoubtedly died.

Dr. Sheffield referred to the resolution passed by the Conference of Pharmaceutical Organizations last September, in which it was suggested that the prohibition of the Sanitary Code of the sale of cocaine and morphine except under a physician's prescription be amended so as to permit the druggists to sell any preparation contained in the United States Pharmacopoeia and National Formulary. This, he pointed out, would open the door to the sale of such dangerous drugs as morphine, cocaine, and codeine, with practically no restriction.

"The danger would be," he said, "that the druggists would sell mixtures containing the maximum dose to practical strangers, when no physician would prescribe even the minimum for a patient till he was thoroughly acquainted with his constitution and condition. It would be a very serious matter if such a freedom were allowed.

"It was bad enough when there was no restriction on the sale of patent medicines, as there was always the risk of the unscrupulous druggist making up his own mixture to take the place of those which it might be generally assumed would be of fair quality and right proportions, but to open up the entire field covered by the Pharmacopoeia and the National Formulary would be still more dangerous.

"Of course there are plenty of druggists here who would be most careful in handling dangerous drugs, just as they always have been, but we cannot think only of them. We must take precautions for those of fewer scruples and less knowledge, on whom the poorer sections of this city are generally dependent for their medicines."

POSTUM.

SHE QUIT

But It Was a Hard Pull.

It is hard to believe that coffee will put a person in such a condition as it did an Ohio woman. She tells her own story:

"I did not believe coffee caused my trouble, and frequently said I like it so well I would not, and could not, quit drinking it, but I was a miserable sufferer from heart trouble and nervous prostration for four years.

"I was scarcely able to be around, had no energy and did not care for anything. Was emaciated and had a constant pain around my heart until I thought I could not endure it.

"Frequently I had nervous chills and the least excitement would drive sleep away, and any little noise would upset me terribly. I was gradually getting worse, until finally one time it came over me, and I asked myself what's the use of being sick all the time and buying medicine so that I could indulge myself in coffee?

"So I thought I would see if I could quit drinking coffee and got some Postum to help me quit. I made it strictly according to directions, and I want to tell you that change was the greatest step in my life. It was easy to quit coffee because I had the Postum, which I now like better than the old coffee.

"One by one the old troubles left, until now I am in splendid health, nerves steady, heart all right, and the pain all gone. Never have any more nervous chills, don't take any medicine, can do all my housework and have done a great deal beside."

MEAT PRICES KEEPING UP.

Consumers Here Get Small Comfort from the Slump in the West.

There was a sudden stop yesterday in the downward trend of meat prices which started three days ago in most of the retail butcher shops of the city, although the wholesale dealers said that the lower prices of the last few days would remain unchanged so far as they were concerned for some time.

Pork, which slumped in price from 2 to 4 cents at the beginning of the week, took an upward turn of from 2½ to 3 cents a pound. This was due, retail dealers asserted, to the sudden increase in demand consequent upon the publicity which the slump has received.

When the fall in prices was first announced there was immediately a greater demand for meat and the large reserve amount which forced the prices down in the first place is being rapidly exhausted. As pork went lower, the demand for it was greater than for any other meat, and this encouraged many retail dealers to raise the price. There are still many retail stores, however, where the low prices of Monday and Tuesday are still in effect. As a matter of fact, there is a considerable disparity in the price of meat. A dealer in a populous uptown centre, for instance, charges and gets more for his meat than does a dealer in another and less advantageous part of the city.

Although wholesale men said that their prices remained the same, certain retailers charged that this was not so, but that the wholesale men were demanding higher prices. Both retailers and wholesalers asserted, however, that the Western prices had not yet reached New York, and would not until to-morrow or Monday.

Washington Market dealers said the indications were that the low Western prices would not keep up very long, as hogs were scarce in the West and veal scarce all over.

There was a disposition among the retail and wholesale men yesterday to blame one another for the fact that the cut in prices did not keep up.

"We want to give the public a square deal," said one wholesale dealer. "The price of meat is coming down gradually, and further reductions will probably be made. We are acting fair in the matter, but the retailers don't seem to want to hold up their end. I don't believe the consumer will find much comfort in the situation for some time yet."

"There have been some reductions, but only in the second and third grades of meat," said one retailer. "I haven't noticed any difference in the high grades. The average New Yorker wants high-class meat and it costs us money to supply it. No real reduction will come until the Chicago and other large packing houses cut their prices."

There was a great deal of grumbling among customers who tried to buy meat at lower prices yesterday. Every housewife apparently had heard of the drop in prices and wanted to take advantage of it. Only in few instances did they buy meat cheaper than they did last week. Butchers on the east side had their troubles. Shoppers demanded the reduction, and when they didn't get it there were many arguments. Many butchers got around the situation by making a small reduction in the price of the higher grades of meat, but demanded a cent a pound more for the cheaper grades.

Several retail dealers at Washington Market, who announced a drop in the price of pork, beef, and lamb when the announcement first came from the West that the price of meat had gone down, still kept to their low prices yesterday. They said they were buying their meat from the wholesaler cheaper and intended to give their customers the benefit of it, so long as the present situation kept up.

"It is foolish for wholesale and retail men to deny that the price of meat has fallen," said one of these, "for I know better. But even yet prices are far too high and the Western packers are beginning to realize that they have gone too far. There has been an enormous falling off in the number of meat-consumers since the high prices started, and the packers are beginning to see that there is more money to be made by larger sales."

Swift & Co. last night sent out these quotations on wholesale market prices for beef cuts: "Ribs, 12 cents, best grade; loins, 12½ cents; rounds, 10 cents, and chucks, 8½ cents. No 2 meat is a cent and a half lower, and No. 3 4½ cents."

TIES UP BROOKE & CO.

Government Attaches Assets of Wool Firm on Alleged Customs Frauds.

The United States District Attorney's office took steps yesterday to prevent a transfer of the assets of Joseph Brooke & Co., manufacturers of woolens, worsteds, and linings, of Bradford, England, and 840 Broadway, this city. It is charged that the firm by means of undervaluation and false invoices has defrauded the Government greatly in the last five years. The preliminary papers in suit to recover $200,000 damages because of undervaluation frauds have already been filed.

Information reached the customs authorities that an attempt was to be made to transfer the company's assets, and Assistant United States District Attorney Whitney served twenty-six writs of attachment, tying up Brooke & Co.'s bank deposits and preventing the collection by the firm of all accounts receivable. Late last night a special agent of the Department of Justice with another writ started for Canton Junction, a suburb of Boston, to attach the company's factory there.

The Brooke company is involved through an investigation into an alleged practice of importers of undervaluing goods and defrauding the Government by false invoices. The officials declare that the Brooke case complicates many British woolen manufacturers.

Writs were served by United States Marshal Henkel attaching Brooke & Co.'s accounts with these concerns:

The Corn Exchange Bank, L. Renn & Son, the Milius Guggenheimer Company, the Pye Wimpfheimer Company, the M. Simiansky Company, Hyman Kupfer, Waterhouse, Resher & Kahn; Brooks Brothers, the Ridgely Boardman Company, the Rosenthal Manufacturing Company, the Alfred Benjamin Company, W. B. Leonard, Brokaw Brothers, the F. H. Calcott Company, S. Stern & Co., Hahle & Co., Erlanger, Blumgarten & Co., the Stern-Katzenstein Company, Morse Brothers & Ehrlich, Weiner Brothers, S. Rosenberg & Co., George Solomon, Sylvester & Levy, J. W. Goddard Sons, Beckerman & Co., and the William Alsberry Company.

Mr. Whitney said that information had been received that Edward Jefferson, who had the power of attorney for Brooke & Co., is in Canada, and steps will be taken to have him brought back here.

"Peter Redling, the clerk, who left the employ of Brooke & Co., has furnished the Government with information as to the business affairs of the company," said Mr. Whitney. "Redling revealed the details of the copartnership of Frederick A. and Joseph Brooke. The latter are now at Huddersfield, England. Redling left the firm's employ of his own accord and is not to be considered an informer."

CANTON JUNCTION, Mass., Nov. 17.—The Joseph Brooke & Co. plant at Canton Junction, against which a writ of attachment has been issued, is known as the Neponset Woolen Mills. The Superintendent, John W. Wright, recently sailed for England. About 100 hands are employed.

ORDERS PICTURE OUT OF ROGUES' GALLERY

Judge Green Hotly Declares Young Holloway was Much Wronged and Humiliated.

FALSELY ACCUSED OF THEFT

Woman Identified Him as Sender of Stolen Package, but She Confessed She Didn't Tell the Truth.

Judge Joseph Green in the City Court yesterday ordered three Central Office detectives to go with John Holloway of 410 East Sixty-fifth Street, to Police Headquarters, and see that photographs and negatives of Holloway were removed from there. Judge Green seemed indignant when he addressed the Central Office men. "I understand," said he, "that this young man's photographs have not been destroyed. He is not a criminal, and has been much wronged and humiliated. He was charged three years ago with grand larceny, but soon after his arrest it was found that he was arrested on the flimsiest kind of evidence. I want his picture removed from the Rogues' Gallery."

The detectives said they did not know whether Holloway's picture was still in the gallery or not, but it was their impression it had been removed. They thought, perhaps, the negatives might still be there, but they were not sure. Holloway accompanied them to Headquarters. On arriving there he was told that under the new police regulation he would have to file an application for the photographs and negatives of himself, and if there they would be returned to him.

Judge Green's order to the Central Office detectives came as the sequel of a suit brought by Holloway against a department store which caused his arrest in October, 1907. Holloway sued the firm for false arrest and malicious prosecution. He sought to recover $2,000 damages, and yesterday, the second day of the trial, he compromised for $1,000.

Holloway's arrest occurred when Gen. Bingham was Police Commissioner. The prisoner was then a lad of nineteen years, the son of good parents, a church-goer, with a reputation for honesty and sobriety. He was employed in the shipping department of a large retail store. He had been in the employ of the store for about a year, and in that time he had received three advances in salary. The manager of the department store had known Holloway for many years, and when Holloway was arrested he could only say good words about him.

Customers of the store began to complain that they were not receiving their purchases. Assemblyman Mark Goldberg, Holloway's attorney, said that his client's duty at the store was to address and O. K. outgoing packages. A package addressed to some one was changed and sent to a woman named Alice Ward instead of to the real purchaser.

The store detective called upon Alice Ward with two Headquarters men and the boy who had delivered the package. They found the package in her possession and they placed her and a man they found in her company under arrest. At the store Alice Ward picked out Holloway as the man who had sent her the package. He was taken directly to Police Headquarters and thrown into a cell.

Holloway only recently married an estimable young woman. He was not allowed, his attorney said, to inform his wife or parents of his arrest. On the following morning he was paraded before the detectives. He was photographed for the Rogues' Gallery and measured by the Bertillon system.

Then he was haled to the Jefferson Market Court before Magistrate Corrigan, where he was charged with grand larceny and held in $500 bail. On Oct. 11, 1907, he appeared again in the Jefferson Market Court, when Magistrate Corrigan held proceedings in his private chamber. Alice Ward confessed then that Holloway was not the man who had sent her the goods from the store, and Magistrate Corrigan discharged the prisoner.

GALES DELAY STEAMERS.

Incoming Skippers Report Hard Blows from the North and Northwest.

Owing to the northwesterly gale which has been blowing for the last forty-eight hours a number of steamships inbound have been delayed. Capt. Down of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Trent, which arrived yesterday twenty-four hours late from Cuba, via Bermuda, said he had experienced a northwest gale of forty to fifty-five miles an hour on Sunday night and on Monday it had increased very much.

The Captain of the Eastern Prince, which arrived yesterday from Brazil, reported that on Nov. 14 his ship had encountered a hurricane, with heavy rains, thunder, and lightning.

Capt. Oleson of the Preston, arriving yesterday from Jamaica, reported that his vessel had been delayed fourteen hours by a sixty-mile northwest wind which they ran into on Tuesday morning.

PALMIST HELD FOR LARCENY.

In Boston Jail on Charge of Taking $24,000 from New York Woman.

BOSTON, Nov. 17.—William H. Kohler, who was arrested in New York several days ago, was brought back here to-day and pleaded not guilty in the Superior Court to an indictment charging him with the larceny of $24,000 from Dora T. Coffin of 32 West Sixty-first Street, New York. He was unable to furnish $25,000 bail and was taken to the Charles Street Jail.

It is alleged that Kohler, while operating as a palmist in this city, induced the complainant to give him $24,000 between October, 1909, and January, 1910, telling her that he was putting the money in a pool from which she would make great profits.

While he was in Canada engaged in the reciprocity negotiations as a representative of the American Government he was attacked with an intestinal trouble from which he had suffered in the past, and although he was able to make the return trip from Montreal to Washington, he was obliged to take to his bed as soon as he reached his home here.

STEERS OPEN ON TRIBOROUGH

Brooklyn's Borough President Says He Will Vote for the Borough's Interests.

Although the delegation from South Brooklyn civic organizations which called on Borough President Steers of Brooklyn on Wednesday got the impression that he had promised to vote for the triborough plan, Mr. Steers said yesterday that he had given no such pledge. The Borough President declared that he was not bound to any subway scheme.

"I am going to vote for the best interests of Brooklyn," said President Steers yesterday. "I am going to see all the facts before I vote, and I will weigh them carefully. I am not one who says, 'Oh, I know how I will vote. I never change.' I can change. I can be changed by reasonable argument."

DR. WILEY TO AID FOSDICK.

Government Chemist's Men Will Help in the Food Inquiry Here.

Commissioner of Accounts Fosdick received a communication from Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture, yesterday, tendering him the use of all the facilities of his office in the pure food investigation in this city.

The Commissioner replied that he would gladly take advantage of the offer. He said later that he had not decided what part of his work could be turned over to the Government office, but that he would arrange the details in a few days.

The Commissioner examined several witnesses yesterday. The most important development of the inquiry was the presentation of evidence that a certain fruit canning establishment in the city is conducted under unsanitary conditions, sweepings even being put in the cans to add to the weight.

AUTOISTS PLAN LEGISLATION.

None to Drive Under 18 Years—Inter-State Touring Facilities.

The Auto Conference at the Touring Club of America decided yesterday to recommend to the State Legislatures that no person under 18 years old be allowed to operate a car, whether he be the car's owner or not. A committee was appointed to draft uniform State laws so that an owner may tour in other States without annoyance or additional registration.

The Conference also voted to recommend that visiting autoists have fifteen days in each State free from interference.

The recommendations of the conference wil lbe laid before the annual meeting of State Governors at Frankfort, Ky., next week.

WANT EXTRA SESSION TO SPLIT DEMOCRATS

Republicans in Washington Think Advantage Could Be Gained by Forcing Tariff Issue.

INSURGENTS WILL BE FIRM

Their Guide Will Be 1908 Platform—Extra Session Would Give Democrats a Chance to Investigate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The belief that the Democrats are not going to have an easy time agreeing on the programme they are to follow with the control of the House in the sixty-second Congress has caused some Republicans here to favor a special session of the next Congress, to be called by the President for early in March.

Their argument is frankly based upon a belief that the Democrats will prove unable to produce a tariff bill that would be any more satisfactory to the country than is the Payne-Aldrich law. It is set forth that in any event President Taft would be certain to get the credit in the country for any good that might result from a special session, while the Democrats would be equally blamed for its failures. The worst that could happen to him, from the purely partisan political point of view, would be the enactment of such a measure as he could sign.

They think the Democrats will get so tangled up in their attempts at revision as to lose all the advantage they have obtained from the recent election, and that there will be a full year for this inability of theirs to sink into the minds of the voters before the Presidential election of 1912. If the President waits for a regular session the Democrats would be able to delay matters so far into the Summer that conventions will have been held and the campaign be under way before it appeared whether they were going to succeed or fail at their tariff work.

It is recognized that the Democratic chance of getting any tariff bill at all through both houses lies in their ability to frame such a measure as will command the support of the Republican insurgents in the Senate. It is clear now, from statements received by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent from the leading progressive Senators, just what kind of a tariff bill that will have to be. It cannot be a "tariff for revenue only" measure. The insurgents are unanimous for a tariff based clearly on the differential measure of protection laid down in the Republican platform of 1908. They all declare their readiness to co-operate with the "Democrats or anybody else" in the preparation and enactment of that sort of a tariff bill. They are equally unanimous in declaring their opposition to any other kind of a bill.

There is considerable sentiment among House Democrats against that kind of revision, and there seems to be almost no Democratic sentiment for it in the Senate. Some of the Democratic Senators, on the contrary, are for protection of the products of their States. The Democratic gains in the Senate at the recent election have reduced the Republican majority from 26 to 10, and the insurgents hold the balance of power. With the regular Republicans standing pat the Democrats would have to make their measure suitable to the insurgents to get it through. Republicans here do not believe that they would or could do that. It is this prospect that leads some Republicans to argue in favor of a special session at the earliest possible time.

A special session, however, would certainly bring the Administration some difficulties in the way of investigations. The Democrats are eager to get several committees at work probing the departments, especially those of the Interior and of Justice, and they want to know about the Panama Canal expenditures and the sale of friar lands in the Philippines. It is argued that these investigations are bound to come, and that the President would get more credit from permitting them to be started early than from trying to hold them off.

CHILLY LOVE FOR GAMBIERS.

Lawyers Say Their Brief Married Life Was Far from a Happy One.

Ex-Justice Van Wyck, counsel for Edith Gambier, who has brought an action for separation against her husband, Edward Gambier, cashier of the Merchants' Exchange National Bank, went before Supreme Court Justice Davis yesterday to make an appeal for $1,000 counsel fees and $250 monthly alimony pending the trial. In the course of the argument, in which he was opposed by S. B. Robinson for the husband, he took occasion to describe Mr. Gambier as a "picayune and unmanly person," and to apply other unfavorable epithets to him. Justice Davis gave both sides until Monday to submit papers.

According to the version of the married life of the Gambiers furnished by the lawyers, it was brief and formal. Each side blamed the other. Mr. Gambier, whose age Mr. Van Wyck placed roughly at 50, married Edith Russell of Atlanta, Ga., last April, and they lived together in Seventy-eighth Street, in hotels here, at Summit, N. J., and in Europe, and lived luxuriously at that. Miss Russell was only 25.

This lasted until August, Mr. Van Wyck continued, when he left her, declaring his intention never to return, hence the suit for separation, which her lawyer said had been met by a most astonishing defense. He contended that while there had been pleasant words enough, "the cad" had never so much as embraced his wife.

Gambier's lawyer asserted that it was the wife who rebuffed all of her husband's advances.

"If he ever attempted to embrace her in the morning," said th elawyer for Gambier, "she pushed him away. If he tried to kiss her on coming home at night an elbow prevented. Finally at Vienna, when he pressed for an understanding, she told him flatly that he had not lost her affection because he had never had it.

"'Then in God's name, why did you marry me?' Gambier asked. 'Because I wished to relieve my family of my support,' was her answer. "Then, Eno, we have come to the parting of the ways." And at this she did but held out hand and say, "Good morning, Edward."

TENNESSEE'S RAILWAY CLAIM

Federal Liability for Roads Destroyed in War Up for Determination.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The long pending claim of the State of Tennessee for railroads destroyed by the Federal Government during the civil war was taken up at a conference at the Treasury Department to-day.

John J. Vertrees, Judge E. B. Stahlman, of Nashville; Dabney M. Scales, of Memphis, Tenn., and John M. Hickey, of Washington, appeared to represent the State. Secretary MacVeagh, Secretary Dickinson and Attorney General Wickersham represented the Government under an act of Congress of 1898, which authorized those officers to sit as a commission for the adjustment of the claim.

The Treasury now holds about $700,000 in bonds of the State of Tennessee, which were issued before and after the war. There is no question of their validity and the Treasury has been trying to force their payment.

The Commissioners for the State, however, interposed counter claims of an equal amount for railroads destroyed by the Federal Government. Before the war Tennessee had made loans to railroads under construction and took liens upon them as security. It is asserted that the Government destroyed the State security and should reimburse it.

SHOT IN CHICAGO STRIKE.

Private Detective Hit as He Aided Police Disperse Garment Workers.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Renewed rioting, in which Thomas Flowers, a private detective, was shot, to-day took the place of the comparative peace, which has recently marked the garment strike. The strikers were said to be on their way to break into the plant of the Royal Tailors where non-union help is employed. Flowers joined the police at Fifth Avenue and Harrison Street in a demand that they disperse.

One of the crowd fired at the policemen. The injured man was taken to a hospital, and Mrs. Magdalina Debona, a striker, was arrested. A revolver with one chamber recently discharged, was found in her possession. She denied having fired the shot, however, and said she picked up the weapon after it had been thrown to the ground.

"SOCIAL OUTCASTS" DEAL OUT SHOCKS

CHUCK CONNORS HAPPY

Says He Gets His "Hay, Hash, an' Herrin'" Every Day—Emma Goldman Hobbled.

Ben Reitman, Emma Goldman's manager, who says he believes the same things she does, only worse, planned an entertainment for last night at Pacific Hall, 209 East Broadway, at which the entertainers should be "outcasts of society," and he so worded his advance information that those who went expected to be shocked. They went there for that purpose, many of them apparently well-to-do people from uptown. They were shocked their full money's worth. Reitman said he hoped he had given a full quarter's worth of shock. His audience agreed that he had.

The upper hall in the building at 209 East Broadway, which seats about 300, could not accommodate all those who were anxious to pay 25 cents to get shocked, and so soon after the entertainment began Reitman announced that the lower hall had also been rented. The overflow audience would be accommodated there, and all the entertainers would do double turns.

The meeting, according to the programme, "was arranged to present the true social value of the outcasts." Hutchins Hapgood, author of "The Autobiography of a Thief" and several similar books, who served as Chairman, said that the men on the list to speak were the élite of the outcasts.

They had not been cast out of society by society; they had cast themselves out because they were unable to accommodate themselves to the conventional limitations of society. He believed they were having a beneficial influence on society in that they were continually battering against the strict circle of conventionality, and in time they would stretch that circle, which would be a good thing, he thought.

Mr. Hapgood was using a good many such words as "sociological" and "institutional." Chuck Conners, who was sitting on the little stage, with his abbreviated derby pulled down over his eyes, finally growled out:

"Hand it out plain, bucko."

In introducing Connors Mr. Hapgood said that he had about him an "exquisite flavor of the slums," and that he was an artist. Though he himself was, as he informed the audience, "lit," information that was obviously superfluous, Connors preached a sermon against the foolishness of being what is known as a "good feller." He was for "the bloke that puts his coin in alcohol—so as to keep it."

All in all, he declared, he was satisfied with his kind of life. "I has me hay, hash, an' herrin', an' when the landlord comes in I can look him in the eye and say 'Good mornin'."

Hippolyte Havel, who writes for Emma Goldman's Mother Earth, was down on the programme as the "outcast psychologist." Mr. Hapgood read a letter from Alexander Berkman, who could not be present, saying that Havel was "sweetly intellectual," and that he was so gentle that he doubted even in the efficacy of revolution. After saying that he was disappointed in his audience, seeing that they were not outcasts, but evidently people in good circumstances who wanted to be amused, Havel declared that "to doubt revolution would be to doubt lite itself. Adam and Eve were the first outcasts. Jesus Christ was a notable one, and almost all the great artists that ever lived were either intellectual or economic outcasts."

Sadakichi Hartman, a tall, thin young man, with a tremendous bush of hair and a lisp, was introduced as "the Bohemian outcast, a joyous grafter, who advertises himself widely, but who is an artist with much fine sympathy for color and melody." He read an act from a play of his called "Mohammed," which, he said, would never be published in this country because of a "certain freedom in language." He restrained himself on account of his mixed audience, but even so it was easy to see that he was right about its never being published. He was 15 cents worth of shock by himself.

Arthur Bullard, the "outcast moralist," was introduced as a "sort of black sheep, one who might be a great journalist, a close thinker, but who always seemed to be under suspicion." He was a tall, thin man, wearing a scattered growth of brown beard, his eyes watery and weak. Speaking in the manner of the Old Testament, with much use of "verily" and "I say unto you," he told his audience that they were cowardly fools for fearing death or any other obvious and inevitable fact. At the end he said, "Let us pray," and the audience burst into loud guffaws. Nevertheless, he did pray to "God, the combination of all the aspirations of man," hiding a smile behind his hand.

"Pittsburg Joe," a small, well-dressed Englishman, said he never worked; that he preferred to beg; that he considered his vocation as ethical as that of any other business man. He enjoyed his profits just as much as any grocer did. "Why shouldn't I take the workingman's money?" he said. "The Trusts would get it, anynow."

Courtenay Lemmon, the "outcast critic," spoke about the development of song and folklore among the tramps and hoboes. "Mickey," the "outcast farmer," a little man with a heavy head of hair, said he had worked for a while, but since he got none of the fruit of his labors he decided not to work any more. He hadn't and he had got along quite as well.

There were loud cries for Emma Goldman, though she was not on the programme. Finally she walked to the stage, flaring a blue silk hobble skirt. She told the audience that they had been buncoed in a way; that they hadn't heard any real outcasts. She was a real outcast, she said, and by choice.

Reitman, saying he would then shock everybody, cursed the police, the newspapers, the law, and "everything respectable."

HOUSE MAY REJECT MEMBERS

Seats of J. M. Curley of Boston and Caleb Powers of Kentucky in Doubt.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—It was reported here to-day that from the Massachusetts Republicans will come a movement to prevent Representative-elect James M. Curley, a Democrat, from that State, from taking his seat in the Sixty-second Congress. Curley served a sentence of one year in the Boston House of Correction several years ago for having impersonated others in civil service examinations.

Thomas Curley, his brother, was convicted of the same charge, and served a similar sentence. Soon after his release he was elected to the Massachusetts Legislature, which body refused to receive him as a member. James Curley has been a Boston Alderman for some years without protest.

Opposition to the seating of Curley in the House will be made on the ground that he was convicted of an offense against the United States, and the action of the Massachusetts Legislature in excluding his brother will be cited as a case in point. The decision will rest in the hands of a Democratic House, and Curley is a Democrat.

The only precedent believed to have a bearing on the matter held that charges against the conduct of a member involve privileges when they relate to his representative capacity, but they do not do so when they relate to his conduct before he became a member.

From Kentucky also comes a report that opposition from the Democrats will develop against the seating of Representative-elect Caleb Powers, who was convicted and afterward pardoned of complicity in the shooting of the late Governor-elect Goebel of Kentucky. Mr. Powers is a Republican, and it is not unlikely that the two cases may be set off against each other and nothing be done.

At any rate, it is believed that a new precedent will be established by refusing to seat them, though a Representative from Utah, Mr. Roberts, was excluded some years ago on account of alleged bigamy.

QUEER ENTRIES IN CENTRAL BOOKS

March Expenses "Manipulated," So Inter-State Commission's Examiner Finds.

PERTINENT TO RATE INQUIRY

Three Items Increased Expenses $672,045 Through Bookkeeping—Charged Off Locomotives Still Running.

The Inter-State Commerce Commission has admitted into the record in its investigation of rate increases in the Eastern, or "Official Classification" territory, a report by J. C. Wallace, one of its examiners, revealing a process by which the expense accounts of the New York Central Railroad were increased for March by $672,045 over the corresponding month of 1909, by bookkeeping entries covering not more than three items. The report is accompanied by copies of letters exchanged between New York Central officials, indicating that the opinion of counsel was called for on the idea of holding part of the receipts of the road, due to an extra dividend on its Lake Shore stock, out of the income accounts for the March quarter and distributing them over a longer period. This, the road's counsel advised, would be "illogical."

Examiner Wallace's report covers his investigations of the handling of items of cross-tie renewals, steel rail renewals, and steam locomotive renewals in the month of March, 1909. In the office of the Auditor of Disbursements he found these rapid increases for March, 1910, over March, 1909, in respect to the three items in question:

Rails	237,452	90,213	148,239
Steam loco. renew.	278,383	6,788	271,594
Total increase			$672,045

Mr. Wallace found that the accounts covering renewal of rails and ties represented one process and the item of locomotive renewals quite another, both of which he details in his report. As to the rails and ties, it appears that it had been the custom of the road in previous years to distribute the estimated cost of rail and tie replacement over the ten months from March to December inclusive, in as many equal installments. In March of this year the entries were made according to that system, but on April 27, the General Auditor, R. A. White, issued orders that the tie and rail account be so stated as to charge into March one-quarter of the entire year's estimate as covering the months of January, February, and March of 1910. This caused the increases of $252,211 over March, 1909, in tie replacement, and of $148,239 in rail replacement. The actual amount spent in March for rails was $26,145, and for ties $16,746.

Strange Entry for Locomotives.

As to the locomotives, there was a point that attracted even more attention on the part of the commission's examiner. The same letter of General Auditor White which gave the instructions to change the entries regarding the rail and tie renewals, ordered that a charge to operating expenses of $273,683 be made to represent the value of thirty-five locomotives which had been condemned, less salvage. But Mr. Wallace was somewhat surprised to find when he made his examination that the Superintendent of Motive Power, Mr. Howard, and Mr. Chamberlain, the Chairman of the freight car repair pool, had never been notified that these locomotives were written off on the company's books, and received from him their first information to this effect.

The cards covering the existence of these locomotives as part of the equipment of the system were still in their places on June 2, when Mr. Wallace observed that the locomotives had been officially dead since the preceding March, and his further examination of the mileage records developed that seven of the thirty-five locomotives moved an aggregate of 807 miles in the month of April. One engine ran 354 miles, another 162, another 139, a fourth 72, a fifth 72 miles, and the other two 9 miles each after their obituary had been recorded in the Auditor's books.

Might Have Charged Twice.

"It was claimed by the examiner," he says in his report, "without contradiction on the part of the carrier's officials, that had the condition not been brought to the attention of the interested officials the retirement of these locomotives would have been reported in the regular manner by the Superintendent of Motive Power during April, May, and June of 1910, when the locomotives were actually sold or demolished; consequently 'Steam Locomotives—Renewals,' would have been charged and 'Equipment Replacement Fund' credited a second time with the original cost or inventory value of the locomotives in question."

Mr. Wallace includes in his report a letter from General Auditor White, dated June 2, to Vice President Smith, in which this request was made: "Kindly direct Mr. Howard to advise Mr. Chamberlain, Chairman Freight Car Repair Pool, of the condemnation of these locomotives in April, so that the record may be corrected, and that these locomotives will not be reported a second time as condemned."

Mr. Wallace at this point refers to letters exchanged between General Auditor White and Vice President Smith of the New York Central as throwing light upon "the motive which actuated the transactions referred to in this report." These are the two letters which bring up the question of the Lake Shore extra dividend which the Central received in March.

April 27, 1910.

Mr. A. H. Smith, Vice President and General Manager:

Dear Sir: Referring to our conversation in regard to the March quarter, Mr. Place advises me that it would be illogical, although perhaps not illegal, to carry any portion of the extra Lake Shore dividend over into the second quarter. I have, however, recommended to Mr. Carstensen a charge to the March operating expenses of $275,683 to cover the value, less salvage, of thirty-five locomotives which have been condemned, and a charge of $622,538.50 for rails and ties, to cover one-quarter of the estimated expenditure for the year instead of $249,000, which is one-tenth. I also have asked Mr. Carstensen to see that the March figures are withheld until he had had a chance to confer with Mr. Brown.

Yours truly,
R. A. WHITE, General Auditor.

The answer came in this letter:

Boston & Albany Railroad.
At Boston, April 28, 1910.

By Messenger.

My Dear Mr. White: Thank you very much for your favor of the 27th inst. advising that Mr. Place stated "it would be illogical, perhaps not illegal, to carry any portion of the extra Lake Shore dividend over into the second quarter."

If it is illogical to spread credits it should be illogical to spread debits over one quarter, two quarters, or twelve months.

My only interest, of course, is the effect that it may have upon matters that are now being considered. Believe me very truly yours,
A. H. SMITH.

Mr. R. A. White, General Auditor.

Increase Instead of Decrease.

To this letter Mr. White replied that while it might be "illogical and also illegal" to spread debits over a period, an exception could be made for classes of work which might be logically continued through a series of months. But that view apparently did not appeal to the Inter-State Commerce examiner, who continues in his report to point out that on the figures of the New York Central, as reported to the Inter-State Commerce Commission, the net operating revenues in 1910 decreased $40,678 and $171,411 for the quarter ended March 31 over the corresponding periods of last year, whereas "if the accounts had not been manipulated to meet the wishes of the executives on account of the effect it would have on 'matters that are now being considered,' it will be seen that while a slight decrease in net operating revenue would have existed for the month of March, 1910, the increase in net operating revenue for the three months would have been $447,794, instead of a decrease of $171,411."

The report continues:

"Upon consideration by the examiner it was deemed advisable to ascertain definitely from the office of the Vice President and General Manager the meaning of the last paragraph in the letter of April 28, 1910, in which he states: 'My only interest, of course, is the effect that it would have on matters that are now being considered.' Mr. Smith is absent from the city and will be for some little time, and the matter was submitted to H. L. Ingersoll, assistant to the General Manager, who advised that the thought which Mr. Smith had in mind was the wage controversy under consideration at that time.

Shippers Backed the Report.

"The question was put to him whether the gentlemen who were handling the wage question as arbitrators were in possession of all the facts relating to the income statement of the carrier for the month of March, 1910, and for the three months ended March 31, 1910, and the statement was made that they were not advised as to what was done with the March accounts. He stated that somewhat prior to the time that the correspondence took place between Mr. Smith and Mr. White a statement had appeared in The Wall Street Journal of a somewhat complimentary character regarding the outlook for results from operations of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, and that it seemed unfortunate that with the wage outlook of uncertain character any one should be misled by optimistic statements."

The shippers who obtained the introduction of this report in evidence have followed in this respect somewhat the line of attack taken by the Western shippers, who questioned the increases in maintenance charges on many of the railroads in their territory on the ground that accounts were arranged to show a condition more unfavorable to the railroads than actually existed. The Inter-State Commerce Commission has shown a disposition to make very careful inquiries into that end of the railroad rate controversy.

"AIDA" AT METROPOLITAN.

A Splendidly Brilliant Performance with Messrs. Caruso and Amato.

Il Re	Giulio Rossi
Amneris	Louise Homer
Aida	Emmy Destinn
Radames	Enrico Caruso
Ramfis	Adamo Didur
Amonasro	Pasquale Amato
Un Mesaggiero	Pietro Audisio
Una Sacerdotessa	Rita Fornia

Conductor, Arturo Toscanini.

An enormous audience filled the Metropolitan Opera House at the third performance of the season last evening, when Verdi's "Aïda" was given, and witnessed that opera presented in its most brilliant and sumptuous guise, sung superbly by the artists who in recent years have been most prominently identified with it—Mme. Destinn, Mme. Homer, Messrs. Caruso, Amato, and Didur. It was conducted by Mr. Toscanini with great fire and superbly dramatic energy, and it roused the audience to great enthusiasm.

Mr. Caruso was in his best voice, and after the restraint that he had put upon himself in the performance of "Armide" on Monday evening he rejoiced in the opportunity to pour forth his greatest prodigality of voice, his most robust high notes, his most passionate phrasings, after he had sung "Celeste Aïda" in an extremely artistic style, with continence and restraint. Mme. Destinn's Aïda had all the brilliancy of voice and the pathetic intensity of action that are most intimately associated with her in this part, the one in which she made her first appearance before the public of the Metropolitan Opera House. Mme. Homer's Amneris is also certainly among her finest parts, and these and the other singers in the cast worked together as if inspired by an unwonted enthusiasm.

The stage setting, the scenic features, the groupings of the choral masses, were all of splendid richness and effectiveness, and the singing of the chorus was of the best that has been heard here for a long time in its precision, sonority, and varied shading. The orchestra did wonders under Mr. Toscanini's masterful hand.

THE MARGULIES TRIO.

A Strange Composition by Erich Korngold, Aged Thirteen, Played.

The excellent trio organization headed by Miss Adele Margulies, with whom are associated Messrs. Leopold Lichtenberg and Leo Schulz, began their series of concerts last evening in Mendelssohn Hall, where they had many listeners. They played Dvorak's "Dumky" trio, Op. 90; Beethoven's sonata for piano and violin, Op. 30, No. 3, and a trio, Op. 1, by Erich Korngold. The special interest in the last composition lay in the fact that it is the work of a boy of 13 years, who has been much talked of in recent months and announced as a remarkable genius, not as an instrumental performer, but as a composer; and such geniuses are rare. He lives in Vienna, where his father is musical critic of the Neue Freie Presse, and where the Imperial Opera recently performed a ballet of his composition. His trio is thus introduced to this public with credentials enough, which always need to be looked into in the case of juvenile composers, whom it is so easy for their elders to help out, with retouchings and much more.

Master Korngold's trio shows a singular state of mind for a boy of his age. There is certainly none of the naturalness, simplicity and directness of boyhood in it. He seems to be beginning at the point where Strauss has at present brought the art of music; and indeed most of his themes have the crabbedness and ungainly antimelodiousness of those which Strauss has used in some of his later works. They might have come from "Ein Heldenleben."

The harmonies by which they are supported and developed are even more erratic and are forced, and though the composition is said to be in D major, it stays neither in that nor any other tonality for successive measures. Supposing that the trio is really the boy's own, as it stands it is a singular phenomenon. If they do these things in the green tree, what shall they do in the dry?

It is a very difficult composition in its ensemble; the three players had worked hard to give it a logical cohesiveness and their performance clearly did everything that could be done to represent it properly.

SMALL INVESTORS OWN SUGAR TRUST

Big Interests Let Go Until Now Three-Quarters of Stock Is Held in 50-Share Lots.

FEW 1,000-SHARE BLOCKS

Once a Market Kite and Now Rare in Brokerage Offices—Nearly 20,000 Holders of the Stock.

Facts obtained yesterday from the offices of the American Sugar Refining Company in this city reveal the extent to which the stock of the company, which was once completely dominated by the Havemeyer interests, although that family never held a majority of the stock, is distributed among small investors. The present management represents the great body of the stockholders, some of the Directors having been directly nominated by groups of them. It was not, however, until the army of small stockholders were thoroughly aroused by the revelation of the frauds which had been perpetrated against the Government that they put an end to the system of selecting Directors, whereby year after year the Havemeyer interests and those associated with them in the management of the company by voting the proxies of individual stockholders continued themselves at the head of the company although their originally large holdings had been practically all sold to smaller investors through the open market.

On Oct. 1 this year the $90,000,000 of American Sugar Refining stock, of which $45,000,000 is preferred and $45,000,000 common, was held by 19,175 shareholders. Of these 51 per cent. were women. Of the total number of shareholders 78 per cent. are residents of New England, and among them they hold 63 per cent. of the total outstanding capital stock. Over 54 per cent., or about $49,000,000 of the stock is held in Massachusetts alone, and about 25 per cent., or $23,000,000, is held in New York with the other 20 per cent., or $18,000,000, scattered among holders in other States and in foreign countries.

Shares to the number of 95,352 of a par value of $9,500,000 stand in the names of executors, trustees, guardians, banks, churches, hospitals and charitable institutions, mostly in Massachusetts.

The present position of the American Sugar Company's stock in comparison with the days when this stock was the leader of speculation on the New York Stock Exchange and the prototype of stock market manipulation is pretty clearly shown by the fact that a careful survey of the company's stock lists on Oct. 1 showed that out of all the $90,000,000 only about $1,600,000, or 1¾ per cent. of the total shares, stood in the names of brokerage houses. Before the stock was distributed to individual investors it appeared in the lists of stocks in the hands of Wall Street brokers probably to a larger extent than any other one stock. Gradually, however, as the liquidation of the holdings of insiders in the company went on, the large blocks of stock disappeared, and now the average holdings are less than fifty shares to each stockholder.

The books of the company on Oct. 1 showed that not more than four persons held blocks of the stock as large as 1,000 shares. All told, just $495,000 out of the $90,000,000, or a trifle more than ½ of 1 per cent. of the stock, is held in lots of 1,000 shares or more. Another ¾ of 1 per cent. of the stock, or about $630,000, is held in lots of from 500 to 999 shares; 9½ per cent., or about $8,500,000, is held in lots from 100 up to 499 shares, and 4½ per cent., or a little more than $4,000,000, is held in lots ranging from 51 to 99 shares. This leaves 84.75 per cent. of the stock, or $76,275,000 out of the $90,000,000, in the hands of investors who hold not more than fifty shares apiece. Thus the stock, which once was the plaything of speculation in Wall Street, is held now by a great army of small investors, many of whom in all probability paid prices much in excess of the figures now quoted for it.

ROYSTER DOYSTER PRODUCED

Columbia Students Applauded in Old English Comedy.

"Ralph Royster Doyster," a quaint early English comedy, was presented last night by the Philolexian Society of Columbia University in Brinckerhoff Theatre before a large audience.

The students tried to reproduce so far as possible the sixteenth century stage settings and costumes.

Specialists in the English department, among whom were Profs. John Erskine and H. V. Tassin, lent their assistance in the preparation of the production. It was the Columbia students' first attempt in the field of revivals of the old English drama, and the event proved so successful that it may possibly become an annual feature.

Udall's "Ralph Royster Doyster," said to be the first comedy written in the English language, was published about 1566. Ralph Royster Doyster, the leading character, exemplifies the riotous, dissipated, swaggering fool whom Shakespeare portrayed in several of his plays; notably in the character of Falstaff.

In the play, Ralph, who is a wealthy braggart, imagines he is a favorite among the women, and accordingly tries to make love to Christian Custance, a lady already affianced to Gawyn Goodluck. Merygreke, a jolly good-for-nothing, gets Ralph into trouble by changing the punctuation of a love missive sent by the latter to Christian. Ralph later tries like Romeo to carry off his lady love, but the attempt is thwarted by the girl's father. Finally, Goodluck and Christian are reconciled and their marriage brings the play to a happy conclusion for everybody but Ralph, who, of course, doesn't deserve any better fate.

A second performance of "Ralph Royster Doyster" will be given to-morrow afternoon in Brinckerhoff Theatre.

SPECULATORS FARE BADLY.

Hold Their Best Opera Seats Till Too Late—Metropolitan Packed.

Although the Metropolitan Opera House was packed to suffocation last night at the performance of "Aïda," the standing audience being greater than on the opening night, the ticket speculators fared badly. Anticipating an enormous call for seats, they reserved their best ones until it was too late.

Consequently between 8 and 8:30 o'clock the sidewalk in front of the Opera House was filled with speculators shouting tickets at half rates. This was almost unbelievable, when one saw the crowd inside, especially as people had been turned away from the box office for some time. The audience contained many notabilities, including Signor Puccini.

RACHMANINOFF AGAIN.

Russian Society Plays His E Minor Symphony in Carnegie Hall.

The Russian Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Modest Altschuler, opened another season last night at Carnegie Hall. The first number on the programme was Rachmaninoff's now celebrated second symphony in E minor. This symphony was originally played in this country for the first time by the Russian Symphony Society. Since then it has been performed by the Philadelphia Orchestra, and the Boston men under Max Fiedler, who achieved such success with it that it was repeated at a pair of ensuing Boston concerts and afterward given in New York.

Since he first produced the work Mr. Altschuler is said to have conversed with the composer about the different tempi. He also has probably heard other performances of it. In any case, his reading has radically changed. Last night his men gave a very good account of the first three movements. In the finale they were more Russian, in being more rough, than the Boston men; also a certain incisive quality in the playing of this last movement, which is essential to a brilliant performance of it, was lacking.

Two orchestral numbers by Liadow, probably novelties, were on the programme. They were both specimens of programme music. For one of them the title, "The Enchanted Lake," sufficed as a description. It was a very pretty bit. The second, called "Kikimora," described in tones the following passage by Sakharov: "Among the rocky fastnesses dwells and prospers Kikimora with the Wizard. And the live-long day to her delighted ear the tell-tale cat whispers outlandish fables, while in her crystal cradle she is rocked by gnomes. Seven years have gone and Kikimora attains her maturity. Wee, withered, weazened, swarthy, shrunken wretch! Oh, what a head, no larger than a thimble; her body is thinner than a stalk of straw. From morning bright till murky night Kikimora carries on, rattling, clanging, hissing, snarling. From inky night till morning light she spins a distafful of hemp; then twists a thread of flax; then lays a warp of silk. In her heart she harbors evil to all honest folk."

The musical idea of this was pretty dull until the seven years had elapsed, when the composition began to sound like "L'Apprenti Sorcier" and "Till Eulenspiegel." A xylophone or some such instrument contributed to the grotesque effect intended.

The soloist of the evening was Alexander Heinemann, the German baritone, who sang an air from Borodine's "Prince Igor" and four songs of Rubinstein. He was recalled many times. The programme was concluded by Tschaikowsky's Overture, "1812." The audience was large and very enthusiastic, especially after the symphony.

John Junior Weds Mrs. M. M. Rogers.

John Junior, an actor, who is appearing in "Getting a Polish," at Wallack's Theatre, and Mrs. M. M. Rogers, of West Ninety-fifth Street, New York, were married yesterday morning at the Church of the Transfiguration. The bride has just returned from a tour of Europe. Mr. Junior is well known on the local stage and also in London, where he has appeared with several American companies. He and Mrs. Junior will spend their honeymoon in New York, until the end of the run of the play at Wallack's.

COURT THREATENED BY ARMED MANIAC

He Appears Suddenly at the Sanity Inquiry of Mrs. Caroline B. Martin.

CARRIED A BIG REVOLVER

The Woman Prisoner Makes a Furious Attack on the Judge and Others in Her Case.

A melodramatic outbreak occurred yesterday in the Essex County Court House, Newark, in which Mrs. Caroline B. Martin, whose sanity is being inquired into, villified Judge Jay Ten Eyck, Prosecutor Wilbur Mott, and every one connected with her case as she ranted up and down the courtroom.

The appearance on the scene at the time of Oliver D. Matthews, a rough-looking man of seventy years, carrying a heavy revolver, threw the court room into a state of confusion. Matthews declared that if Mrs. Martin's case was "down South" the Judge and the Prosecutor would have been killed long ago. He was immediately arrested by court officers and the weapon taken from him.

Mrs. Martin, who, with her sister, Mrs. Mary Snead, is charged with the murder of her daughter, Ocey W. M. Snead, at East Orange, November, 1909, has given vent to her opinions several times during the insanity proceedings, but on none of the former occasions was she so violent as she was yesterday. She tore off her hat and black veil which have shielded her features during the proceedings and threw them aside while she went on with her tirade.

Matthews, who is afflicted with homicidal mania, the alienists say, entered another room in the court house while Mrs. Martin was in the midst of her outburst. He told one of the constables that Mrs. Martin was not being treated right. He added that he was a Southerner and a friend of Mrs. Martin. He had in his possession a small paper covered package in which he had two faded carnations and some withered ferns. He demanded that he be allowed to give the flowers to Mrs. Martin, and muttered incoherently.

Constables James H. Reid, Gottfried Kunz, and Abram Lehrich heard Matthews say:

"The delay in this case is a shame, and if it were down South the Judge and Prosecutor would have been shot." He had no sooner completed the remark than the three constables grabbed him and made a hurried search for weapons. The pistol was found in a coat pocket.

Matthews was hurried to the office of Frederick Weimer, chief of the Prosecutor's detectives, where he was recognized as a man who had been in the insane asylum. He was held pending disposition of his case. He will probably be committed to the Essex County Insane Asylum at Overbrook, N. J.

Mrs. Martin's outburst came when she was being examined as a witness by Judge Ten Eyck. She talked quietly for several minutes and then cried out that she was a victim of conspiracy and that the lawyers, constables, and court were bribed, and that an effort was being made to railroad her to prison. All efforts to pacify her proved futile, and Judge Ten Eyck directed that she be taken to his office.

After the court room had been cleared of everybody except those interested in the case, Mrs. Martin was examined. She refused to be sworn, and did not take the witness stand. Judge Ten Eyck took a chair close to the prisoner and began to put questions to her. It was then that she began her tirade.

The case will go on to-day.

FEW FEVER GERMS IN ICE.

So Says a Physician Who Has Long Made a Study of Typhoid.

The National Ice Association of America held its second annual session at the Hotel Astor yesterday. Last night there was a dinner at which several medical authorities spoke on the relation of natural ice to contagious diseases. Dr. Hibbert W. Hill, Chief of the Bureau of Epidemiology of the Minnesota State Board of Health, said he had found after long investigation that ice was an inappreciable factor in the transmission of typhoid germs.

"It has been estimated," said Dr. Hill, "that 250,000 people suffer from typhoid fever in the United States every year. For the last twenty years during which sufficient attention has been paid to typhoid fever to elicit the source of outbreaks, 5,000,000 people have suffered. From this number 1-1,200 of 1 per cent. have been attributed to natural ice, all occurring in one outbreak.

"Ice was taken in one instance from a river actually producing typhoid at the time to the extent of 7 per cent. of the community, yet the ice from that river did not produce a single case, and this history was repeated year after year. Natural ice, because of its great powers of purification, might be taken from the same water sources as produce typhoid fever yet could not be held responsible for over 1-200 of 1 per cent. of the total water-born typhoid."

The session will be continued this afternoon, when several papers on natural ice and its uses will be read by members.

FORCED TO FILE DEED.

Court Compels Register to Accept Document He Took for a Mortgage.

Supreme Court Justice Davis granted an order yesterday to compel Max S. Grifenhagen, Register of this county, to accept for filing a document which Lawyer Rickardy, representing the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, described as an actual conveyance of real property.

It had been viewed with suspicion as perhaps intended for a mortgage when the deed was offered by John F. Butler of 575 West 161st Street. Deputy Attorney General Frank, appearing for the register in the mandamus proceedings protested that the case was of vast importance, because the mortgage tax means millions of revenue to the State, and some previous refusals of deeds that looked suspicious to the register had been justified by the fact that the parties had promptly come forward with the mortgage tax.

The Work of Heppelwhite in Satinwood

THE decorative value of Satinwood seems to have appealed with especial force to the genius of Heppelwhite. He fairly revelled in its shimmering beauty of grain and color, inlaying it with rare woods, painting it with dainty wreaths and garlands, as well as using it unadorned and in its natural state.

Some marvelously faithful Reproductions of these Heppelwhite Satinwood originals have been gathered together in one of our Galleries.

There are Occasional Chairs and Chairs in sets; there are Tables of every description; there are the famous Heppelwhite "Duchess" Settees; there are Cabinets and Fire Screens—each one of which repeats the charm and fascination of its original.

POWERS OF THE SPEAKER.

Some of the Democrats who will sit in the Sixty-second Congress favor the insurgent Republican idea of curtailing the powers of the Speaker, by taking from him the appointment of the standing committees. The idea seems to be in the air now of transforming the Speaker of the House of Representatives, hitherto the most important personage in Washington after the President, into a presiding officer shorn of political influence and patronage. VICTOR MURDOCK of Kansas, one of the leaders of the insurgent Republicans, strongly favored the appointment of the House committees by the House itself in a recent article in The Independent. A Committee on Committees is favored by JAMES S. HAY of Virginia, BURGESS of Texas, and other Democrats elected to the Sixty-second Congress. The Chairman of that committee would, presumably, be the floor leader of the dominant party. The revolt against Cannonism has led to this revolutionary plan to shift the power to punish political enemies and reward friends from one personage to another. The power will remain, however, and even if it is shared equally by all the members of the proposed committee, it will still be a power to be reckoned with.

Probably if the next Speaker of the House is CHAMP CLARK, which seems likely enough now, he will take the office with all its accustomed powers and prerogatives. It has been well administered in the past and can be in the future. Not all the famous Speakers have been Czars. The situation in regard to the Speakership at present is merely interesting. The country will probably favor cautious and well-considered action in a matter so important.

THE INTERBOROUGH'S DUTY.

Possibly the Interborough and its spokesmen may be surprised to learn that its statements at this subway crisis are unsatisfactory to the public to whom it owes so much. It is enjoying a contract rich almost beyond avarice, and it might be supposed that it would like to have more of the same sort. It also might seem that it was actuated by the human desire to stand well among its associates, and not to be regarded with aversion. Perhaps it might even be credited with a feeling of gratitude and obligation to the community. All these things may be actually true instead of supposititious, and yet the authorized declarations on its behalf heighten the popular repugnance, which is the greatest obstacle to progress along lines which subway construction must take if there is to be any repetition of old profits by the corporation or by the community.

The Interborough owes it to itself and to the city that there shall be no prolongation of such state of affairs as is outlined by its President's words yesterday. Mr. SHONTS says there is a foolish report that he is not authorized to speak by his Directors. His denial of the report is not enough. He should produce his authorization by the Directors. Better yet, he should produce a formal statement by the corporation itself of what it would do and will not do. We are much obliged for the statement which he was good enough to make through THE TIMES yesterday, but he must see that it is no more conclusive than the similar statement by Mr. WILLCOX, which Mr. SHONTS does not regard as satisfactory or final. We make no suggestion that either gentleman is speaking without authorization, or that the words of either are not accurately published. We merely say that these outgivings are not the basis of anything but public opinion, which is proverbially fickle, and of which both gentlemen have some complaint to make. It would enormously benefit them and the community if the cause of complaint were removed by the substitution of something binding for the verbal communications which are so unsatisfactory to everybody.

It is not our business to suggest to anybody what form these communications should take, but we feel free to express to both disputants impartially the public dissatisfaction with the parts they each play. Mr. SHONTS might well produce promptly a communication so formal and inviting that the Public Service Commission would not feel at liberty to treat it as casually as his last communication was treated. And the Public Service Commission might well give such a communication a more receptive greeting than the last. A critical interview might be equivalent to a rejection through its indication of a frame of mind not open to conviction. Commissioner EUSTIS said as much in THE TIMES yesterday. There was no possibility of considering anything until the Commission was through with the Triborough.

Quite so. The Commission is now relieved of the Triborough, because it will never survive the hearing which must be held upon it. The opportunity is now ripe to urge the Commission to show more open-mindedness to plans other than its own. And it may be hoped that the Interborough will also rise to its renewed opportunity in the crisis which now confronts the company as well as the city. It will confer an enormous boon if it will deliver the city from the necessity of issuing bonds which will carry its debt far beyond the round billion. It ought to have almost anything within reason for this public service, provided only that it will relieve the city's desperate necessity regarding travel as well as regarding finances. And on the other hand its past great services will hardly protect it if it shall continue to expose itself to the reproach of obstructionism. Rightly or wrongly, it is debited with the obnoxious policy of hindering any other rapid transit than its own and not wishing to enlarge its own. It should hardly allow the sun to set without relieving itself of this reproach. If in fact, as it used to boast, it is prepared to act, it ought to act so as to make the next move clearly belong to somebody else, and pressure will then be brought to bear in the proper quarter.

We would rather hang a cabbage ahead of the donkey's nose—meaning no offense, but feeling a certain justification in using the simile—than hit it with a club. We have never thought that they correctly represented public opinion who imputed the Interborough's profits to it for a fault. It is no more correct to say that the public is angry because the Interborough will not earn more profits by enlarging its service. Great as those profits have been, the city's profits have been larger. The public would like both profits to grow indefinitely. The Interborough Company as well as its President should make it clear that it is willing to enlarge both profits on reasonable terms. And if the Public Service Commission thinks that the terms which Mr. SHONTS says have been pending unanswered since July are unreasonable it ought to place the blame with the Interborough instead of itself, where it rests so long as the proposal has not been condemned by anything more formal than a newspaper interview. The point is not who is to blame, but why do we not get on, and whose is the next move.

THE CASE OF GALLAGHER.

The delay in the case of DANIEL GALLAGHER, who with intent to kill shot Mayor GAYNOR Aug. 9, is unfortunate. The explanation of the failure to indict him for attempted murder, or even to take the first steps toward indictment, is quite inadequate, and the delay is further justification of the charge, so frequently made, of laxity in the treatment of dangerous criminals in this country. Presumably no influence has been exerted in behalf of the Mayor's assailant. The Hudson County authorities have simply been negligent. The idea of keeping GALLAGHER in jail a day longer than a year, the extent of the term in which an indictment for murder can be found under the New Jersey law, is preposterous.

Mr. GAYNOR is restored to health and is performing daily the arduous duties of his office. His assailant should be brought to trial immediately, and when convicted sentenced to the punishment provided for his crime by the New Jersey law. Delay in so serious a case is likely to encourage other malcontents of a similar character. GALLAGHER is kept as a sort of public ward. We learn that he has lately cut the acquaintance of the Warden of the Hudson County Jail because he fancies that the Warden has not treated him well. He should be tried and suitably punished for his abominable crime, without any further delay for imaginary or sentimental reasons.

SHOULD SHE SMUGGLE?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am contemplating a trip abroad and am seriously debating with myself whether I would not be justified, upon my return, in smuggling through the customs whatever purchases I may make and, if discovered, in refusing to pay duty.

I am an ardent believer in free trade for moral, economic, and selfish reasons, and I believe the present rates of duty to be unfair and unwise and even maleficent. But, being a woman, I have had no voice whatever in the making of the laws by which they are imposed upon me. Now, being debarred from taking any part in the making or the changing of these laws, would I not be as justified in evading or subverting them, if I could, as were the Bostonians when they pitched the tea into the harbor? Is not the duty which I would have to pay upon a gown or a piece of lace just as much taxation without representation as the taxes of which they complained?

It does not answer my question or solve my problem to say that I am no more taxed unrepresented than are those voters who believe, as I do, in free trade. For they have been free to work against the iniquitous protective tariff. They could, if they cared enough about it, do their best to get nominated and elected to Congress men who would represent their sentiments in that body. But I am denied every effort of that sort because I have not the suffrage. And I very much wish to vote so that I can exert my influence and cast my ballot for laws which I believe would make for economic welfare and universal peace.

Therefore, would I not be within my moral rights in resorting to the only protest possible to me and evading or defying a law which I am convinced is iniquitous and unjust and which I have had no shadow of a share in making? MELISSA.

New York, Nov. 17, 1910.

The spirit that animated the Boston "tea-party" was not furtive. Their work was open. The men were resolved to be martyrs, if need be. Smuggling has not these aspects of martyrdom. Principles are never vindicated by stealth. And if a woman should openly defy the customs, she would not only go to jail, but would be justly condemned for her silliness.

YALE VS. HARVARD.

Mr. "HAM" FISH, the able coach of Harvard's linemen, pooh-poohs Yale's "Shevlin shift." Its vintage is ancient. Did not WALTER CAMP perfect it years ago? Did he not teach it to "HARRY" WILLIAMS? Is it not now returned by Minnesota's coach to Yale "in a corrupted form and doctored, to show a seeming of originality"? The shift that puzzled Princeton to death was read like a book by HAUGHTON. He has had his doughty men crumpling it to the ground all season. That is Mr. FISH's tale.

"TOM" SHEVLIN's version differs. The Yale coach says it is a mighty shift. It will bore a corkscrew curve right through the Crimson rush line. It twisted the Orange and Black in only one direction. But it acts like Brahma:

> If the red slayer think he slays,
> Or if the slain think he is slain,
> They know not well the subtle ways
> I keep, and pass, and turn again.

That shift will have observers, though not all who wish can see it. The speculators have run up the price of tickets to fifty dollars. Never mind. To-morrow night we shall all know its virtues.

THE REFORMERS OF TO-DAY.

Mr. ROOSEVELT is the last important example of the old type of exhorting reformers. The present type is sufficiently vocal, but it never deals in platitudes, it never rehearses the Ten Commandments, and much of its work is done in silence—excepting when pierced by the cry of an uncovered grafter or incompetent official. There is a certain grimness about its work.

We are favored with the abstract of the speech made in Buffalo on Wednesday by Director WILLIAM H. ALLEN of the New York Bureau of Municipal Research—such bureaus are now in many cities—which contains this laconic note:

> Some of the worst forms of graft have prospered under some of the country's greatest moralists, (Governor and President T. R. Insurance and customs.)

Doubtless the speaker amplified this statement in its delivery. It deserved amplification, for it contrasted the preachments of reform with the results of strict accounting. Nowadays, instead of windy exhortation, we have the expert searching of the records of public service; no longer the vague and vehement accusations that certificates are false, but the tracing of the false certificate directly to the false certifier; not an amateur hue and cry after a dozen thieves, but the overtaking of public moneys along well-grooved avenues of graft and waste, and the closing of these avenues; not the painful weighing of a multitude of names on a ballot, placed there by the "machine," but their substitution by a short ballot, which names a few officials who shall be responsible for the appointment of the rest, whom the party boss formerly appointed. Everywhere is evidence of a process of careful and accurate readjustment in the public business.

The Bureau of Municipal Research has accomplished much toward solid reform. It is hated by grafters and by inefficient office holders, and by some good men in office who have inherited a bad system of administration and fear that its exposure will injure their standing. Their safety lies in hearty co-operation with the necessary work of the Bureau and with the official investigating committees. Our sympathy is with the reformers of the Bureau. Their harvest of justly earned praise does not ripen so quickly as that formerly reaped by the preachers of morals whom they have supplanted. But the people are coming to appreciate the difference between these types.

NO TROUBLE WITH MEXICO.

There is not the slightest danger of any further trouble with Mexico, unless the American press and the Government are misled by the few so-called revolutionists, who find it safer to dwell along our border than in their native country, and conduct their feeble propaganda from El Paso, San Antonio, Laredo, Eagle Pass, and other towns in which they find a harbor of refuge. The Government in Mexico City is in perfect agreement with the Government at Washington. Stories of strong prejudice against American citizens in Mexico are greatly exaggerated. There are some Americans resident in Mexico, however, who by their bad manners, their mode of living, and their business methods, justify Mexican dislike.

The recent disturbances in Mexico City and Guadalajara—there was none of consequence elsewhere—were caused by the reports of the brutal lynching of a Mexican by a Texas mob. The riotous spirit was stimulated by the circulation of printed sheets containing translations of recent attacks on Mexico in certain American magazines. These documents were probably circulated by enemies of the Diaz Government desirous of stirring up ill-feeling between Mexico and the United States merely to further their own ends. Sensible American citizens should view these matters calmly. They know that the influential classes in Mexico do not hold the American Nation responsible for the burning of RODRIGUEZ or the circulation of scandalous and inaccurate statements about Mexico. The difficulties that have arisen can be adjusted by very simple means.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Providing Better Pawnshops.

Out in Seattle HORACE C. HENDRY, who is described as a millionaire banker and philanthropist, has shown that he is both by obtaining a city license to start a pawnshop. As a banker, it is a business, not a charity, that he purposes to conduct, but as a philanthropist he intends to save needy people from extortion by making small loans at lower rates of interest than do the other pawnbrokers.

This is not the first effort of the kind, of course, and our own Provident Loan, operated on the same lines, has been in successful operation for some years—without, it must be confessed, producing any noticeable diminution in the number of pawnshops where philanthropy plays no great part. But while not an inventor, Mr. HENDRY is to be commended, for, just as there is no disgrace in borrowing money on personal effects—collateral as good as any and safer than many so-called "securities"—so there ought to be none in meeting the small but urgent needs of people who have none other to offer.

That the pawnbroker in all lands is regarded with humorous disdain by those who do not patronize him and with something closely approaching hatred by those who have to do so is not wholly to be explained by the apparently instinctive antagonism with which professional money lenders are viewed. As a class pawnbrokers have somehow earned the reputation of ruthlessly exploiting the necessities of the poor and the desperate, and upon them all rests the often unjust suspicion of dealing with thieves. Not all pawnbrokers act as "fences," but some of them do, and it is unfortunate for the repute of the rest that they have as persistently opposed the passage of laws that would make more difficult the concealment of stolen property as they have of those putting a decent limit on the rates of interest they may charge.

Essentially a decent as well as a useful business, it is highly desirable that pawnbroking should be raised to a higher level, and nothing is more likely to accomplish this than the starting wherever needed—and that is all large cities and many small ones—of enterprises like Mr. HENDRY's and the New York Provident Loan. Kept free from the taint of charity, that "sorry substitute for justice denied," and equally free from the wish to extort from poverty the utmost possible penny, these better pawnshops must in time compel the betterment of all the others by attracting from them all except the dishonest customers out of whom, alone, none of them could live.

Might Have Shown More Tact.

Pleased as doubtless were the Panamans, Panamese, Panamites, or whatever may be the right name for the inhabitants of the Republic of Panama, to hear what President TAFT had to say to them about annexation, they must have exchanged just a few covert smiles as he "ran on" with such suave eloquence concerning the scrupulous regard for international rights and treaty agreements always manifested, and therefore always to be manifested, by the United States.

For many of the President's hearers, unless they, like so many politicians and some few statesmen, are the fortunate victims of a judiciously adjusted amnesia, must remember the foundation of their republic by acts which with equal humor and accuracy were once described by a distinguished supporter of them as "untainted by legality." So remembering, they must have realized that the speech which sounded so well in the capital city of Panama would have had a very different sound in Bogota.

It is, indeed, rather to be wondered at that President TAFT, recalling the nearness of territory still Colombian, did not content himself with telling his dear friends that so long as they remained good boys and made no trouble their little country would not be gobbled up. Really, in the circumstances, that would have been enough.

The United States is no less virtuous than other strong countries, and most of us like to believe that it is rather honester than some of them, but—oh, well, what's done is done, and it can't be helped now!

Jurors and Non-Voters.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that election is over might I bring up a matter connected therewith, and that is as to the number of citizens who refused to register and to vote?

As an election district captain I was interested in securing a large registration, and upon requesting some of our citizens to register was met with the answer from six persons that they would not register because they were informed that the Commissioner of Jurors selected the names of jurors from the election lists, and they did not want to lose the time and be inconvenienced by doing jury duty.

While such men as this I would not urge to vote, nevertheless, if their statement were true, it would lessen the number for jury service and increase the inconveniences and duties of those who serve their country and themselves in this small though important duty.

There is, I believe, some requirement on the part of the Commissioner of Jurors to go outside of election lists, but how far he can go with good result is problematical.

Would it not be a good move or action on the part of the leaders of the two parties to ask the leaders of their election districts to furnish them with a list of the names of those not voting and the reason for same? This list in turn might be furnished to the Commissioner of Jurors as a gratuitous act on their part and the Commissioner would have a select list of non-voters who would make acceptable jurors. The McAdoo Proposal.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Might not the McAdoo people find it profitable to substitute for their recent Church Street-Broadway proposal a direct route, West Broadway to Chambers Street, where Hudson Street starts, up the latter to Christopher Street, there uniting with the present road? It would prove a means of transit for the Pennsylvania passengers, tend to stimulate values in the Eighth and Ninth Wards—which have recently shown marked activity, and which sadly lack accessibility—thereby insuring the road a good development of local traffic. Were the city to sweeten the proposition by giving with it the crosstown connection, say, over Canal Street or Broome or Watts Street, with a short spur to the Desbrosses Street Ferry of the Brooklyn loop line, it could then take Brooklynites to the shopping centres and different railroad lines.

New York, Nov. 16, 1910. SUGGESTION.

Mr. Barry and the Suffragists.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your communicant, Alice Stone Blackwell, does not know, or seems to forget, that Mr. Richard Barry is a journalist of standing and would hardly misquote people. Incidentally, he was reporting facts for Pearson's Magazine, and in no way, I gather from his article, was he a controversialist. It would seem that, even if he is only a man, he has the right to draw his own conclusions. STANTON LEEDS.

EHRLICH'S REMEDY OFFERED FOR SALE

Dr. W. J. Robinson Warns Physicians and Public Against Itinerant Vendors.

UNETHICAL TO CHARGE NOW

Present Supply Given by Ehrlich With Understanding That It Should Be Used Free.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The announcement of every great medical discovery stirs into activity a lot of quacks and fakers, who, for the purposes of self-aggrandizement and financial profit, attempt in some way to associate their names with the discovery or the discoverer. Unfortunately those quacks and fakers are not always exclusively outside of the ranks of the medical profession. A small percentage may be found in our own fold. When the therapeutic possibilities of radium were first announced, the quacks at once began to advertise that they treated patients with radium, new remedies alleged to contain radium—radol, radoline, &c., were boosted, and even regular physicians announced results from the use of radium which did not correspond to the actual facts, and which were soon found to be greatly exaggerated. Ehrlich's remedy, which on account of its numerical designation has become prematurely popular, is not escaping this fate, and the writer considers it his duty to warn both the medical profession and the laity with regard to several points.

1. Information has reached us that some itinerant vendors are offering "606" to physicians, claiming to have received the drug directly from Ehrlich or indirectly from some hospital, &c. Physicians should refuse absolutely to purchase from such vendors, because while the stuff may be genuine, there are sufficient grounds to make us doubtful; paradioxydiamidoarsenobenzol is not a substance capable of ready qualitative identification, not to speak of quantitative determination, and to use an inferior substitute would certainly be a great calamity.

2. There are persistent rumors that some quacks claim to use on their patients "606," when as a matter of fact they have not a grain of the stuff. They inject some organic arsenical combination such as atoxyl or some soluble salt of mercury, and as the effect of either an arsenical or a mercurial compound on the symptoms is always beneficial, and often as striking as after the use of "606," the patient is satisfied and is fully convinced that the Ehrlich remedy has been used on him.

3. Rumors have reached us that some physicians who did obtain a small quantity of the remedy use it in minute doses on their private patients in order to make the amount last. Now, to use small, insufficient quantities of "606" is a greater crime even than to use an entirely different substitute. For Ehrlich has made perfectly clear that the injection of small quantities of "606" renders the spirochaetae "arsenfast," confers on them a certain immunity, so that they remain indifferent to subsequent injections of large quantities of the drug.

4. Information has reached us that some physicians who have obtained the drug for use in their hospital and dispensary practice are using it on their private patients, charging high fees for each injection. This, if true, is a dishonorable act, and distinctly unethical from a professional point of view. No fee must at the present time be exacted from anybody for the use of "606," because all the supply now in use has been given by Ehrlich free, with the distinct understanding that it was to be used free.

I communicated regarding this point with Dr. S. J. Meltzer of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, who is a close personal friend of Prof. Ehrlich, and is thoroughly familiar with the status of the remedy, and he replied that it was unethical for any physician to charge any fee for the use of "606," whether the drug was obtained directly from Ehrlich or from any intermediary source.

In conclusion it may not be superfluous to say that while "606" is the most wonderful medical discovery of the twentieth century, it is not an absolutely infallible specific; that relapses after its use are not so very uncommon; that unless used by competent and careful physicians its use may be accompanied by grave danger and even death, and, finally, that the greatest service that the physicians throughout the world can render to Ehrlich is to be careful and discriminating in the use of his remedy and strictly truthful in the reports of their results.

As a final word I may add that the old remedies, mercury and the iodides, have not yet lost their raison d'etre, and will probably retain it for some time to come.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The correspondent in your issue of the 14th overlooks the fact that it was the first National proclamation for Thanksgiving Day that I referred to. Your correspondent is correct as to President Washington's proclamation, and there were also others issued by Presidents Adams and Madison and also by President Lincoln. But the proclamation appointing a Thanksgiving Day was first issued by President Lincoln in 1863, doubtless inspired by the fact that civil war was prevailing. Since then, I think, the recommendation has been regularly annually issued.

It will thus be seen that my criticism of President Taft's proclamation was justified, and that the rule and custom were not as stated by him. Presidential proclamations should be absolutely accurate and relied upon by the people as such. Gov. Draper's complaint, I think, too, entirely proper, although of a different character. E. T. W.

A Piece of Cheese.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The writer has found another cause of the high cost of living that no one has touched on, and this is the wicked waste of wrapping paper. I bought a piece of cheese that was about 2x4 inches. This was wrapped in a piece of waxed paper about 9x12 inches, and again wrapped in a piece of very heavy paper at least 16x20 inches, and this occurred probably in hundreds of cases in this one store, and it is repeated in every similar establishment.

Then I went to Ying Kee's after a shirt and four collars. Ying took a piece of thin paper, very sleazy, indeed, but strong enough. He used just enough and did not fold over the edges. Then he used a piece of very thin cord—but strong enough—and passed it around the package once each way, tying a hard knot. He never, never passes it around twice. The cheese had enough string to tie the shirt easily.

Since then I have been thinking. The moral is obvious. R. A. DIX.

CHINESE PORCELAINS ON VIEW

Interesting Ware of Several Periods in the Gorer Exhibition.

The Gorer exhibition of Chinese porcelains at the Waldorf-Astoria is an assemblage of pieces in which tone and color offer a genuine feast to the amateur of arts. This is hardly the time of day to expatiate on the beauty of the Chinese ware of the great periods, but one does not often have an opportunity to see so many phases of its development side by side. The major part of the collection belongs to the Kang-Hi period, seventeenth century, but there are two or three cases of tenth century pieces, as rugged and solemn as the later works are joyous and elaborately finished. A camel strutting on stiff tall legs, a dog laughing harshly with the peculiar canine grin that has descended through all known centuries in all parts of the world where dogs have been, a little house with amorphous figures appearing in the doorways and window openings, a horse amazing in the spirited poise of its head—these and other objects, coarsely modeled and strikingly expressive, show from what harsh craftsmanship and faithful observation of nature have sprung the dainty flowers of culture and aesthetic perception which occupy the larger number of the vitrines.

There is also an interesting fifteenth century piece, a god of war, mild faced, stout and authoritative, with wonderful work on his robes. A number of examples of Ming figure work are notable for their elegance and soft gayety of color, and a very interesting quadrangular vase dates from the sixteenth century, decorated with the flowers of the different seasons on alternating green and yellow fields, the neck and foot of the vase being treated in reverse style, bringing the green in contrast with the yellow on the body, and vice versa.

In the central vitrine, together with this vase are a remarkable specimen of black hawthorn of the seventeenth century, and a corpulent short-necked vase enamelled in greens as rich and brilliant as jewels could yield on a superb amethyst ground, aesthetically the prize of the whole collection.

On the further side of the room is a beaker-shaped vase decorated with scenes illustrating the rice industry; the colors are green and aubergine on white, and a soft strong blue trickles like a stream down among the other colors, appearing and disappearing as the stream might winding down a green hillside.

There are many other pieces, some notable chiefly for their rarity, as in the case of the little marriage cup on which every detail tells the story of the craftsman's patient skill lavished on an object which, in accordance with custom, usually is broken immediately after the ceremony, the prototype of the old English custom of breaking the glass in which the King's health was drunk. Others are of specially fine quality in their own kind—such as the blue hawthorn vase distinguished for collectors by the enameled knob on its cover. A few are merely curiosities, such as the figure of a negro, ugly and commonplace after the fashion of Chinese art when it steps outside of its traditional province and attempts subjects alien to the national taste.

The exhibition is practically a public one, admission by visiting card excluding only the casual passer-by.

ROOSEVELT'S DEFEAT.

Progressive Republican Attributes It to His Treatment of the President.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The chief cause of Col. Roosevelt's defeat in the late election was not, I think, his "New Nationalism." What the anti-Roosevelt voters or stay-at-homes objected to and deeply resented was what they could not help but regard as his unhandsome, his ungenerous, and selfishly ambitious treatment of President Taft.

To make this clear, suppose, by way of contrast, that Col. Roosevelt had at the very beginning said and wrote something like this: The question for us now to decide is this—whether or not we will join hands in upholding President Taft's splendid Administration and do all we can to help him carry to completion the progressive policies he has so courageously, faithfully, and successfully pursued. Suppose he had made this the main feature of his campaign speaking, he would then have saved, I believe, both his party and himself. But no. He saw that there was a crack of insurgency in the Republican Party, and, instead of trying to bring the sides nearer together, he inserts in the crack the thin edge of the "1912" nomination, drives it in with the beetle blows of his overvehement declamation, and by so doing alienates very many friends of himself, and, for the time being at least, of the party.

A Title Must Have a Capital.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is not for the letter writing fraternity to object to what editors may do to the precious products of their brains, yet at times when the editor does make a little slip it is but decency to point it out for him.

The word "principal," meaning the head-master of a school, is printed with a small letter in all the documents I have ever seen quoted from, and is so printed on Pages 395, 396, and 397 of the Ninth Report, the very words being "the exalted office of principal."

Opinions as to the "exalted" quality differ, (92 out of 207 applicants were found worthy in the last examination, and the large majority of them speak English correctly,) but for a decade past the spelling has been as I point out. Perhaps their elasticity (see Page 75, Eleventh Report,) entitles them to be printed with no more than small letters. R. P. G.

THE OAK.

A hillside in the Spring,
And crowning it, gaunt, leafless, stark,
There stands an aged oak.
Storms of a hundred years have spent their furies
On its trunk. Lightnings have gashed and seared it.
Yet at the tip-end of a drooping limb,
Which, half rent, almost touches ground,
There gleams the tender green of buds.

In breathless glee a youth pursues a maid
And clasps her waist in triumph at the oak.
Their laughter peals the song of youth and health.
"Life, life!" he cries, "Look, sweetheart, all is life!
Even this old oak, here, flaunts its life—
Green promises of life!
Your lips, sweetheart! We'll pledge a kiss to Life!"
And off they speed.

Bowed with the burden of a lifetime's cares
An old man slowly nears.
"So, so, old sufferer," he greets the oak.
"So, like all else and me, you're going soon?
Well, well, old friend, we have not long to wait!"
And, shaking his gray head, goes on.

Goaded by failure, tortured by remorse and shame,
Driven from men, a man comes running up.
"What, neighbor, what! Blasted, yet clinging still to life!
Give up! Give up, old coward!
Come, comrade, I will lead the way!" he cries,
And hangs himself upon the bough.

COMMUTERS DECLARE THEY PAY THEIR WAY

Lawyer Ransom Tells Commissioner Harlan That the Pennsylvania Does Make a Profit.

LACKAWANNA AND ERIE UP

Decline to Discuss Lawyer's Figures That Each Commuter Yields an 8-Cent Profit, Not a 7-Cent Loss.

Commuters from New Jersey who learned on Wednesday that they were a menace to the Pennsylvania Railroad and the recipients of seven cents in charity each time they passed through a terminal and stepped aboard a train, returned to the Inter-State Commerce Commission hearing in the Myrtle room of the Waldorf yesterday to hear how hauling them affected the finances of the Pennsylvania's near neighbors, the Erie and Lackawanna.

Both roads, they were assured solemnly by general officers and counsel, hauled them at a loss and contributed charity to them in totals approaching $100,000 a year. The business was one they would gladly be rid of if they only could, the commuters heard the railroad men aver, and learned in addition that it was a heavy burden the roads were carrying solely out of a sense of public duty.

When George A. Cullen, General Passenger Agent of the Lackawanna road, produced figures to prove that the commuters cost the railroad $859,000 last year in net losses he was interrupted by Frank Lyon, counsel for the Commission, who suggested that the Lackawanna seemed to be bearing up pretty well under "the staggering losses," since it piled up last year alone, over all operating expenses, enough money to have paid a dividend of nearly 50 per cent. on the entire investment. As a corollary Lawyer Lyon tried to coax the Lackawanna official into an admission that if the commuters failed to pay enough some other kind of traffic must be taxed too much, and that any rise in the rate to commuters in fairness would have to be met by a lowering of tariffs somewhere else.

"Where would you suggest was a fair point to lower your rates?" the lawyer asked.

"But I have not admitted that any rates are too high," Mr. Cullen responded hastily. "I only have said that the commuters should pay their share of the general burden."

Of his statement that the Lackawanna Railroad took in half the cost of its plant each year in net profits, Mr. Lyon told to a TIMES reporter at the conclusion of the hearing:

"Since we started to keep data about railroads we have kept the account in two columns, one dealing with the income compared to cost of the road, and the other compared to its capitalization. The exact rate of the Lackawanna's earnings was 47 per cent. on the cost of the plant."

The assertion of the railroads that they would like to get rid of the commuters was combatted at some length by Lawyer William M. Ransom of the New Brunswick Board of Trade.

"If we are such a burden to you," he asked Mr. Cullen, "why do you have lower rates for commuters who live in towns which the Erie reaches than for those where the Erie is not a competitor, although both towns are equi-distant from your Hoboken terminal?"

"Well," explained Mr. Cullen, "the Erie requires less mileage to reach such towns as Montclair, for instance, than we do, and one of the oldest rules of railroading is that the mileage to a given point must be figured on that required by the shortest road to reach it."

"But why, if the business is a loss and a burden, do you strive for it, and meet the Erie's cheaper rate by a cut of your own?" Mr. Ransom asked.

"We follow the usual railroad rule in such cases," was the only answer that the lawyer could coax forth.

Mr. Ransom employed his knowledge of arithmetic to keep the Commissioner, the lawyers, and the witnesses busy figuring out the cost of commuter service while he totaled it up from the statistics of the Pennsylvania Road. Instead of finding a loss of 7 cents per commuter, as did Lawyer George S. Patterson for the railroad, Mr. Ransom discovered that the road made 8 cents profit on each commuter.

"And I find this on the railroad's own figures," he insisted.

In reaching this conclusion instead of dealing out charity Mr. Ransom said he took the railroad's own statement that it received $33.65 in revenue from each train of commuters and ran 197 trains a day at a cost of $1.29 a train mile for an average daily run of nineteen miles. This gave him a total of $24.51 in costs to be divided between 270 passengers, the declared average number riding on each train. This 9.07 cents charge against each commuter added to the 9.14 cents alleged to be the cost of passing him through the terminal at Jersey City gave Mr. Ransom a total of 18.24 cents to be subtracted from 26.6 cents, the average price for a commuter's fare as shown by the ticket sales and terminal reports.

Although urged repeatedly to do so, Lawyer Patterson would not attack the figures on behalf of the railroad, nor allow his witnesses to do so. He explained that that the auditing department would take them up and would submit a report on them which he would bring to the commission's attention.

W. H. R. Wallace, General Passenger Agent of the Erie, the New York, Susquehanna & Western, and the New York & New Jersey Railroads, declared for the Erie Railroad that he wished all of its commuters would move back into New York.

"If you put the commuting business on a paying basis would you destroy it altogether?" he was asked.

"Yes, and it would benefit the Erie," was his reply.

Lawyers for the commuters said they would disprove the statements of the railroads that they paid 5 cents for each commuter sent through the McAdoo tubes by proving that while east-bound traffic was charged for at 5 cents a head no account was kept of commuters using the tubes while west bound.

The hearing will be continued to-day.

IRRIGATION OF ARID LANDS.

Prof. Burr Tells of the Development of Wyoming.

Prof. William H. Burr, head of the Civil Engineering Department of Columbia University, member of the Panama Canal Commission, and consulting engineer for the new Catskill water works, delivered an illustrated lecture in Havemeyer Hall yesterday on "The Irrigation of Arid Lands in Wyoming." He told his audience that irrigation is the greatest and most extensive undertaking of our present engineering work.

"The rainfall in Wyoming," said Prof. Burr, "ranges from eight to fifteen inches annually. Here in New York we get about forty-four inches annually. It is clear then that artificial means must be resorted to if the land is to be made fertile."

As showing the immensity of this undeveloped territory, Prof. Burr said that Wyoming alone covers an area as great as that of the combined New England States, New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland. The State is 350 miles long and 210 miles wide.

Yet, declared the lecturer, only 10 per cent. of it is irrigated. Wyoming is preeminently an arid State, notwithstanding that it is well netted with rivers. Prof. Burr said that Wyoming could boast of the highest dam in the world, 320 feet high, or higher than our Flatiron Building.

Prof. Burr described Wyoming as the "peak of the continent," for from its mountain ranges three rivers drain in three directions; the Missouri flows to the east, the Columbia directly west to the Pacific, and the Big Horn southwest to the Gulf of California. Wyoming now has two irrigating canals, one of which conveys 33,000 cubic feet of water at a velocity of three feet a second.

PUCCINI HERE; HIS OPERA VIEWS

SEES REVERSION TO GLUCK

Tells How He Has Set to Music Comedy and Dramatic Episodes of "The Girl of the Golden West."

Giacomo Puccini, the composer of "Madama Butterfly," "Tosca," "La Boheme," and "The Girl of the Golden West" arrived here yesterday on the George Washington with his young son, Antonio. It is the second visit of the Italian composer to New York, his first being for the purpose of inspecting the first performance at the Metropolitan Opera House of "Madama Butterfly." This time he comes to superintend the final rehearsals and to see the first production on any stage of "The Girl of the Golden West."

While he is here he will naturally hear the performances of his other operas that are given at the Metropolitan. He will attend the matinée of "Madama Butterfly" to-morrow and the performance of "La Boheme" Monday evening.

Yesterday afternoon Puccini visited the Metropolitan, and after he had had a long talk with Mr. Gatti-Casazza he called in the newspaper reporters, many of whom are old friends of his.

He first astonished everybody by saying that he was looking for a comedy to set to music.

"No more heart throbs," he said. "I want a good lusty comedy. I am going to every comedy I hear about in every city I visit in an attempt to discover a good libretto for a comedy opera."

"Have you dropped 'Le Femme et le Pantin' and 'Marie Antoinette'?" he was asked.

To Work on a Comedy.

"Utterly," he answered. "Those were projects which I had in mind before I took up 'The Girl of the Golden West.' But now I have it in mind to work on a comedy I shall drop them. You see I believe that modern music drama is going to be simpler and simpler. There will not be a reversion to Wagner. Rather there will be a reversion to Gluck, whose works I tremendously admire. I like of all his operas 'Armide' the best, and after that 'Orfeo.'"

"How about Richard Strauss?"

"No personalities, please!" begged the Maestro.

Then he was asked to talk about "The Girl of the Golden West."

"The opera opens," he said, "with a few emphatic phrases, rather violent and robust. Among them one hears some of the most striking motives of the opera. Then in silence the curtain rises, revealing Minnie's tavern, the Polka barroom. The first half of this act is full of characteristic scenes, which give the color of the environment and introduce the persons—Mexican miners, Indians, the Sheriff, and others. Two cowboys dance, singing a queer song:

"'Dooda Dooda, Day—'

"In a corner a man sits silent and absorbed. All of a sudden from without comes a wailing song, accompanied by the tinkling sound of a banjo. It is a sad, disconsolate song, evoking home. The voice of the minstrel is at first heard alone; then the miners get hold of the air and the orchestra joins with a pizzicato. The singer appears on the scene and stops, but all ask him to continue. So he begins again all alone. When finally he goes away the miners sing it again. But the feeling of homesickness is swallowed up in the ensuing gayety until Minnie enters.

"The Sheriff offends Minnie and she repulses him, but Johnson, who is sitting in a corner, she recognizes as a man she has met once on the trail. After a short duet they waltz together, and this waltz furnishes one of the motives of the opera.

"Now Castro, one of Johnson's band of highway robbers, is dragged into the tavern. He does not betray Johnson, however, but sends the Sheriff on a false scent. Minnie asks Johnson to her cabin in the mountains as the act ends.

"The second act, in Minnie's cabin, opens with a duet of Indian servants, a short page of staccato music with a rhythm which has a strain of the grotesque. Minnie returns and prepares for Johnson's arrival. He comes, and between the two young people begins a scene extremely varied in movement and expression, which gradually passes into the love duet which is the centre of the opera. It is an episode to which I have become singularly attached, because it seems to me different from the usual love duet. While Minnie sings, the notes of the first act waltz slip in.

Rest of Act Dramatic.

"The rest of the act is dramatic. Outside a blizzard is raging and Minnie asks Johnson to stay. She will sleep on a bear skin. The sheriff enters to look for Johnson, but Johnson is hidden in the alcove. However, Minnie learns who he really is and when the sheriff has gone she puts him out. He is seen by two deputies and wounded. Bleeding he comes back and falls over the threshold of the door. She runs to him, raises him and conceals him. The man she kissed cannot die. The sheriff also returns and vainly seeks for the fugitive, whom he finally discovers by a drop of blood which falls on his hand.

"Minnie, to save her lover, proposes to the sheriff a game of cards. 'If you win I am yours; if I win you will leave me this man.' The game of poker begins and Minnie wins by means of some concealed cards. The act ends with the girl alone with her wounded lover.

"Here we have the finale of an act of opera based upon a game of poker. It was quite embarassing to set to music in such a dramatic scene a game of cards which offers so little suggestive of melody. It was necessary to find something new. And so I have not written music descriptive of a game of cards—it is a game of lives and I hope—.

"The third act is the shortest. The first one lasts an hour and a few minutes; the second an hour; the third thirty-five minutes. Johnson is under arrest and is to be hung in a few minutes. At this moment Minnie arives on horseback with a pistol in her teeth. She pleads with the miners to spare the man she loves and they finally bid her farewell and leave her with him"

"The Girl of the Golden West" is dedicated to Queen Alexandra. The composer keeps an old promise in doing this. After the opera has been sung in New York by Mme. Destinn and Messrs. Caruso and Amato it will be given in Chicago with Miss Garden and Messrs. Dalmorès and Sammarco: and in Boston with Mme. Carmen Melis and Messrs. Constantino and Bakianoff. The composer will only see the New York production as he is going back to Italy very soon afterwards. In May the opera is to be produced at Covent Garden, and in June at the Costanzi in Rome with the Metropolitan Opera House cast. In August it will be sung in Brescia.

"And the character of the music?"

"It has no special character," answered Puccini, "I have tried to write music, and music must have only one character, spontaneity and sincerety. This time I have worked hard over the form. The instrumentation differs from that of my other operas."

"Something new?"

"New or better, it is not for me to say. It is logical after all, to try always to be better. In my next opera—."

SALE OF RARE FURNITURE.

Thomas B. Clarke English Collection Contains 500 Pieces.

Lovers of old English furniture will be pleased to learn that the fine collection brought together by Thomas B. Clarke in the course of a couple of decades of search is to be sold at the American Art Galleries for the Tiffany Studios on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday afternoons, Dec. 1, 2, and 3. It will be on exhibition at the galleries from Friday, Nov. 25, up to and inclusive of the morning before the sale. There are some 500 pieces and each has been passed upon by Luke Vincent Lockwood, the collector, and Patrick Stevens, the expert, and is guaranteed as an original. It is said that this will be the largest and most important sale of the kind ever held in this country or in England.

Mr. Lockwood and Louis C. Tiffany became interested in the study of the collection with Mr. Clarke in 1906, and a year later, with the idea of exhibiting it as an educational factor, the Tiffany Studios came into possession of it, and Mr. Lockwood, from his appreciation of its worth, prepared the catalogue without compensation. Since that time a few pieces have been sold to the Metropolitan Art Museum and others in this country and abroad, and now the collection as a whole is to be put into the public market.

In the introduction to the catalogue Mr. Lockwood speaks of the English as being imitators in their cabinetwork, rather than originators, a fact not to be deprecated, as they improved the styles they developed. He classifies the furniture under three heads—Flemish, Dutch, and French—though in the French school there is a division of Chippendale largely representing the Louis XV., and Shearer, Hepplewhite and Sheraton, the Louis XVI. The furniture is placed under these heads. There is a special illustrated catalogue with a reproduction of each piece, a limited edition costing $1. With the verifications of Mr. Lockwood and Mr. Stevens, it becomes a valuable book of reference, the date of the production of the different pieces being given.

A feature of the collection is the large number of chairs, a wonderful variety in the Chippendale style, with others more ornate of the Flemish. There is an oak wainscot chair and the simple Winsor side and arm chairs. There are other chairs that mark a transition period, a few charming Hepplewhites and Sheratons, and again more chairs of the Dutch style, with the claw and ball or simple and attractive Dutch feet. In the Dutch style is the double chair and a settee with three chair backs. There are several beautiful settees with two ends and no back.

There is a wide variety of tables, none more attractive than those in Dutch style, though there are tilt tables, including several with the piecrust edge. A mahogany pillar and claw foot table has an odd centre frame with six straight legs and two leaves to put in as an extension. A dumbwaiter table has three tops, one above the other like a muffin stand, but high with a central column. There are desks of various kinds, sideboards, chests of drawers, bookcases, and old clocks, with some elaborate Chippendale mirrors. There are cellarets, which are quaint pieces of furniture; a heavy oak cradle and a number of knife boxes, one pair in urn shape, with a standard. There is one bedstead, a Chippendale of delicate design.

ELLEN TERRY LECTURES.

Reads Many of the Thirty Letters in Shakespeare's Plays.

Ellen Terry delivered the third and last of her series of Shakespearean discourses at the Hudson Theatre yesterday afternoon before a crowded house. Her subject this time was "The Letters of Shakespeare," which, she explained, meant the letters that appear in his plays, not any of his personal communications, of which none are known to exist.

The fact that many of Shakespeare's plays contain letters, she said, is not generally known to even some of the poet's most sincere lovers. She has counted thirty in all the plays, but, she said, three of her friends with a little more than average intelligence could tell of only two. She quoted from Hamlet's letter to Ophelia, from the love epistles of Proteus, in "Two Gentlemen of Verona"; Antonio's letter to Bassanio, Maria's forged letter to Malvolio, and Malvolio's written plea to Olivia. Other letters that came to her attention were Falstaff's communication to Mistress Page and his letter to Prince Hal; the servant's letter to the Lord Chamberlain in "Henry VIII," Armado's long-winded epistle in "Love's Labor Lost," Phoebe's love letters in "As You Like It," Rinaldo and Bertram's writings in "All's Well That Ends Well," the letters from Leonatus to Imogen, Macbeth's to his wife, the warning sent to Caesar, Hamlet's letters to Horatio and to the King, the letters in "Antony and Cleopatra," the note sent Hotspur in "Henry IV.," Sir Andrew Aguecheek's challenge to Viola in "Twelfth Night," and the last communication from Timon of Athens.

Several of these letters Miss Terry read as the characters would have read them, and she was especially delightful in her impersonation of Mistress Page receiving Falstaff's communication. She spoke briefly of the letters in the plays of the mid-Victorian period, and of the tendency of modern playwrights to avoid such expedients for explaining situations.

When she had finished her lecture there was much applause and she was called out again and again to bow her farewell. Before the audience had left the theatre she stopped them to correct an error she made in the earlier part of the talk, when she said Shakespeare was only 32 when he died.

HENRY ARTHUR JONES HERE.

Playwright to Stage New Play, and May Lecture on the Drama.

Henry Arthur Jones, the English playwright, arrived in New York yesterday on the George Washington, and will assist in the selection of a cast for his new play that is to be produced here by the Authors' Producing Company. Mr. Jones was in New York last in 1908, when "The Evangelist" was produced, and a year before, when his drama, "The Hypocrites," had its first hearing. This visit he hopes to be able to extend to six months, unless he is called back to London in connection with another new play of his that is to be put on there.

During his stay in America he expects to give a few lectures on the drama, probably at Harvard and at Columbia University, although he has made no definite plans. His first work will be the staging of his new play. No title has been selected as yet, but he says this drama is something like "Mrs. Dane's Defense," but with greater lightness and humor of dialogue. He has taken apartments at the Marie Antoinette Hotel.

Accused of Forging Theatre Passes.

On complaint of Philip Klein, of the Hotel Bonta, Ninety-fourth Street and Broadway, Frank Talaferro, who says he is a manager, and gave his address as Mills Hotel No. 3, was arrested on a charge of forgery by Central Office detectives at Thirty-ninth Street and Broadway early last night. Klein accuses him of forging the name of John Cort, of 1,402 Broadway, to six passes representing twelve seats for "The Gamblers," now playing at the Maxine Elliott Theatre. The seats were valued at $24.

STARVING FAMILY SAVED.

Kindly Neighbors Come to the Rescue of Mrs. Anderson and Five Children.

Neighbors watched Mrs. Minnie Anderson, carrying her three-months'-old baby, trudge away several mornings from the three-room flat in the rear of 493 East 156th Street, to return late at night looking more disheartened each day, and one of them learned from the four youngsters, ranging from 3 to 8 years, whom Mrs. Anderson had to leave at home, that their father had gone away, and that for days they had had nothing but bits of cast-away bread to eat. Their mother had sought work in vain. A neighbor wrote to the Children's Society and an investigator was sent to the Anderson home yesterday.

He found that the husband, August Anderson, an ironworker, had not deserted his family, but two weeks ago he was found with another man in the freight yards of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, with a truck loaded with freight taken from a broken box car, and the next day Anderson was held for trial on a charge of grand larceny.

The wife did not learn of his arrest until three days afterward, after she had looked for him in every hospital in the city. She said he had never been in trouble before, and she could not believe he had played more than an unwitting part in any robbery that may have occurred. She told the agents of the Children's Society she did not want charity, but only a chance to work for her children. Wherever she asked for work, she said, people would not take her in with the baby, and she could not leave the little one at home.

Last night the policeman on the beat shoved a quarter under the door of the Anderson home and, knocking, ran away. The letter-carrier, making his last call of the day, slipped a sealed envelope of his own contriving under the door and ran away too. A little later, the janitor brought up a hearty, warm supper, and the near-by coal dealer threw a bag of coal clamorously into the hall before the Anderson door and in the attendant uproar escaped.

Mrs. Anderson will look for work again to-day.

Cotton Ablaze on the Hamilton.

Fire which started in the mid hatchway on the port side of the steamship Hamilton, of the Old Dominion Line, yesterday, partly destroyed 200 bales of cotton and other inflammable goods. Stevedores discovered the flames when they opened the hatchway and an alarm of fire was sent in, bringing out the fireboats New Yorker and Thomas Willett. The burning bales were carried into West Street.

The Hamilton, with forty passengers aboard, arrived here from Norfolk yesterday afternoon.

Joel Francis Freeman.

Joel Francis Freeman, ex-Secretary of the Standard Oil Company, died on Wednesday night at his home in East Orange, N. J., in his seventy-fifth year. He was born in Cleveland, where he was a next-door neighbor of John D. Rockefeller. Through him Mr. Freeman became interested in the Standard Oil Company in its early days, from which he retired many years ago. FOOTBALL TRAINS FOR NEW HAVEN Connecticut Town Preparing for Yale-Harvard Throng—37 Specials.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 17.—Preparations for receiving and caring for the crowd which will come to Saturday's Yale-Harvard football game are now well under way, and they interest New Haven people more than ever before. So few people outside college circles here have tickets to the game that the only excitement they will experience will come from watching the crowd arrive and depart. The New Haven Road is providing trackage for eighteen special trains from New York alone, while nineteen will come from the east. Among the football parties will be those of J. Pierpont Morgan, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, George W. Perkins, Judge E. H. Gary, Harry Payne Whitney, Mrs. E. H. Harriman, and Harry J. Black.

As probably 20,000 people will arrive by train between 11 A. M. and 1 P. M., accommodations will have to be provided for handling them quickly at the station. Trolley cars composing a belt of 150 will run direct to Yale Field, but even these will hardly carry half the people. The spectacular side of the crowd will be in its grand march through the city's streets and out to the field, a long line of bright and animated color.

Everard Thompson of the Yale ticket management was in Cambridge yesterday to confer with the Harvard management over the issuance of aisle tickets, owing to the tremendous demand and the prevailing high prices. Offers of $50 are becoming common, but so far as can be learned there has been no speculation in tickets here. The arrest of a man who had secured a number of theatre tickets and was offering them to students at an advance upon the original price is taken as a warning. A city ordinance is invoked in this case, and the co-operation shown by the city authorities, the theatre managements, and college men in prosecuting the man arrested is taken to mean that strict watch will be set against speculation in football tickets.

HARVARD ON YALE FIELD.

Crimson Squad at Farmington and Elis at Highland Golf Club.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 17.—Deserted by the Yale and Harvard football elevens, this city to-night has only the general howl over the ticket drought, the lack of hotel accommodations, and the wagers on the game of next Saturday to discuss as its gridiron topics.

The Yale and Harvard squads were both on Yale Field this afternoon for signal drill and each left town soon afterward. Harvard returned to its temporary quarters at Elm Tree Inn in Farmington, and Yale went to the clubhouse of the Highland Golf Club of Meriden. Capt. Daly and Capt. Withington of the rival teams this morning straightened out their engagements for work on the gridiron, on which the game on Saturday will be fought. Harvard carried out its end of the engagement by leaving Farmington at 10:30 o'clock, arriving here at 11:30, and taking a special trolley car to the Yale dining hall, where an early luncheon was served. The team went to Yale Field at 12:30 and dressed at the Yale trackhouse, which has been placed entirely at their disposal until Saturday. Their baggage arrived there last night. Harvard was on the Yale Field gridiron at 1:15 o'clock and worked there just an hour. The limit of their stay had been set by the Yale management at 2:30, and they had all left the field when the Yale special trolley cars, bearing the Eli football squad, hove into sight at that time. The Harvard players had nearly an hour in town after they dressed at the trackhouse, and many of them made calls on Yale friends, whom they had known at preparatory schools. They returned to Farmington on the special car attached to the 4 o'clock train, which had brought them here. Practically the full squad was brought here, the team including thirty-five men. Head Coach Haughton and Capt. Withington declined to say a word for publication.

The team looked in splendid physical condition, and is clearly one of the strongest combinations in physique Harvard has sent here. The Harvard officials made arrangements before they left here for the team to come here Saturday from Farmington exactly as it came to-day, dining before the game at the Yale Commons and dressing for the game in the track clubhouse. After the game they will go to the Hotel Tontine for their breaking training banquet, after which the eleven will disband.

Arrangements for the Yale team to go to Meriden to the clubhouse of the Highland Golf Club were perfected this morning. It was impossible, however, to take more than sixteen players, owing to the limited accommodations there. Capt. Daly ordered the following squad there, which includes the first string men and first five substitutes, the total being the men who will get into Saturday's game before it closes: Left end, Kilpatrick; left tackle, Scully; left guard, Fuller; centre, Morris; right guard, McDevitt; right tackle, Paul; right end, Brooks; quarter back, Howe; left half back, Field; right half back, Capt. Daly; full back, Kistler. Substitutes—End, Vaughan; tackle, Savage; guard, Francis; quarter back, Merritt; full back, Reilly.

Before the Yale eleven left the field today for the last time previous to its game on Saturday it received a rousing ovation from the undergraduates, who marched 1,500 strong to the field, headed by a brass band and singing section. The eleven had gone on the gridiron ten minutes after Harvard left it and had worked an hour in secret when the student outpouring reached the field. After the gates had been opened, the drill reverted to punting practice, and the songs which have been learned for the Harvard game were sung and the entire eleven was cheered.

It was the last public appearance of the season for the scrubs and they had their annual snake dance around a fire built on the gridiron, into which was thrown their old uniforms and bandages. After singing the Omega Lambda Chi song, which is annually the swan song of the scrubs, they cheered Capt. Daly and Coach Coy and ran through a mock signal drill, in which Pop Corey played centre. Fatty Young ended the sport by kicking a field goal.

The scrubs broke training to-night with a banquet, which lasted until morning. About fifteen of the number are still retained in training for the game Saturday. These second string men will dine at the regular training table and remain in playing condition until Saturday.

After luncheon this evening the sixteen 'Varsity players named were taken by automobile to Meriden. Capt. Daly said that they planned to remain there until Saturday if a suitable field can be found there for practice to-morrow. It is not certain that one can be obtained for signal rehearsal, but it is believed that this matter can be adjusted without the return of the eleven to this city. Coaches Tom Shevlin, Ted Coy, and Harry Holt accompanied the eleven. Shevlin is practically in charge of the team.

The Highland clubhouse is situated in the mountains between Meriden and Middletown and is ideally located for the resort of an athletic team for two days before a big battle. More coaches will go there to-morrow. The squad here to-day included Camp, Shevlin, Sanford, Rorahback, Thorne, Hinkey, Rodgers, Coy, Holt, and Owlsey. Tom Shevlin, who has controlled the development of the team for two weeks, says to-night that the team has improved gradually and is 25 per cent. stronger than when it faced Princeton last Saturday.

"It will give Harvard a battle royal," said Shevlin. "But I do not care to make a prediction on the score."

Betting on the game has been extremely light here. Despite rumors of Harvard's confidence the Crimson backers offered odds of only 10 to 7, at the extreme. Many of them ask even terms. Yale is holding out for 5 to 4 odds.

The Yale eleven received a setback to-night when it became known that Dick Baker, the fastest half back on the squad, is lame and is not likely to play on Saturday. His work Saturday at Princeton was a revelation of dash and clever defensive play and he was sure to get into the game for the second half here Saturday. He wrenched his ankle in Wednesday's practice.

A ticket speculator who was arrested yesterday was fined $174 by Judge Tyner of the City Court to-day. A drastic city ordinance against speculating is being rigorously enforced.

Cornell Scrubs Beat 'Varsity.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 17.—"Rotten work" is the way the coaches characterized the playing of the Cornell 'Varsity to-day when the scrubs for the first time this season trimmed them up. The second team scored three touchdowns, though they had an advantage by receiving the ball on the 25-yard line each time.

Two of the touchdowns were on Seagrave, the 'Varsity right end, who was severely "called down" by the coaches. Collins scored both, going around on a forward pass and again one on a fake play, and Seagrave was responsible both times. The third score was made by Butts on a delayed pass.

Butler tried a field goal from the 35-yard line for the 'Varsity, but failed to make good. Later Whyte scored the only touchdown for the regulars, taking the ball 85 yards.

The playing of the line did not suit the coaches to-day. Tommy Fennell, '97, a former tackle and Captain and one of the best-known football alumni of Cornell, arrived this afternoon and will spend five days trying to get the big forwards in shape for the Pennsylvania game.

McReavy to Get a Tryout.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 17.—McReavy, the newcomer at the Naval Academy, who has been doing such excellent work in the backfield for the past ten days, will get a tryout in the game on Saturday against the University of New York. He will take either Dalton's place at left half back or Rode's position at full back, and upon the work he does against th eNew Yorkers will depend whether or not he will start in the Army and Navy game. Several new men will start the game, among them Anderson at centre and Wakeman at right guard, and all of the regulars will probably be taken out as soon as they can be spared in order to take no chances of being hurt before the final game.

There was over a half hour of the hardest kind of work against the scrubs this afternoon, and the team emerged from the conflict without an injured player and in splendid shape for a hard game. To-morrow there will be signal practice only. The Navy team hopes to prevent the New Yorkers from scoring, and thus go against West Point with a clean record for the season.

Mike Thompson has asked to be allowed to change frm umpire of the Army-Navy game to some other position, and a change will be arranged with either Sharpe, who was to referee, or Fultz, who is to act as field judge.

N. Y. U. Goes South to Play Navy.

Final football practice of the season was held at Ohio Field yesterday afternoon, in preparation for the Navy game, which will be played at Annapolis to-morrow. The N. Y. U. squad, accompanied by two score of rooters, leaves this afternoon for the South. They realize that the middies have as strong a team as they have met this season, and have trained unusually hard, in order that they might be as fit as possible for the arduous task before them. All the men are in good condition, and they have even chances for a victory if they can show the same grit and determination that has characterized their work of late.

Light practice was held at University Heights yesterday afternoon. The forward pass was worked with more precision than at any recent session. The onside kick was used successfully also. No tackling was permitted, although the men were thoroughly drilled in interference. The new shift, with its several variations, seems to be the best thing which the New York scouts have picked up this season. Several very clever plays are worked from this formation, and look to be good ground gainers. Fumbling of punts has been stamped out pretty successfully this week. The men have been drilled every day in handling kicks, and have improved considerably. Gale spent half an hour yesterday practicing goal kicking from the thirty-yard line. Both his placement and drop kicks were well executed.

Madden Is Amherst's Captain.

Special to The New York Times.

AMHERST, Mass., Nov. 17.—John Harrison Madden of Binghamton, N. Y., was elected Captain of the Amherst College football team to-night. He plays left end, and has brought notice to himself on account of his drop kicking. He is a member of the junior class.

De Witt Clinton to Meet Commerce.

One of the important interscholastic football games of the year will be played at the Polo Grounds on Thanksgiving Day, when De Witt Clinton High School and the High School of Commerce will meet in annual battle. Both elevens of youngsters have developed the new game, and an interesting contest is expected. The event always draws a large crowd, and enthusiasm among the high school students over the game runs high.

No Reclassification of Leagues.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 17.—Indications at the meeting to-night of the Board of Arbitration of the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs are that the reclassification bugaboo will not cause the demotion of any league. It was asserted that any league which could sustain claims to an advance in classification by the census would be advanced, but that population records would not be invoked to cause the reduction of any. This means that the Western League and the Three I League will not be disturbed.

WALTER WINANS IN SPEEDWAY BRUSHES

Well-Known Devotee of Harness Horse Shares Honors with Local Drivers in Races.

Through the nonappearance of E. T. Stotesbury, who was scheduled to meet Walter Winans in a special match yesterday, lovers of the harness horse were robbed of what promised to be a rather sensational Speedway event, but although the numerous devotees to this trotting Mecca were disappointed at not seeing the race, they were rewarded with a series of brushes which were quite up to the standard.

Mr. Winans, an American living in England and a prominent exhibitor at the Horse Show in the Garden, who was making his debut on the Speedway, proved the principal contributor to the enjoyment of the onlookers, as with the defection of his proposed opponent he drove up and down the course, apparently with the proverbial chip on his shoulder, seeking a match or matches with American-bred horses against his French horse Rip.

A series was promptly arranged, each brush to be half a mile. In the first Mr. Winans took the measure of Lewis Smith, driving The Trip, a two-year-old trotter by Bon Voyage. William Cahill, behind Lady Caprice, also fell a victim to the newcomer, but in subsequent brushes each took the visitor into camp.

Mr. Winans, behind an American-bred chestnut horse, Bonnie View, then engaged in a race with John O'Connor, driving The Spoiler, smothering the latter in the most convincing style.

Nathan Straus with Denver found little difficulty in disposing of Brother Milroi in straight heats, and later beating the President of the association, J. F. Gibbons, who handled the ribbons over Frank J. Kilpatrick's Wilmer. Denver and Wilmer were fairly well aligned at the quarter, where the latter went up in the air, losing nearly ten lengths. From that point on, however, after getting his feet, Wilmer came on in fine style, and was only beaten a scant half length.

At a special meeting of the Road Drivers' Association Walter Winans was elected an honorary life member.

One of the earliest brushes of the afternoon was fought out by the biggest field of the series, four participating. Mr. Winans handled the ribbons over Rip, a French-bred horse; Lewis Smith drove The Trip, William Cahill sat behind Lady Caprice, and N. Gruenzelder looked after the interests of Triphammer. Rip got none the worst of the break, and showed the way to the quarter pole, with Triphammer his closest attendant. The latter got up in the final sixteenth and just beat Mr. Winans's entry, with Lady Caprice and The Trip lengths apart in the order named.

This heat led up to a three-cornered brush between Rip, Lady Caprice, and Graeme Gratton, driven by James Holloway, the first heat of which showed Lady Caprice in the van, beating Rip and Graeme Gratton, who finished as named. Graeme Gratton pulled the next heat out of the fire just when it looked as though Mr. Cahill's entry was going to win in straight heats. Rip finished third.

Judge Boardman, driven by his owner, W. C. Urban, beat Dick Williams, handled by E. E. Shoemaker, in three straight heats; Thomas Hinds with Ishmalian showed the way to Leo Ottinger, who handled Lady Worthy. The well-known pacer Coast Marie, driven by J. M. Murphy, had her colors lowered by Princess Direct, with Tom Leahy behind her.

Sam Goldsmith with Winsome took the measure of Dr. B, driven by Dr. Bristol, but later succumbed to Dr. Ives, which had F. Campbell as the reinsman. The pacers, Dr. Threet and Miss Syracuse, handled by James Holloway and Joe Meyers, respectively, had a nice go, with honors resting easily with Dr. Threet. With the same entry, however, a few minutes afterward, Meyers defeated Borelia, driven by Tom Hines.

On Sunday morning Mr. Winans intends to seek revenge for some of his defeats of yesterday and will be on hand with the pick of his stable. Brushes have been scheduled between Ishmalian and Lady Worthy, Mahlon Wilkes and Bonnie View and the pacers. Be on Time and Korrect Shape.

Hyatt Returns to Army Team.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 17.—The football practice to-day was very encouraging to the coaches and to the crowd of army adherents who daily watch the team's progress. The first team displayed speed and put ginger into the plays that pleased the corps of cadets grouped on the grand stand to encourage with their cheers the team upon which they pin their faith in the coming battle with the middies. Hyatt, the Army's fast quarter back and clever football general, was in his place and ran the team from quarter back for the first time in several weeks. His reappearance was welcome to the soldiers, for, after his injury before the Harvard game, they had grave doubts of his being able to round into shape for the final struggle. Dean also put some of his old-time vim into the playing at half back. The fact that Trinity defeated the New York University, who face the middies this Saturday, gives much interest to the coming game with the Hartford boys, and, while the cadets are confident of their team ability, they have much respect for the prowess of the Trinity boys. It is not likely, however, that any chances will be taken with Dean or Brown, and the brunt of the work Saturday will be borne by Morris and Spalding, the first substitutes in the back field.

NOTES OF THE BOXERS.

The star bout at the Bedford A. C. boxing series to-night will bring together Farmer Kelly and Paddy Meehan at 118 pounds. Several good preliminaries are also carded.

Billy Gibson, manager of the Fairmont Club, has set the Pal Moore-Abe Attell bout back to Nov. 29, in order to give the featherweight champion a chance to get into his best form. Attell is still sore as the result of his bout with Frankie Conley, and does not desire to take any chances with Moore.

Lew Powell of California and Young Otto are slated to appear as the main attraction at the Olympic A. C. next Monday night. If Otto wins he will be matched against the winner of the Goodman-Sammy Smith go.

Six bouts are on the programme for the meeting of the Lehigh A. C. at the clubhouse, Boston Road, next Friday evening. The main event will be a ten-round bout between Young Goldman and Kid Ghetto, and there will also be six-round sessions between Walter Hennessey and Jack Elliott and Marty Brown and Patsy Healey. There will be three preliminaries. On the following Friday night Jack Dorman and Joe Stein will meet in the main bout.

Barry Hill, the amateur 105-pound champion, will make his professional debut Saturday night in a ten-round bout at the Long Acre A. A. against the Fighting Messenger Boy, Johnny Falter. The usual number of tryouts will also be on the card. On next Tuesday night a special stag has been arranged, and the main event will bring together Tommy Bendle and Frank Kenny of Brooklyn.

Jack Goodney, the newsboy champion, and Jack Smith, the heavy-hitting lightweight of South Brooklyn, will clash in the ten-round main bout of the Bergen Beach A. C. of Brooklyn to-night. Both boys have trained faithfully for this bout and it should prove to be a very interesting affair. Stanley Jacobs will meet "Desperate Desmond" in the six-round semi-final. These boys are sluggers, and this also should be a good bout. Knockout Johnny McLean will battle with Kid Lavigne. The usual preliminaries will precede these bouts.

CAMBRIDGE, Nov. 17.—There are to be changes in the Harvard baseball schedules for next Spring, and one of these changes will have to do with games with Princeton. It is about settled that there will be only one game between Harvard and the tigers, and on the best of authority it is learned that the game will be played on May 20 at Princeton.

Demarest Makes Record Run.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Calvin Demarest, the young Chicago billiard player, in practice, hung up a new record yesterday for the 18.2 style of play. He made 312, breaking the best previous mark either in practice or competition of 307, made by Willie Hoppe in 1908 at the all-star tournament in Orchestra Hall.

MRS. KING CLINCHES POOL CHAMPIONSHIP

Miss Clearwater Beaten by Nearly 100 Points for Women's Title.

Mrs. Bertha M. King cemented her claim to the title of woman pool champion last night at Maurice Daly's Academy when she defeated Miss Martha Clearwater of Pittsburg, the final score of their four nights' match being 400 to 307. A fair-sized crowd of enthusiasts witnessed the match, which was the first ever played for such honors.

The winner failed at any time to open up the game so as to give her opponent even a ghost of a chance, although it looked as though she could have permitted the Pittsburg miss to catch her and then go on and win. On the contrary, Miss Clearwater spread the balls upon the slightest provocation in endeavors to get the game out of the monotonous stage. Naturally this accrued to the benefit of the ultimate winner, which, it could be argued, was all in the game.

High runs were the exception rather than the rule, 6 being the limit, and this by Miss Clearwater in the third frame. Five was the limit of Mrs. King's individual effort, but such runs by her were frequent enough to always keep her drawing away from her youthful opponent to the end that in the night's score she tallied 93 to 66.

Mrs. King played steadily throughout, while the miss, nervous to the extreme, only executed cleverly in spots. The latter went away in the lead, getting the lion's share of the first frame, each, however, losing heavily through scratches. In the second frame Mrs. King came into her own with a total of 12 of the possible 15. Miss Clearwater responded with 9 in the next, and it began to look as though there might be a battle after all.

This impression was dissipated very quickly, however, as Mrs. King, through the medium of the major portion of the points in the sixth, seventh, and eighth frames soon had her opponent playing a losing game, as she repeatedly missed shots which in the earlier stages of the tournament were comparatively easy for her.

With the possible exception of the third frame from the last, Miss Clearwater looked to have lost her idea of direction completely, but at this period of the match she corralled 11 by dint of hard pool, starting with a pickout which opened up the bunch in a way which eventually proved to her benefit, as Mrs. King failed to take advantage of her opportunities.

Strange as it may seem, the match had progressed to the second from the last frame before a bank shot was successfully pulled off, and then it was executed by Mrs. King, being a difficult one at that. Needing 8 for her required 400, Mrs. King clinched matters by runs of 3 and 5. Miss Clearwater was the first to congratulate the winner. The summary:

Mrs. King, (307)—3 12 3 11 2 13 10 5 6 11 2 7 8. Total—400.
Miss Clearwater, (241)—7 2 9 4 9 2 5 3 3 2 11 7 2. Total—307.

NEWS OF THE ATHLETES.

Followers of amateur marathoners will have an opportunity of witnessing what promises to be one of the most keenly contested races seen hereabouts in some years, as a number of good runners from out of town will battle for the valuable prizes offered. The start of the race will take place, as usual, at noon on Thanksgiving Day, and the course has been so arranged that abundant opportunity will be given every one to see the race from start to finish. The last nine miles will be run on the Empire City track, and, as it is during this period that such events are won and lost, it is anticipated that a good crowd will avail itself of the chance. Jimmy George, a phenomenal runner, who has won several distance races of note, will be the favorite.

The events in the games of the Twenty-second Regiment Engineers, Company F, on Thanksgiving Eve, will be 70-yard dash, 440-yard, 880-yard, and two-mile runs, one-mile walk, two-mile bicycle, 600-yard novice, and a company relay race.

Hans Holmer and Bill Queal, the American team which captured the honors in the recent twenty-mile team race in Madison Square Garden early in the month have entered the Marathon team race carded for Nov. 29. Despite the fact that this pair won in the most wonderful time for the distance, viz.: 1:29:47, the extra distance in the coming race, six miles 385 yards, is expected to be a factor toward slowing them up considerably and give the other teams a much better chance to gather the honors.

Prizes for the big novice race of the Morris Athletic Association on Nov. 27 are said to be handsome and valuable. Practice runs are held over the Morris course every Tuesday and Thursday evenings, and the invitation run next Sunday afternoon will give all intending entrants a good chance for a workout.

Janowski Outplays Lasker.

BERLIN, Nov. 17.—D. Janowski and Emanuel Lasker began the fourth game of the match of eight games up for the chess championship here to-day. Janowski opened with a Queen's gambit. Lasker refused to accept the gambit pawn, and lost a rook in the middle of the game, thus practically losing. However, an adjournment was taken this evening, play to be resumed to-morrow afternoon. Present score: Lasker, 1; drawn, 2; adjourned, 1.

CONFER ON AUTO LAWS.

Uniformity in Statutes Plan of Representatives of Several States.

The officials of ten States and the District of Columbia met at the Touring Club of America yesterday and held an informal discussion about the automobile laws of different States and advocated a uniformity of legislation. The object is to frame State laws so that the residents of States after having complied with the regulations of their home State can tour in other States without being subjected to additional legal requirements. President Joseph W. Jones of the Touring Club of America welcomed the delegates at the opening of the conference, and Frederick H. Caley, Registrar of Automobiles of Ohio, was selected to preside during the discussion. Last night the delegates were the guests of the Touring Club of America at the Horse Show in Madison Square Garden.

Assemblyman Albert S. Callan, author of the new automobile law of New York State, told how the law had improved automobile conditions in many respects. Secretary of State-elect Edward Lazansky was also present from New York.

Gov. Horace White telegraphed that he would arrive in New York too late to attend the meeting, but extended a hearty welcome to the delegates and cordial assurance of his interest in the movement, and wished the meeting every success.

Several tentative resolutions were adopted as being in the line of meeting satisfactorily the general demand for equable provisions. One of the more important suggested inter-State touring privileges of fifteen days, provided, however, that the sections of the law in the neighboring State are substantially in force as law in the State, Territory, or Federal district of the residence of the visiting motor tourist.

HOCKEY LEAGUE DATES.

Short Schedule with Four Clubs Contending—Canadian Games in Prospect.

With the arrangement of an apparently short schedule by the Amateur Hockey League New Yorkers will be treated to what has long been desired locally—more Canadian hockey both by amateurs and professionals. At any rate that is what is promised, and consequent upon the defection of the Wanderers team from the league will surely come to pass.

It is the intention of the owners of the St. Nicholas Rink, where the games will be played, to have the pick of the players from across the border, collegiate, club, and professional meet here, in matches with our players, and between themselves, if necessary.

The players of the Wanderers will be split up between the Hockey Club of New York and the Crescent A. C., and it is expected that the accessions will greatly benefit those teams. The championship schedule follows:

Jan. 3—New York A. C. vs. Hockey Club; 5—Crescent A. C. vs. St. Nicholas; 10—St. Nicholas vs. New York A. C.; 13—Hockey Club vs. Crescent A. C.; 17—St. Nicholas vs. Hockey Club; 20—Crescent A. C. vs. New York; 24—Hockey Club vs. New York; 26—St. Nicholas vs. Crescent A. C.; Feb. 1—Crescent A. C. vs. Hockey Club; 3—New York A. C. vs. St. Nicholas; 9—Hockey Club vs. St. Nicholas; 14—New York A. C. vs. St. Nicholas.

Results of Billiard Matches.

In last night's game of the amateur three-cushion carrom billiard tournament at McGraw's Billiard Academy, Thirty-fifth Street and Sixth Avenue, C. H. Byers defeated C. H. Ditmars by the score of 40 to 31, in eighty-nine innings. Up to the fifty-fourth inning the score stood 18 to 10 in favor of Ditmars, but in this period Byers caught up to his opponent and ran away with the game thereafter. Byers made his highest run of five in the last inning, while Ditmans's best efforts netted him a run of four.

In a practice game of billiards last night, in preparation for his coming championship match with Willie Hoppe, George Slosson, playing 18.1 balkline, defeated R. Raymond, playing 18.2, by the score of 300 to 80 in thirteen innings. Slosson made a high run of 96, and an average of 25. Raymond's high run was 28, and his average 6 2-13. Slosson and Calvin Demarest was to have played the first block of their 3,600-point match yesterday afternoon, but owing to Demarest's late arrival from Chicago, the game was postponed until this afternoon. The contest will be played at Slosson's Billiard Academy, Thirty-first Street and Broadway.

In the game of the Class B amateur three-cushion carrom billiard tournament last night at John Doyle's Forty-second Street Billiard Academ, "Bud" Fisher defeated Hal Chase, manager of the New York American League Baseball team, by the score of 25 to 22, in sixty-five innings. It was a close game throughout. Fisher's high run for the game was five, and Chase's was four. To-night M. Beck and C. H. Byers will cross cues.

Al Garnaus, representing Brooklyn in the National Billiard League, defeated Allen Mason, who represents Boston, in a game of three-cushion carrom billiards, at the Knickerbocker Billiard Academy of Brooklyn last night, by the score of 50 to 40. Garnaus ran out his string of 50 points, and a high run of four in 100 innings. Mason also made a high run of four. Dave Lauderback will represent Brooklyn against Allen Mason of Boston this evening.

GOVERNMENT LOSES IN OIL REBATE CASE

WILL AFFECT OTHER SUITS

Judge's Ruling That Evidence of Prosecution Is Insufficient Bears on Rebate Cases Generally.

JACKSON, Tenn., Nov. 17.—In a ruling which required just twenty minutes to read, Judge John E. McCall in the United States Circuit Court this afternoon, not only put a final end to the efforts of the Government to have penalties assessed against the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, amounting to $30,081,000, but instructed that a verdict of not guilty be returned on the counts as amended. They had been reduced from 1,524, based on the number of shipments, to 46, based on the number of settlements, and the possible penalties had dropped from $30,084,000 to $950,000.

The ruling came with the conclusion of the chief case of the prosecution, and in substance holds with the contention of the defense, which was that after four years the United States had failed to build its structure of evidence other than on sand.

The suit at issue was probably the most important litigation against one of the greater corporations ever fought out in the South. The Elkins law regarding Inter-State commerce was violated, it was alleged, through "scheme and device," the specific offense charged being the receiving of freight rate concessions.

Judge McCall in his ruling first reviewed the allegations. Next he took up the testimony presented as tending to prove that the consignments, which formed the basis for the suit, were shipped on orders received from the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky by the defendant company from its refinery at Whiting, Ind., to Grand Junction, Tenn., "for beyond," with freight charges prepaid to Grand Junction, and there taken possession of by the Kentucky corporation.

Judge McCall pointed out that the testimony presented "tends to prove that there was no understanding, expressed or implied, direct or indirect," between the defendant company and the Kentucky company with regard to rates to be paid; that it was solely a business transaction between two corporations. Upon these facts the Judge recalled that he had ruled early in the trial that the Indiana Company should not be held accountable for the shipments so far as the transportation beyond Grand Junction was concerned.

"The uncontradicted testimony presented by the Government," the ruling continues, "is that during the period covered by the indictment there was a 13-cent rate from Whiting to Grand Junction for points beyond, and this rate was duly on file with the Inter-State Commerce Commission and was the legal rate. The testimony is uncontradicted that the shipments covered by the indictment were in carload lots from Whiting to Grand Junction 'for beyond' and that the defendant paid this rate."

Quoting the response to interrogations of the court, by T. M. Crosland, an attaché of the Inter-State Commerce Commission at Washington, Judge McCall pointed out that the witness held that the defendant company was authorized to use the 13-cent rate; that it was a legal rate; and that if inquiry had been made of him by a shipper for the purpose of ascertaining the legal tariff, he would have quoted that rate.

It was held by the court that the much discussed "blind billing" was done by the carrier, and "that there is not one syllable of testimony tending to show that the defendant company knew that the carrier was 'blind billing' the shipments. But if the defendant had known this fact, how could that affect its rights to avail itself of the 13-cent rate, which was filed with the Inter-State Commerce Commission?"

As to the contention that the "blind billing" was an effort to conceal the rate, it was contended that if even that were true it would be an effort on the part of the railroad company which could avail but little because of the fact that the tariff was regularly filed with the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

It was also held that the indictment allegations showed the transportation as from Evansville, Ind., while the evidence showed that it moved from Whiting.

Concluding, Judge McCall cited the right of the great and the small to an equal footing before the courts, and said:

"When the courts swing away from this rule, and those convicted of crime are convicted by other means the justice of our boasted jurisprudence will soon become a hollow mockery, and the judgment of our courts will be held in derision and contempt."

The formal charge to the jury sustaining the motion of the defense and instructing a verdict of not guilty followed.

It is understood that the termination of the present suit will have an important bearing on other suits pending against the larger corporations.

CITY DEFEATS SUGAR TRUST.

Latter Must Pay $525,600 for Fraudulently Using City Water.

Morgan J. O'Brien, as referee in the counter suit of the American Sugar Refining Company against New York City, growing out of the charge by the city that the company had used fraudulently water taken from the city mains at the company's Kent Avenue plant in Williamsburg, filed a decision yesterday allowing the city $525,000, the amount of water taxes for which the city had sued the company.

The city sued the company on Oct. 1, 1903, and later threatened to shut off the water. The sugar company responded by a counter-suit, in which it sought to have the city enjoined from shutting off the water and set up the claim that no money was due the city.

Judge O'Brien was appointed referee in this counter-suit against the city, and it is in this action that he has upheld the city's claim

BEATEN BY THIEVES.

One of Two Partners May Die After Night Attack.

Ignatz Vahitich and John Colebot, partners in a small butcher and grocery store at Colgate and Wayne Streets, Jersey City, awoke early yesterday morning in their room at 49½ Colgate Street, to find two men throwing a bed sheet over them. Before they could cry out the thieves beat them into unconsciousness. The robbers stole $700 in cash and a check for $40. Vahitich had $668 in cash in his pockets, but this the robbers left behind. The storekeepers are in the City Hospital, and Vahitich may die.

Last night detectives arrested Kestian Degreilot at his home, 235 Wayne Street, Jersey City, and two charges of atrocious assault and battery have been lodged against him and another of robbery. His hat, with his name in it, was found in the room where the partners were attacked.

GLASS MEN TO CONFER.

They Plan Secret Meeting to Offset Dissolution of Their Trust.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Nov. 17.—A circular was sent this afternoon from Pittsburg to many makers of hand-made window glass, who were connected with the Imperial Glass Company, a self-confessed trust, until its dissolution by the Federal authorities. They are asked for suggestions as to the time and place of holding a quiet meeting to talk over affairs and a date early next week is proposed.

The circulars are secret, and though the object of the meeting is stated as merely "to talk over matters," it is pretty well understood here that some other plan of action is being thought out by the window glass men, who had the trade in their own hands until interfered with by the Government. It is understood a rate war is feared by some of them, and an effort will be made to prevent it.

The announcement of the window glass people that they will not open their plants in the face of interference by the Government and the rise in prices are considered by the United States authorities at Pittsburg as an attempt to incite the glass workers against the Government.

United States District Attorney John H. Jordan, who pressed the suits against the Imperial Glass Company, said to-day:

"That concern was a high-handed trust. Attorney General Wickersham's statement at Washington that the members have not shown proper appreciation of the court's leniency in letting the officials down with light fines is true.

"They are trying to inspire in the workingman a feeling of resentment toward the Government in dissolving the trust. The company held a complete monopoly regulating the output and the price of glass, and the officials admitted every contention of the Government and had nothing to offer in defense."

Commenting on a statement of J. H. Johnson, sales agent of the Imperial Glass Company, the glass factories would not reopen save on the old Erie scale, which means a cut of 45 per cent. in wages, Mr. Jordan said:

"If these people have shut down their plants it is for a purpose. The price of glass went up yesterday, and it is the height of absurdity to say that they cannot operate at a profit."

TO SAVE RUSSIAN REFUGEE.

Anarchists Protest Against Extradition of Man Who Shot Policeman.

At one of the most orderly meetings ever held in Cooper Union revolutionary sentiments were expressed last night. The Czar of Russia was called everything from a thief to a murderer from the platform while the crowd that filled the hall, mostly women, applauded. The occasion of the gathering was to protest against the extradition from Winnipeg, Canada, to Russia of Savva Fedorenko. The Russian is in jail on the charge of murder for killing a policeman in attempting to escape arrest.

The local Socialists and Anarchists, however, maintain that he is a political refugee and last night's meeting was held under the auspices of the Political Refugees' Defense League, which was prominent in the fight against the extradition of Jan Pouren a year ago.

Charles Edward Russell, who was the Socialist candidate for Governor this Fall, presided at the meeting. Speeches were made by Meyer London, Dr. Charles Chilowsky, Prof. Isaac A. Hourwich, and Moses Oppenheimer. Mr. Oppenheimer made the most incendiary remarks, although he admitted that he had never been in Russia.

An announcement was read by Mr. Oppenheimer, and adopted by the meeting, denouncing the Russian Government, and protesting against the extradition from this continent of Russian refugees.

LANDING STAGE FOR AIRMEN.

Aeronautic Reserves to Have One on Their New Clubhouse.

Commodore John Barry Ryan of the United States Aeronautic Reserves, announced yesterday that plans are being drawn to build a landing stage on the roof of the new club house of the association, 53 Fifth Avenue, for the convenience of aviators. It is expected that work will be started on the landing stage in a short time.

The proposed stage will be 250 feet long and 75 feet wide. It will run along the roofs of the houses on the east side of Fifth Avenue from the Reserve building, on the northeast corner of Twelfth Street, for the entire block. Landing aeroplanes will come from the southwest and, landing on the lower part of the staging, will have more than 200 feet to run along on. In order to avoid accidents, the entire northern and eastern sides of the stage will be protected by heavy netting, which will effectually stop the machines from running off, without injuring either aeroplane or operator.

In order to provide plenty of space for maneuvring the machines, a broad, white line will be painted down the centre of the platform. With the breakes that are now on the running gear of many aeroplanes there will be no difficulty in stopping the machines in less than 200 feet.

JERSEY BOYS IN BOUT.

Kid Wilson Whips Billy Leary in Ten Rounds at Long Acre A. C.

Kid Wilson of East Orange and Billy Leary of Gladstone, N. J., both claimants of the welterweight championship of New Jersey, met to settle the question at the Long Acre A. C. last night, and Wilson had the better of the argument. At one time during the battle it seemed as if Leary would put his dusky opponent away, but the latter rallied strongly and punished Leary severely in the last two rounds. During the entire three minutes of the final round Wilson rushed Leary around the ring, raining blow after blow to the head, and the Gladstone boy only saved himself from a trip to dreamland by his ability to hang on.

The two had met before, and Wilson put Leary away in one round. Last night's battle was a return affair, and it excited considerable interest across the river. In the crowd which packed the Long Acre Clubhouse was a big delegation of Jersey "sports," the majority of whom were out strong for Leary. There was a long dispute about weight just before the men entered the ring. The two had put up forfeits of $200 each as a guarantee of weight, 145 pounds ringside, and the weighing in showed Leary to be just at the proper weight and Wilson three pounds over. Leary finally agreed to go on, and Wilson forfeited his guarantee.

Leary had a shade on Wilson in height and reach, but the colored boxer was considerably stronger, and he bored in enough in the early rounds to beat down Leary's guard and send in a shower of blows to Leary's head. The first round was even, with neither doing a great deal of real work, and in the second Leary managed to get a shade on Wilson. The latter came back strong, however, in the third round and had Leary in such a way that it looked as if the bout would not reach the halfway mark. The fourth round was the same with Wilson rushing in and pounding Leary hard while the latter had to be content with punches to Wilson's head, which landed frequently, but not with enough force to hurt the dusky boy. Wilson had a big advantage in the clinches and infighting.

The fifth round was marked by considerable clinching, and there was little advantage for either. Wilson was beginning to slow up from the swift pace he had been setting and Leary was guarding better. In the sixth round the tide turned, and after Leary had opened a good-sized cut over Wilson's right eye he began to get more confidence and showed up much better. He held Wilson off and jabbed him continually.

The seventh round was all Leary's. He staggered Wilson with a series of hard left jabs to the face, and guarded himself so well that the East Orange boy failed to get in one good blow during the round. It looked as if Leary was on the road to victory, and the audience, which had been rooting strong for Leary, was in an uproar. In the eighth round Wilson began to indulge in rushing tactics, which wore down Leary's defense, but both were so tired that there was little advantage for either. In the ninth Wilson began to show more steam, and he punished Leary far more than he had at any other time during the fight. In the last round Leary was not able to land a hard punch, and just barely managed to stick to the end.

Westchester Life Assigns.

The Westchester Life Company of 286 Fifth Avenue, publisher of a weekly society paper called Westechester Life, has made an assignment to George H. Hinnan. The company was incorporated under New York laws on Dec. 1, 1909, with a capital stock of $10,000. Lyman H. Weeks is President.

DIXIE KID FIGHTS TAMELY WITH LEWIS

National Crowd Disappointed in Bout—The Little Fellows Fight Better.

Two little 105-pounders upset the dope last night at the National Sporting Club and furnished the sure-enough star bout of the evening.

Willie Lewis and the Dixie Kid were down on the bill for this feature of the weekly boxing show at Tom O'Rourke's club in West Forty-fourth Street, but the youngsters beat them to it.

Lewis and Dixie Kid performed as per schedule, but their efforts during the ten rounds of their bout fell far short of satisfying the big crowd that had turned out to the show. These two middleweights had a fight several weeks ago which set a good part of the town talking. On that occasion the Kid won, but under such circumstances that a demand was made for another bout, and Tom O'Rourke obliged.

Last night's affair was nothing like the previous encounter, and the crowd showed its disappointment in various ways, mostly voicing their disapproval by hissing. The boys, however, worked hard during most of the ten rounds, but the blows that went by would have furnished enough action for half a dozen bouts had they landed. During the last two rounds there was not a fair blow landed, and a draw is the only decision that could be given on the sum total of the encounter.

As to the mill of the youngsters, it was full of good, clever work from start to finish. Barry Hill, the ex-amateur 105-pound local champion, and Young Reilly were the principals.

Reilly worked a very clever left jab for the better part of three rounds until Hill caught him a right swing on the side of the head and sent him to the floor. He recovered quickly and finished the round in good shape. Hill went after his man in the next round and walloped him all around the ring. Reilly went down three times and at the finish was in a bad way, but he kept his head and avoided many of Hill's swings. It was one of the best bouts between little fellows that has been seen this season, and Hill was a clear winner.

Young Denny disposed of Denny McGrath in the first round of the semi-final.

The Dixie Kid looked a bit heavier than Lewis as they came together in the ring for the usual preliminaries. The colored man had his hands heavily bandaged, to which Lewis made no material objection, though he examined them carefully.

At the first belltap they sailed into each other, with Lewis as the aggressor. The Kid struck his crouching attitude early and waited for Lewis to lead. Willie was willing, but his lefts were neatly blocked. The Kid made several mad rushes, but Lewis covered up. Just as the round ended Lewis caught the Kid lightly on the neck with his left.

Lewis started in first in the second round and laid his left on the Kid's neck. The latter pushed in and managed to get his right to Willie's ribs. Several leads resulted in clinches, after one of which the Kid rushed in, backed Lewis into a corner and planted his left in Lewis's stomach. The round was fairly even.

The Kid wore a very serious expression as he came out of his corner for the third round. He waltzed into Mr. Lewis, pushing Willie back to the ropes, and went merrily to work with both hands. Willie got the worst of this mix-up, and so he did of the one which immediately followed. Lewis went to his knees as he missed a swing for the Kid's jaw.

The Kid was on the jump right at the start of the fourth, but Willie stood him off. The darky was not wasting his blows like Lewis was, but on the other hand most of them were parried.

Lewis caught the Kid coming out of his corner with a right uppercut in the heart region. The colored man danced around looking for an opening, but they were few and hard to get. Finally he saw his chance and caught Willie wide open. He landed on Lewis flush on the mouth with his left and countered Willie's pawing with a right on the ribs. The round was a bit in favor of the Kid.

The Kid found Lewis's map with his left twice in succession and Willie incurred the displeasure of the crowd by elbowing the Kid's head back in the clinches. Lewis came back and recklessly sailed in. He made good with a right uppercut which set the house in an uproar. The Kid, however, wore a smile which was hard to knock off.

They came together with a crash as the seventh started, and Willie came away with a blue ticket. His left for the face had landed. He went in again with both hands working and again came out on top. The Kid acted as though he was tired, but as the bell rang he smiled as he landed a right on Lewis's ribs. The round was a trifle in Willie's favor.

Willie kept up his left jabbing for the Kid's face and got away with a couple of nice ones. The Kid was wild and missed time and again. They exchanged punches with scarcely an effort at parrying. Lewis's blows seemed the more forceful, but he couldn't make any impression, apparently, on his dusky opponent. They both let up in their speed and the crowd became restless.

There wasn't a fair blow landed during the entire ninth round, and the crowd voiced its displeasure. The round consisted mainly of missed leads and clinches. So did the tenth.

Asks $20,000 for Miss Ladenberg.

It was learned yesterday at Surrogate Jackson's office at Mineola, L. I., that the exact amount asked for by Mrs. Emily Ladenberg for the education and maintenance of her sixteen-year-old daughter, Eugenia, abroad is $20,000 a year instead of amounts ranging from $10,000 to $17,000, as previously printed. The daughter sails on Nov. 23, but Mrs. Ladenberg has not yet made proper application for the money, the papers having been returned to her counsel for corrections.

Diversify Your Investments

IT IS a good plan to distribute money among different types of investment, rather than to place it all in any one class of security. The benefits are twofold; first, a well diversified interest in the field of conservative investment; second, a return averaging a liberal rate of income.

Improved Credit
Example No. 35

During February, 1898, we sold Mobile & Ohio, Montgomery Division, First Mortgage 5s at 97—a 5.15% basis: they are now 109½ bid on the N. Y. Stock Exchange—a 4.45 basis. This is an advance of 12½ points. The Montgomery Division is bonded at $21,500 a mile.

Recurring Opportunities

We now offer, with the same degree of confidence, to yield 5.15%, the First Mortgage Bonds of a Company operating in the same territory. The Road connects with the Montgomery Division of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, and furnishes the latter at the junction point with more traffic than any other station on the Road. The Bonds are a First Mortgage at $8,000 per mile, and the Company is earning at the rate of about 3 times interest charges.

MANIPULATION THE FEATURE

Sharp Fluctuations Follow Professional Manoeuvres—Northwestern's Bond Issue—Money Still Easier.

It is an interesting commentary upon the current speculation on the Stock Exchange that the extraordinary breaks in the prices of a half-dozen shares in the first ten minutes of trading yesterday was generally and deliberately ascribed in the various Wall Street market publications to the absence from the floor of the Exchange of those brokers or traders who were supposed to be in possession of supporting orders. If this is true then it follows as a matter of course that the first ten minutes of trading was the only period of business on the Exchange in which purely natural causes had their sway in whatever number of days or weeks has elapsed since the aforesaid brokers or traders were commissioned to look after the prices of a limited number of securities. Possibly this statement needs some qualification because of the short selling which has been going on owing to the distrust of a very large body of speculators in the existing market, but no one at all familiar with the manipulative tactics resorted to in the course of a speculative campaign, could doubt the overwhelming part played by such tactics at the moment. So open in fact has been the resort to these measures that rumors were current after the close of business yesterday that official cognizance of the situation might have to be taken. Great Northern fell 3 points before the day was ten minutes old, Union Pacific and New York Central fell 2 points each, and Reading, United States Steel, St. Paul and a half-dozen other shares of similar standing broke nearly as abruptly. In the ensuing hours, up to the last, recoveries of practically all the ground lost were made by some of the shares mentioned but in the final hour this was re-traced and a range of quotations little above the lowest and substantially under Wednesday night's recorded at the close.

Announcement was made of the sale by the Chicago & Northwestern of $16,250,000 bonds to one of the leading banking houses here, and the transaction is of more significance than might seem to be the case, considering only the amount of money involved because the bonds form a part of an issue originally carrying 3½ per cent. interest, but now advanced to 4 per cent. As a matter of fact a sale of $15,000,000 of these bonds as a 3½ per cent. security was made in January last year and offered for public subscription at 94 or thereabouts. It is in recognition of the changed investment situation that the Directors of the road have advanced the rate on the issue to 4 per cent., a wise step and one which was undoubtedly counselled by the bankers interested. Presumably if other roads in need of funds could be brought to follow the Northwestern's example we should hear less complaint regarding the market for railroad securities, for it is the testimony of unprejudiced bankers that a good bond bearing an interest rate fairly recognizing the need of the investor for a larger return on his money than he could accept several years ago will find a ready market. This will undoubtedly be confirmed by the success of the Northwestern financing.

For the first time in several weeks the bulk of the demand loan business was done at a rate below 3 per cent. and certain time maturities were also quotably easier. The banks continue to hold their own on routine transactions with the Sub-Treasury and are in receipt daily of substantial sums on balance from the interior. The proportion of reserve to liabilities, 52.30 per cent., reported by the Bank of England yesterday is an exceptionally high figure for the season of the year, comparing actually with an average of 45.96 per cent. over the past ten years. The political situation in England is inducing conservatism in banking quarters there, but in other respects the position is good.

CHICAGO STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Western Stone stock took an upward leap on the local Exchange to-day of over 4 points. The rise, according to well informed brokers, was due to an agreement which the company has entered into with its leading competitors in regard to prices, which for several months past have been slashed in a way to destroy the profits of the crushed stone business. Sears-Roebuck and Diamond Match, in which trading was of considerable volume, both broke sharply. Illinois Brick held relatively better than some of the more popular issues. In the bond section trading in Armour's 4½s at a moderate advance in prices was the feature.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17.—The local Stock Exchange was quiet to-day. The excitement surrounding the dealings in Lehigh Valley appeared to have abated somewhat, and, although that issue was still quite active, its fluctuations throughout the greater part of the session were much more orderly than of late. Profit taking was in evidence from the start, and the price reacted a point. Thereafter it swung within a compartively narrow range around 91. Lake Superior continued to display noteworthy firmness. Electric Storage Battery was firm. Rapid Transit was in fair demand at a small advance.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Trading Irregular, with Activity Diminished on the Curb Market.

MINING LIST UP AND DOWN

A Few Small Advances from Opening Prices, but Fluctuations Are Narrow on Sluggish Trading.

Curb trading was somewhat irregular yesterday, and although a few issues showed gains, there were a number which closed below the opening levels. Chino Copper was one of the mining issues to show strength. After opening at 21⅞, the price moved up to 22⅛, which was the closing level, after sales of 1,500. Giroux and Miami closed even with the opening levels. Greene-Cananea declined ⅛. Ray Central was somewhat less active than in recent markets. The opening was at 2⅜, and the close, after sales of 7,500, at 2 7-16. The new American Smelters Securities 6s sold up from 102½ at the opening to 103, and after transactions of $20,000 closed at the lower level.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Thursday.

Superficially the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange could be termed active, as the total for the day was 90,647 shares. But virtually all the activity continued concentrated in the three speculative leaders of late, United States Steel common, Reading, and Union Pacific, accounting for 75,955 shares of the aggregate, leaving less than 15,000 shares distributed among the rest of the list. Forty-two stocks in all changed hands.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Changing Rates of Interest.

When the general mortgage bonds of the Chicago & Northwestern, of which a block has just been sold to Kuhn, Loeb & Co., were authorized, it was provided that they might be issued at any rate of interest not in excess of 5 per cent. The first issues were made at 3½ per cent., but conditions have so changed in the bond market that the road's management thought it advisable, in the present instance, to advance the rate to 4 per cent., thus commanding for them a better market than could have been obtained for a 3½ per cent. issue in these days when investors are demanding a higher yield on their capital. This Northwestern bond is only one of several instances in which provision has been made for just such a contingency. The first issues of the Illinois division bonds of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy were put out as 3½ per cent. bonds, but when a further issue of these bonds was made the rate was raised to 4 per cent. By allowing some leeway in the matter of interest rates, the corporations issuing the bonds avoid the discomfort of having to appeal to their stockholders for a fresh authorization to cover changed conditions in the bond market. In the present instance, the Northwestern, while paying a higher rate of interest, will be able, with the proceeds of this issue, to pay off older bonds on which 6 and 7 per cent. is being paid.

Application to List Certificates.

The Chaplin committee of Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal bondholders announces that it will make application to the New York Stock Exchange to list the Columbia Trust Company certificates for bonds deposited with it as the depositary of the Chaplin committee. These certificates are now being issued, not only for bonds of the company themselves, but also for certificates of the Central Trust Company, issued for bonds previously deposited with the Wallace committee. The Central Trust Company certificates have all along been listed on the Exchange, and now the Chaplin committee proposes to request for its depositors the same privilege which was originally accorded to the bondholders who placed their bonds with the Wallace committee.

Bill of Lading Complaints.

Complaints are now being heard that in many instances the validation certificates, which, by arrangement between the railroads and our bankers, are being attached to cotton bills of lading against which foreign drafts are drawn, are being made out in such shape that they are practically valueless for the purpose of the protection for which they were devised. It appears that one reason for this is that many buyers of exchange here in New York are paying little attention to the form in which these certificates are issued. Some of the larger buyers insist upon these certificates being in proper form, but other buyers are said, in many cases, to be allowing the plan to go by default, so to speak, so far as the bills they handle are concerned. Under the extension of time on the foreign demand for a guarantee of cotton bills until Dec. 31 next the bankers abroad are accepting American cotton bills under the terms which prevailed before the adoption by our bankers and the railroads of the validation certificate, and therefore there is little or no pressure from abroad to cause the New York buyers of exchange to see that the validation certificate plan is properly carried out.

⁂

One Point of Agreement.

At the hearing before the Inter-State Commerce Commission on the complaint lodged by commuters against the increase in rates which was put into effect this last Summer, officers of the Erie Railroad said that it would be better if all its commuters lived in New York City. The Erie's commuters, if report be true, thoroughly agree with the officers of the road on this point.

⁂

Loans by Standard Oil Company.

Large sums were reported yesterday to have been loaned in the money market the last few weeks by the Standard Oil Company, which is said to have placed as much as $50,000,000 in time and call loans. The lending of money by large industrial corporations which occasionally have cash balances much in excess of their requirements, is reported from time to time as a feature of the money market, and the Standard Oil Company is understood to be a frequent lender of funds in the New York money market, although its current loans in the Street may be much in excess of the usual amount. The United States Steel Corporation, which at times accumulates large amounts of cash, is also reported from time to time to be lending money in Wall Street. In such cases, usually only the highest classes of collateral is accepted, and this is said to be true of the loans which the Standard Oil Company has recently been making. The dividends paid by these huge industrial corporations call for the payment of very large sums at fixed dates, and as funds are accumulated for this purpose such companies are in a position to lend out large sums. Again, when business is lighter than normal, less working capital than is required in very busy times is needed, and this condition also serves to increase the cash balances of the industrial corporations.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The Consular and Trade Report will note the following foreign trade opportunities abroad. Further information regarding these may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., giving the number of item:

5,810. MEATS AND FOOD PRODUCTS.—An American Consul in Italy reports that a commission merchant in his district, with several branch houses, has requested him to furnish the names of some first-class American producers of the following articles: Pure lard, cottonseed oil, cottonseed meal for animal food, hams, meats, &c.

5,811. AMERICAN SHOES.—A request has been received at an American Consulate in an European country from a business man, who desires to be placed in touch with American manufacturers of shoes, with a view to securing the exclusive agency of such a line in that country.

5,812. CHAMOIS SKINS AND AXES.—An American Consular officer in Eastern Europe reports that a local business firm has requested to be placed in communication with manufacturers in the United States of chamois skins, axes, and small motors. It is thought that if American prices are reasonable such goods will be able to compete successfully. There is a brisk demand in this region for motors of all sizes. This firm desires direct connections.

5,813. KNOCKED DOWN OR PORTABLE HOUSES.—An American Consul in Spain has forwarded the name of a local firm dealing in general building supplies that desires catalogues and price lists from American manufacturers of knocked down or portable houses. Full details should be given in first letter, and prices quoted free on board, New York. Correspondence in Spanish only.

5,814. APPARATUS FOR COLLECTING DUST IN TEXTILE FACTORIES.—An American Consular officer in Russia reports that there is a demand for an apparatus in that country to be attached to combing machines in textile factories for collecting dust. At present dust in spinning mills finds an outlet through ventilators cut in the ceilings of the factories, but it is said that the Government will compel every factory to make different provisions for the consumption of dust. It is reported that a system has been demonstrated in the United States which would be acceptable to Russian mill owners. If the manufacturers of such an apparatus will address the Consular office in question they will be placed in touch with the interested persons.

5,815. IMITATION VEGETABLE IVORY BUTTONS.—An old-established firm in Germany advises an American Consular officer that imitation vegetable ivory buttons are being exported to Germany from the United States. As this firm is in the market to purchase buttons of this kind, it asks that direct quotations and samples be forwarded at once, the prices quoted to be free on board, New York. The firm furnishes references in the United States.

5,816. HARDWARE, TOOLS, AND OFFICE AND SCHOOL SUPPLIES.—An application has been made to an American Consular officer through a traveling salesman for the names of American manufacturers of hardware, lamps, tools, and office and school supplies. The inquirer is a European business man, and he is anxious to hear from American firms as soon as possible.

5,817. CARBON BLACK.—An American Consular officer in Germany reports that a business house in his district desires to get in touch with American exporters of carbon black, as it is of the opinion that it is in a position to handle this article in fair quantities.

5,818. TYPEWRITER AGENCY IN BELGIUM.—A business man in Belgium writes to the Bureau of Manufactures that he is at present representing an American typewriter concern in that country, but the machine is not giving satisfaction, and he desires to take the agency for some other manufacturer. He desires a strong, durable, and visible machine that is up to date.

5,819. WATERWORKS MACHINERY AND MATERIAL.—An American Consul in Latin America reports that a concession for waterworks to supply the city in which he is located has been granted to a local business man for a period of fifty years. The report states it is probable the concessionaire will be in the market at an early date for waterworks machinery and material. Further details can be obtained upon application to the Bureau of Manufactures.

WELLS FARGO IN MEXICO.

Contract Terms for Operating on National Railway Given in Report.

In the annual report of the National Railways of Mexico, issued yesterday, the terms are given of the contract under which Wells Fargo & Co. took over the express business on all the railway lines in Mexico which are controlled by the Mexican Government. The terms are more favorable to the railroad than those between many of the lines in the United States and the express companies which operate over them. To handle the Mexican business a new company with a capital of 1,000,000 pesos, ($500,000,) all of which was subscribed in cash by Wells Fargo & Co., was formed. Half of this stock, carrying 9 per cent. preferred dividends, was given outright to the National Railways, and in addition the express company agreed to pay 50 per cent. of its gross earnings to the railways.

All net earnings after the payment of 9 per cent. on the stock owned by the railway and 9 per cent. on the stock owned by Wells Fargo & Co. is to be equally divided between the National Railways and Wells Fargo & Co.

It appears from the report that under the terms of the merger of the Mexican Central and the National Railroad of Mexico all but about 2 per cent. of the stocks and bonds of these two companies have been exchanged for the securities of the new company. The steps taken by the company during the past year to establish an international market for its securities led to the listing of the first and second preferred stocks on the Exchanges in Basle, Geneva, and Zurich, of the prior lien bonds in Berlin and Frankfort, and of the second preferred stocks on the Bourse in Paris.

NORTHWESTERN ISSUE SOLD.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Take $15,000,000 General Mortgage at 4 Per Cent.

The Chicago & Northwestern has sold to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. $15,000,000 general mortgage 4 per cent. bonds. The previous issue, the last of which was put out in January, 1909, carried only 3½ per cent. interest. That this new issue under the same mortgage has been put out at 4 per cent. is a recognition of the fact that bond buyers are now demanding a larger return. The proceeds will be used in part to provide funds for maturing issues carrying interest at rates as high as 7 per cent. To the extent maturing bonds are replaced the road will effect a substantial saving in interest.

The last general mortgage 3½ per cent. bonds put out early in 1909 were placed at 94, and are now selling at about 88. The terms upon which the new 4 per cents will be sold have not yet been announced. It was said yesterday that they would be placed mostly in this country, and only relatively few of them abroad, for the reason that the principal market for American bonds in Europe is for issues yielding a higher return than that shown on bonds of this character.

NEW HEAD OF WELLS FARGO.

William Sproule, a Director and member of the Executive Committee of the American Smelting and Refining Company has been elected President of the Wells Fargo Company to succeed the late Dudley Evans. Mr. Sproule, it is understood, will be succeeded as head of the Traffic Department of the American Smelting Company by T. N. Schumacher, who is now in the Traffic Department of the Harriman lines.

Before he became associated with the smelting company Mr. Sproule had for twenty years been with the lines now included in the Harriman system and associated with Vice President Stubbs in charge of the traffic. The Wells Fargo Company, which so long was dominated by the late E. H. Harriman, has thus selected for its head a man trained in the Harriman school.

RECORD LAKE COAL TONNAGE

PITTSBURG, Nov 17.—The highest coal tonnage record ever made in Lake shipments will be broken this year. Officials of the coal companies in the Pittsburg district, which are heavy Lake shippers, estimate that the 1909 movement for Northwest ports will be exceeded by 3,000,000.

Nearly all the lake shipments from the mines were suspended yesterday, and the last of the big ore steamers which leave Cleveland and Ashtabula this week for Duluth and Superior will carry what coal remains to be delivered. Delayed tonnage on rail and mill contracts is being cleared up, and in a few days the normal winter trade will be experienced.

To the Holders of 4% FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS and CERTIFICATES OF DEPOSIT OF CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK REPRESENTING THESE BONDS:

The time for the deposit of bonds and certificates of deposit with the COLUMBIA TRUST COMPANY, 135 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, and with its agents, has been extended to NOVEMBER 21ST, 1910. No deposits will be received after that date except in the discretion of the Committee, and upon such terms as it may fix, and the Committee will thereafter consider itself at liberty to act only for its own depositors.

Following the refusal of the Wallace Committee to surrender deposited bonds and its announced determination to retain such bonds against the protests of the depositors, a test suit has been begun in the United States Court at New York against the Central Trust Company and the members of the Wallace Committee to compel the surrender of all such bonds, and an injunction applied for to prevent the Wallace Committee from assuming to further represent them. The Committee is advised that bondholders are entitled to withdraw their bonds and will proceed to enforce the surrender in all of the many cases in which these certificates have been deposited with them, as well as in the cases of future deposits.

As the result of a personal inspection of the properties made by the members of the Committee and of an exhaustive examination into their values, merits and strategic position, and of the claims of bondholders against the Wabash Road, the Pittsburg and Toledo Syndicate and upon the Supplemental Traffic and Trackage Agreement of 1904, the Committee is satisfied that your bonds are intrinsically worth largely in excess of the present market price (which is already more than 50% above the selling price of the bonds when this Committee was organized).

The Committee has every reason to believe that the results of the various suits now in progress, and that are about to be prosecuted by them to safeguard and enforce the long-neglected rights of bondholders, will add materially to the present value of the bonds.

Copies of the Deposit Agreement can be had at the office of the Columbia Trust Company, and of its agents, Colonial Trust Co. of Pittsburg, The Land Title and Trust Co. of Philadelphia, and The Connecticut Safe Deposit and Trust Co. of Hartford, Conn.

Bondholders and Certificate Holders will materially assist the work of the Committee by promptly depositing their bonds or Central Trust Company or Old Colony Trust Company certificates (as the case may be).

APPLICATION WILL BE MADE TO LIST THE CERTIFICATES OF THE COLUMBIA TRUST COMPANY ON THE NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE.

Dated November 18th, 1910.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.—A disposition to disregard actual facts, such as heavy stocks, both at home and abroad, with practically no export demand, and pay more attention to probabilities, was in evidence during yesterday's wheat market. The opening was firm, in response to Liverpool advices, which market paid but little attention to the more favorable Argentine news, and came much better than expected. While there were private reports stating that manipulation had been used in bringing about this result, the aggressiveness of the bulls discouraged selling, whether this was the cause or not. There was a good deal of profit taking at the outset, but on the decline good support was forthcoming, and at no time was the undertone weak. There were signs of congestion at different intervals, and fluctuations were erratic. Traders were cautious, however, about following the buying side, fearing liquidation, and the fact that cash demand at outside markets showed a slight slackening further discouraged buying. Receipts so far this week amount to 2,868,000 bushels at the principal primary points, against 3,361,000 last week and 3,349,000 a year ago. While receipts have shown a falling off, shipments have increased, and amount to 2,551,000, against 1,728,000 last week, and 2,144,000 last year. Northwest receipts, however, were expected to increase on any further advance. In fact, it was said that offerings were more liberal on the recent upturn. There was little attention, however, paid to bearish developments, with the trade inclined to follow the lead of Western bulls. Argentine advices received [illegible] were rather contradictory, with estimates of an exportable surplus of 120,000,000 bushels given by a private authority, while another stated that rains in the [illegible] had been insufficient. [illegible] relative to the Winter wheat [illegible], with many reports of [illegible], and the fact that Chicago [illegible] cash sales of No. 2 [illegible] on sentiment. [illegible] caused a fair [illegible] 36,000 bushels [illegible]. Cash No. [illegible] of Manitoba [illegible]; No. 2 red Winter [illegible] at 97c in elevator and at 97c free on board afloat for export; No. 2 hard, $1.02[illegible]; No. [illegible] Spring, $1.17[illegible], and No. 1 Northern Manitoba at $1.05[illegible].

The corn market was decidedly heavy during the day, although the strength in wheat had a sympathetic effect. Bearish sentiment predominating, and considerable pressure was noted. Weather conditions were good for movement, and it was said that consignments were liberal. Although [illegible] was caused on the part of sellers by reports that the country was disposed to market their poor corn first, in the afternoon, when Western cash markets were quoting prices from 2 to 3 cents lower, renewed selling pressure developed, with the close at the low of the session. Export business was quiet, and although Argentine exports promise to be in smaller volume this week, this was without important effect. Cash No. 2 corn quoted at 58¼c to arrive, cost, insurance, and freight, elevator, and 58½c free on board afloat, for export.

Oats were firmer at the outset, influenced by the strength in wheat, and on a good cash situation, but later in the day pressure developed, with considerable selling by the country. There was a [illegible] in December, which extended to other months. Cash standards quoted at 37½c; No. 2 white at 38½c, and No. 3 white at 37¼c.

The provision market was firmer during the day on slightly improved conditions in live hog circles. Receipts were somewhat lighter, and there was disposition shown by shorts to take profits. An estimate from Chicago placed stocks there of 6,000 barrels of pork, decrease since Nov. 1 of 2,800 barrels; lard, 29,000 tierces, decrease 1,000; ribs, 1,400,000 pounds, decrease 537,000 pounds.

COTTONSEED OIL.

There was a better undertone in the market during yesterday's session as a result of the recent decline. Many reports were received to the effect that a large speculative account which was being guaranteed [illegible] had been liquidated, and there was some buying on the theory that the technical position was improved. Demand, however, was readily filled, with sentiment very mixed. Interests that have hitherto been bullish on the situation have now taken to the bear side on the slightly easier crude situation in the South, predicting pressure from that source in the near future. The fact, however, that supplies are light, and the general statistical position of oil firm, combined with the price of this oil as compared with kindred products, discourages active selling. On the other hand, support is not good, with speculative interest at a minimum, and bearish sentiment prevailing in provision circles against values.

COTTON.

The cotton market at the outset promised to resume the upward movement of the previous day, but after a short display of strength it was evident that offerings were in excess of the demand. The higher range of values at the opening was the result of better Liverpool advices than anticipated, with private dispatches attributing the strength abroad as due to a continuation of a good trade demand. Manchester cabled that yarns were hardening, with a fair business doing, and that the cloth situation was also firm. Unsettled weather, with predictions of further precipitation, had but little effect, and on the whole there was a tendency to ignore bullish advices. Prominent spot interests were liberal sellers in the early trading, and, in fact, there was liquidation from this source and from other influential interests, whenever the market showed an inclination to rally. At one time prices were approximately 25 points below the high of the session, and this in spite of frequent support rendered by both local and Southern bulls. This indicated the predominance of [illegible] orders, and tended to discourage outside buying, as demand was easily filled. Week-end statistics promise to be of a bearish character with the exception of exports, which in all probability will be large and compare favorably. Crop estimates received continue at wide variance, and have but little effect on the [illegible]. There were further rumors in circulation relative to the probable showing by the Census on ginning, which were to the effect that the National Ginners' Association figures indicated an amount ginned since the season opened of over 8,900,000 bales. Toward the close of the day, however, there was covering of shorts, and some new buying on the theory that a bearish ginning report was already being discounted, and that the technical position was improved. Southern spot markets were unchanged to 1-16c decline, with New York spot cotton quiet, 10 points decline from the previous day. Middling uplands, 14.50c; middling Gulf, 14.75c.

The market closed very steady at 9 to 13 points decline.

COFFEE.

Coffee in most of the late positions sold above the 10 cent mark. First prices were 10 to 15 points above the previous close, but after a slight further advance the market reacted under profit taking and at the close was barely steady at a net advance of 5 to 15 points. Total sales were 107,250 bags. Havre showed a decided strength, but at the close declined ½ franc, with prices showing a net advance of ½@¾ franc. Hamburg closed at highest, representing an advance of 1½@1¾ pfennig. Reports from Brazil indicated that traders there have become excited over the advance, and Rio was quoted at 300 reis advance from Tuesday, while Santos was 350 reis higher. A private cable from Brazil said that reports regarding growing crops, both in Rio and Santos, continue unfavorable, with heavy falling off of fruit. Cost and freight offers from Brazil were irregular, with 4s quoted all the way from 12.80c to 13.50c. Spot coffee firmer. Rio No. 7 at 12½c, and Santos 4s at 13¾c. Contract prices follow:

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Another Important West Side Investment Purchase—Tenement House Property Finds Ready Buyers—New Factory for Newark Suburban Sales.

That the realty market is in a very healthy condition for good investment properties at reasonable valuation was again demonstrated yesterday by the purchase of a large Broadway frontage at Sixty-second Street by Charles E. Johnson from the United States Realty and Improvement Company. The property, which has been held at $800,000, is the southwest corner of Broadway and Sixty-second Street, 113.3 by 119.10 feet, on which are three large garage buildings, occupied by the White and Rambler Companies and the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company. F. & G. Pflomm were the brokers in the deal, and the price paid is said to be close to the asking price.

The buildings were erected about four years ago, and were the first to be put up north of Fifty-ninth Street for automobile purposes, being the pioneers in the northward expansion of the motor industry, which is now strung out all along Broadway as far as 110th Street. By disposing of this large plot, the United States Realty and Improvement Company has parted with the last of the many plots formerly held by the company in that district, among which were the Thoroughfare Building, bounded by Broadway, Eighth Avenue, Fifty-seventh and Fifty-eighth Streets, and the plots occupied by the Packard Motor Car Company at Sixty-first Street, the Panhard Company at Sixty-second Street, the Demarest and Peerless companies at Fifty-seventh Street, adjoining the Broadway Tabernacle; the Pasadena apartments at Sixty-first Street, and the Colonial Theatre, between Sixty-second and Sixty-third Streets.

Mr. Johnson, a few months ago, sold to a syndicate headed by Lee Shubert the Herald Square Theatre and adjoining properties, covering the entire block front on the west side of Broadway, from Thirty-fifth to Thirty-sixth Street.

Dr. Erdmann Buys Dwelling.

The estate of John D. Wing has sold to Dr. John F. Erdmann the four-story and basement brownstone dwelling 53 West Forty-seventh Street, on a plot 22 by 100.5.

This property has been in the Wing family for many years. A. C. & L. A. Marks negotiated the sale.

Tenements for Investment.

Another example of the growing demand for tenement house property for investment is shown in the purchase by Ennis & Sinnott yesterday of the five-story tenement 411 West Fifty-sixth Street. The property is located near Ninth Avenue, on a lot 25 by 100, and was sold by B. J. Cullen through George R. Read & Co. This is the first transfer of the parcel in over twenty-five years. Several other investment purchases have been made in this vicinity during the past few weeks.

Further south, on the west side, William J. Roome & Co. sold for Mrs. Anna A. O'Reilly the five-story double tenement 353 West Thirty-sixth Street, on a lot 25 by 100, to the Ferdinand Munch Brewery of Brooklyn. This property adjoins the property 355 and 357 West Thirty-sixth Street, recently sold and belonging to the same estate, and has not changed hands since Feb. 3, 1870.

Two East Side Deals.

A. M. Adler has purchased from the Lenehan estate 311 and 313 East Thirty-eighth Street, old four and five story buildings between First and Second Avenues. The property has a street frontage of 50 feet and a depth on the easterly side of 122.6 feet. At the rear there is a large gore 125 by 101, on which there are two brick stables. It is the intention of the buyer to improve the property.

Another east side sale was negotiated by the Frederick T. Barry Company, who sold for J. Westervelt Clark 145 East Forty-sixth Street, a three-story and basement dwelling on a lot 16.8 by 100.5.

Bronx Sales.

The vacant plot 75 by 100 on the westerly side of Minford Place, 173 feet south of Boston Road and one block from the 174th Street Subway station, has been purchased for immediate improvement by the Stability Realty Company. It is the intention of the company to erect two five-story apartment houses on the site.

Canman, Voorhees & Floyd have sold for Ella Van Namee the property 2,100 Boston Road, on plot 25 by 100, to Charles Weigle, an adjoining owner.

Brooklyn Sales.

Walter F. Clayton has sold 162 Argyle Road, between Albemarle and Beverley Roads, Prospect Park South, for Ralph H. Wilson to John T. Cohn, a three-story and attic detached frame cottage of attractive design. The same broker has also sold for Etta L. Wilson to Robert J. Johnson, a three-story detached frame cottage at 328 Argyle Road, between Cortelyou and Dorchester Roads, in the region adjacent to Prospect Park South.

The building at 435 Gates Avenue, formerly the headquarters of the Seventeenth Assembly District Republican Club, has been sold through the William P. Rae Company to Max Lang, formerly of the old Brooklyn furniture manufacturing firm of Lang & Norr.

Factory Sale in Newark.

A large factory plot has been purchased in Newark by the American Mono-Service Company from the Woodside Tanning Company upon which a two-story factory, 200 by 100 feet, costing about $50,000, is to be erected. The property, which was sold through Louis Schlesinger, is located on Verona Avenue and Oraton Street, having a frontage of over 400 feet and running to the Newark and Patterson branch of the Erie Railroad. The American Mono-Service Company will manufacture paper receptacles in which milk, cream, and all liquid and semi-liquid substances may be carried and shipped, being destroyed after one use. They have been used for about two years in England and other European countries.

Big Jersey City Sale.

Forty-seven lots in the Greenville section of Jersey City, where building operations have been very active, have been purchased by Thomas F. Gallagher and Thomas F. Regan from William G. Bumsted and George H. and Mary E. Coughlin. One of the lots is on the easterly side of the Boulevard, between Custer and Pamrapo Avenues, four on the westerly side of the Old Bergen Road between the same avenues and the other forty-two are on the southerly side of Custer Avenue, between the Old Bergen Road and the Boulevard.

Harry J. Max, a Jersey City builder, has sold to Morris Kadisky the three-story brick apartment house at 234 Van Horne Street, between Lafayette Street and Communipaw Avenue. It has a frontage of 34½ feet on Van Horne Street, a depth of 100 feet and contains six apartments.

Suburban Sales.

Cedarcroft, the country estate of John E. Roberts at Riverdale, N. J., consisting of seven acres, was sold to Frank Logee, the President of the Menville Hat Company, of this city. William Neuberg of Westwood, N. J., was the broker in the transaction.

C. Egger has sold to Mrs. Rosa Feuerlicht the mansion on the southeast corner of Gaston and Ocean Avenues, Arverne, L. I. The plot has a frontage of 190 feet. The purchaser is having plans drawn for extensive alterations and additions, upon completion of which she intends to occupy and conduct the premises as a hotel.

The Jamaica Estates have sold a plot, 100 by 120, on Doncaster Boulevard; a plot, 76 by 156, on Aberdeen Road; a plot, 80 by 158, on Avon Road.

Good Demand for Investment Property.

Despite the cry of a "poor market" that is heard in brokers' offices there is a good demand for investment properties at a reasonable figure. This is shown by the big sales of the past week, and is especially true of the upper west side, where several of these sales have taken place. Only yesterday Pierre M. Looker, President of the Monaton Realty Investing Corporation, owners of several large apartment houses on the upper east and west sides, in discussing the market, said he had been approached by a firm of reputable brokers, who made him an offer with a handsome profit for the Pavonazza, a six-story elevator apartment, at the southwest corner of Broadway and 152d Street, purchased by the Monaton Company less than six months ago. Mr. Looker quoted another incident of improved property values in that neighborhood, when he told of an offer made by building contractors for a plot a short distance from Broadway and 152d Street, $150,000 being offered, against $130,000, the price paid for the same tract less than two months ago.

Reorganize Realty Company.

There has been a change in the control of the Stability Realty Company, organized under the New York statutes, and it has passed to new interests. The corporation was formed about five years ago at a time when there was great activity in Washington Heights and Bronx property, and the company was active in these sections. The old Directors and officers have resigned. A new board has been elected and the following officers installed: M. Morgenthau, Jr., President; Louis Gutman, Vice President, and James Frank, Secretary and Treasurer.

Long Branch Landmark to Go.

The old Mansion House in Long Branch, which half a century ago was one of the popular hostelries of that resort, is about to be torn down. Title has just been taken to the property, which was recently sold by Samuel R. Rosoff. The land on which the old hotel stands was needed for the completion of the concrete and steel pier which Mr. Rosoff is building. The work is already well advanced, and the concrete flooring will be laid within a week.

Notes.

Charles Gulden is the buyer of 309 West Nineteenth Street, sold Wednesday by F. I. Vinton.

Plans have been filed with Building Supt. Miller for cutting off the front of the five-story private dwelling owned by Emily Winterburn, at 104 Riverside Drive, as ordered by the Superintendent of Parks. The new front when completed will be flat and of the same material as the old. Clinton & Russell, architects, estimate the cost at $3,000.
